Wind Hits 35 Miles
Rain Blinds Drivers
10 Hurt in Crashes

The Weather Bureau warned ships on Chesapeake Bay last night a moderate gale was progressing in that area, having narrowly missed the District.

The gale, which was expected to reach this city late yesterday, passed to the south of Snow Hill, Md., the Weather Bureau said.

As it was, northwest winds which reached more than 25 miles an hour drove small boats from the Potomac River and caused an exceptionally low tide here yesterday afternoon.

Tides Above Normal

At points along the Atlantic seaboard, north of Washington, the gale pushed tides above their normal high points. Portions of Wildwood, N. J., were covered by a foot of tidewater, though no serious damage was reported.

Forecast last night in the Washington area was continued rain this morning, with a possibility of clearing weather for the week-end. The temperature would not vary much, the Weather Bureau said. The low temperature yesterday was 48 degrees at noon.

Winds 35 Miles an Hour

Late yesterday afternoon the winds along the Maryland coast had gained a velocity of between 35 and 40 miles per hour, which was characterized by the Weather Bureau as being moderate gale velocity.

Rain swept the Washington streets most of the day. Sleet was reported from various sections of the city. However, the thermometer began ascending and reached 57 about 8 o'clock last night.

Slippery pavements and poor visibility in the rain were blamed for accidents in and near Washington in which at least ten persons were injured, several seriously.

Lieut. Legundo E. Vallejo, 38, of the Argentine navy, and his wife and sister were hurt when the Naval Academy automobile in which they were riding skidded off the road and into a tree on Defense highway, near Annapolis, Md. Lieut. Vallejo, Mrs. Marie Vallejo and Miss Maria N. Vallejo were treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Four persons were injured in a collision in the rain on Conduit road 1½ miles beyond the District line. Charlie Loo, 55, of 3436 Fourteenth street northwest, received cuts and bruises; Elinor Sollow, 18, of 418 Seventh street southwest, received a fractured left arm; Mildred Ricketts, 33, of Cabin John, Md., a fractured right knee, and Audrey Ricketss, 10, of Cabin John, head cuts.

Car Skids, Woman Injured

Three Winchester (Va.) women were borught to Georgetown Hospital with injuries received when their automobiles skidded from Lee highway in Arlington County. Lucille MacCullum, 35, was suffering from a possible fracture of a vertebra and brain concussion. Mary Heath, 60, and Beatrice O'Connor, 34, were treated for minor injuries.

From several towns along the Maryland coast came reports last night that the main Northeast storm had passed with moderately strong winds and driving rains in its wake.

Last night the Weather Bureau issued this caution to shipping: "Storm warnings are displayed on the Atlantic Coast between Sandy Hook and Delaware Breakwater, and over the north portion of Chesapeake Bay."

Prince Georges Haven For Numbers Bankers

County Shelters Washington Gamblers
Thousands Taken From Here Daily
Only Runners Operate in District

(This is the second in a series of articles resurveying the Washington numbers racket, six months after the passage of a new anti-lottery law.)

By Edward T. Folliard

Business men and city planners, watching fondly as this National Capital grows and blends itself with nearby Virginia and Maryland, like to describe the whole metropolitan area as "Greater Washington." To the Washington police, however, the District line is very much of a reality. There the policemen must halt, even though a short distance beyond lie the headquarters of all the king pins in Washington's numbers racket.

Prince Georges County, just over the line in Maryland, is the favorite operating base for the numbers bankers. Here, in an atmosphere of delightful tolerance, half a dozen of the leaders have their headquarters, into which pour thousands of dollars in bets gathered daily in Washington.

Why this historic county, named after the Danish consort of Queen Anne in 1695, should be such a paradise for Washington gamblers is a long story. Reformers have charged that graft is the answer. However, the rank and file of Prince Georges residents appear to be satisfied. An election campaign now is in progress, but gambling is not one of the issues. In 1935 the Prince Georges grand jury recommended that gambling be legalized.

No. 1 headquarters for numbers play in nearby Maryland is "Jimmy's Place," on Bladensburg road, a celebrated casino that once straddled the District line, but which now is entirely in Prince Georges County.

For a long time, numbers was a rather despised side-line with Jimmy's. Horse bets were the big producer of revenue—that and roulette, dice and blackjack. In the last few years, however, numbers play has come to the front in spectacular fashion, and now it takes an army of "writers" and "pick-up" men to gather in the daily haul in Washington.

Bad news for gamblers based in Washington invariably has been good news for Jimmy's Place. When the Washington police made their major drive against handbook joints here in 1936, Jimmy's business in horse bets climbed rapidly. And so it was, too, when Congress last spring passed a new antinumbers law for Washington.

Now, having long envied the immunity enjoyed by Jimmy's Place, the other numbers bankers have fol-

C.I.O., A.F.L. To Resist Cuts Under Wage Act

Andrews Gives Views
Hourly Pay Curtailed
Weekly Salaries Intact

Both the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor plan to resist reductions by employers of total weekly compensation to conform to a shortened work week under the fair labor standards act, it was learned yesterday.

Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the Labor Department Wage and Hour Division, on the contrary, has taken the view that the act does not forbid cuts in weekly pay checks and envelopes which are in keeping with reductions in hours.

The difference in viewpoint is over the meaning of a provision in section 18 of the wage-hour act stating that no feature of the law "shall justify any employer in reducing a wage paid by him which is in excess of the applicable minimum under this act."

The two national labor organizations contend that this means total compensation now regularly paid workers, even if they have been working 50 hours or more per week and as a result of the act are placed on a 44-hour basis. Andrews ven-

Blaze Sweeping Marseilles Kills 5 and Injures 30

Marseilles, France, Oct. 28, (U.P.).—Hundreds of firemen, troops and volunteers late tonight battled a fast-spreading fire that destroyed several blocks in the center of Marseilles, killing at least five persons and injuring 30.

Shortly before midnight authorities said the blaze was diminishing. Fanned by a high wind off the Mediterranean, the blaze destroyed the large Nouvelles Galleries Department store, burned out two big hotels and set fire to a third hotel, the Astoria, and a boys' school chapel.

G. O. P. Leader Sees Gain of 7 Senate Seats

Townsend Is Sanguine
Holds 13 Upsets Likely
Even Looks to New York

By Robert C. Albright.

A blithely optimistic Republican political prophet rode into town yesterday and predicted his party would pick up from 7 to 13 Senate seats in next month's elections in addition to holding all seats it now has.

He was Senator Townsend, of Delaware, chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, who previously had placed top gains at but six. Yesterday he added the highly doubtful States of California, Illinois and Oregon to his list, and saw "good possibilities" in Connecticut, Iowa and even Indiana and New York.

As the campaign swung down the final lap with stump speaking forays by top men in both parties, Democratic campaign committeemen publicly were conceding nothing, and privately were admitting the threat of only four or five Senate losses.

Roosevelt to Talk Friday

The trump Democratic oratorial card will be played at Hyde Park Friday night, when President Roosevelt takes the radio in behalf of the New York Democratic ticket and New Deal policies generally, while Cabinet members from Postmaster General Farley to Secretary Wallace extended the line of Democratic defense.

Republican headquarters launched an eleventh-hour barrage of radio programs. Dated up to the hilt are Republican Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Bridges, of New Hampshire, while former President Hoover and Alf M. Landon will continue in the field through the end of next week.

Not only toward the Senate, where the G. O. P. minority has reached an almost irreducible minimum, but toward gains in the House and State Governors' chairs was the Republican drive pointed. Democratic stump hopping was aimed at hold-

8 of 10 District Pedestrians Favor Arrest of 'Jaywalkers'

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Eight out of ten persons interviewed by The Post last night in a street-corner "public opinion" broadcast over radio station WJSV were whole heartedly in favor of pedestrian control laws for the District.

In anticipation of forthcoming public hearings on the pedestrian question—called by the Commissioners in an unprecedented step to curb the city's mounting traffic fatality rate—The Post and WJSV polled the "man in the street" at Thirteenth and E streets northwest.

S. F. Clark, of 4550 Connecticut avenue northwest, agreed to support whatever action is taken by the Commissioners to control pedestrians.

"I'm certainly in favor of pedestrian laws," he said. "I am sure such a plan would work in Washington. There is no reason why we shouldn't have laws to govern those afoot as well as those driving."

Bill O'Reilly, of 1101 I street northwest, was not so sure the proposed regulation would work. He said he came from Chicago and the plan was a failure there.

"People are going to cross streets where they have the best chance of doing it without getting hit—whether it is at a crosswalk or not," O'Reilly said.

He said a system of pedestrian "walk lights" might work, if all traffic was stopped to permit them to cross busy intersections safely.

So enthusiastic was Edward G. Hedman, a Navy Yard worker, that

U. S. Probes Nation-Wide Gambling

Follows Guffey Charge
Sees Serious Problem
Involves Race Wires
'Leads to Rackets'

By the United Press.

The Justice Department has begun an investigation of the multi-billion dollar gambling industry to determine if Federal laws are being violated, Attorney General Cummings notified Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, yesterday.

Guffey disclosed he had urged such an inquiry in a letter charging a serious situation has arisen in Pennsylvania and in the Nation in connection with the distributing of racetrack information "controlled by Moe Annenberg."

Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, is one of that State's Republican leaders and is actively opposing the Democratic senatorial and gubernatorial candidates in the November 8 elections.

In a letter to Guffey Cummings said:

"You also state that the existence and perpetuation of these practices have led to racketeering, bribery, corruption and forms of violence which cannot be handled by local authorities because they are Nationwide in character.

"The Justice Deparment has received other complaints of a similar nature and an investigation of them now is going forward. It will be contniued to determine whether or not any Federal law has been violated. The department will, of course, take such steps as the facts may justify."

Guffey Pleads Innocent

Philadelphia, Oct. 28 (AP).—United States Senator Guffey entered a plea of innocent today to a charge of civil libel brought against him by M. L. Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, who asks $500,000 damages.

The plea was filed by Attorney Francis Biddle, counsel for Guffey.

Protests Job Offers

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 28 (AP).—Ralph M. Bashore, State secretary of labor and industry, made public tonight a telegram he said he sent to Federal officials advising that Delaware County Republican leaders were promising ship workers jobs in return for support of Republican candidates.

Bashore said his wire, directed to Secretary of Labor Perkins, Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Warren J. Madden, chairman of the National Labor RFelations Board, and Senator Morris Sheppard, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, asked Federal authorities to investigate.

34,000 Pupils Out as Dayton Closes Schools

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 28 (AP).—A money shortage forced closing of the Dayton city schools today for an indefinite period while a delegation of officials and businessmen urged Gov. Martin L. Davey in Columbus to summon the Legislature to provide finances.

Thirty-four thousand students and 1,300 teachers and employes left the schools today, possibly not to return until after January 1.

"No comment until after the November 8 election," said Gov. Davey of the special session request.

Dr. David Sutton, finance director of the State department of education, said the Legislature might provide temporary relief by extending present taxes and appropriations from which the State school foundation receives revenues. Both candidates for Governor in the November election have pledged themselves to fund or pay the deficit

Japan's Premier Reforms Cabinet

Tokyo (Saturday), Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Japanese Premier Prince Konoye today reformed his cabinet.

He appointed Hachiro Arita foreign minister, succeeding Gen. K. Ugaki, who resigned early this month. The premier had held the portfolio until today.

Yoshiaki Hata was appointed overseas minister.

Arita's appointment was considered a victory for moderate elements in the cabinet who had been fighting demands of extremists for complete Japanese domination of all China.

Dies to Tell Of Resistance By New Deal

To Broadcast Monday

Hoover Also Cited
Story Called 'Sorry'

By Sidney Olson.

Chairman Dies of the House committee investigating un-American activities will make a nationally broadcast address Monday night "to tell the country how the Administration, from the White House down, has refused to help" his investigation, he said last night.

Dies told The Post he would read his correspondence with the President, with Attorney General Cummings, with WPA Administrator Hopkins and J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Whole Sorry Story"

Dies said:

"I am ready to reveal the whole sorry story of the manner in which this Administration has repeatedly refused to aid the Congressional investigation into communism and fascism.

"I intend to show how, after Congress had limited our appropriation to $25,000 on the proviso that attorneys and investigators be furnished us by Government departments, our every request for help has been turned down on small pretexts.

"I want to answer the lie that I am opposed to the New Deal by asking why, if I were so opposed, did I plead with the highest ranking New Dealers to staff my committee with attorneys, clerks and investigators from top to bottom?

Question Larger Than Party

"I am in favor of from 85 to 90 per cent of the New Deal. I do have some objections to certain of its methods.

"This question is larger than party, however.

"With editorials running nine to one against the President for his recent attack on the committee, and with my daily mail running into hundreds and hundreds of letters upholding my stand, I have no intention of backing down now.

"So I intend to show the public that, while the Administration did everything in its power to aid the investigation conducted by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee, our investigation was impeded and balked at every turn.

"We have made our impressive record without help from the Administration, with very little money and with a complete lack of cooperation from the vitally interested parties.

"I am taking my case to the public."

Roosevelt Suggests Interview

President Roosevelt, at his press conference yesterday, was told by reporters that Dies had asserted the President was misinformed when he criticized the committee as "flagrantly unfair" in permitting unrebutted

Woman Loses $490 And Chance to See Father in Germany

Mrs. Antonia de la Rosa walked the floor of her apartment at 247 Delaware avenue southwest yesterday and wondered whether she would ever again see her aged father, who lives in Germany.

Every week for more than six years Mrs. Rosa put away a little something from her husband's paycheck, looking toward the day when she could send for her father.

The other day, when she started to add to the $490 padded into an envelope concealed under the rug, she learned that it was no longer there. Last night detectives still were working on the case, but had no clews.

Tunney Reveals He Nearly Socked Count Ciano

Newark, N. J., Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Gene Tunney, former world's heavyweight champion, told the New Jersey Bankers Association today how close he came to giving Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano a "slug on the whiskers" in Budapest two years ago.

Tunney said Ciano was making a good-will tour and entered a hotel lobby, where Tunney was chatting. As Ciano's retinue marched in to the rattle of sabers, everyone snapped to attention except Tunney. The count glared at him, he said, "until I thought he was going to give me a box on the ear."

Had that happened, Tunney said, he would have "reached over and given him a slug on the whiskers."

Health Plan in Effect

The Farm Security Administration and four State medical associations are now negotiating for expansion of what already is the largest group health project in the country, The Post learned yesterday.

Beginning three years ago in four poverty-stricken Arkansas counties, the FSA has developed a program that today provides medical care at an average of $2 per month for 78,000 families in 20 States.

Fearful of an outcry against "socialized medicine," Farm Security officials quietly worked with State and county medical associations to build up the far-reaching service, successfully avoiding national publicity.

The temper of the recent American Medical Association convention in San Francisco, however, allayed anxiety over the project's reception

Divorcee Says Nazi Told Her Of U. S. Secrets

Mentioned D. C. Source
Witness Held 'Hostile' Recalls 'Good Time'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Characterized by Federal Judge John C. Knox as a "hostile witness," Mrs. Kate Moog Busch, silken-voiced Government witness, testified at the espionage trial of three defendants in Federal Court today that she did not know a match packet sent to her from Germany contained the key to a secret spy code and that she "wasn't interested in spies" when she dined, wined and danced with high espionage officials of the German war ministry.

With a vagueness of memory that drew repeated admonitions from Judge Knox, the witness finally recalled that one of her escorts on a gay whirl through Berlin night life last year told her he "got information from someone in Washington, D. C." on United States Naval ships under construction.

Names Indicted German

She said her escort was Capt.-Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, a German intelligence officer, who was indicted with 17 others for espionage in this country.

Mrs. Busch—or Miss Moog, as she preferred to call herself after her divorce decree became final today—said she did not know the name of the "someone" in the National Capital who was transmitting American defense secrets to the Third Reich.

Wasn't Interested in Spies

Pressed for details about the conversation at a luncheon she attended with German espionage officials, Miss Moog burst out:

"I was there to dance and have a good time. I wasn't interested in spies. Get that straight."

Miss Moog also testified she heard Capt.-Lieut. Pfeiffer say he had business concerning military airplanes with a man named Otto Voss.

Otto Herrmann Voss, former mechanic at the Seversky Aircraft Corporation plant in Farmingdale, Long Island, is one of the defendants on trial. The others are Johanna Hofmann and Erich Glaser. Pfeiffer is one of 14 fugitive defendants in the case.

Nazis Herding Polish Jews Into Camps

55,000 Await Fate
May Be Deported
Parleys in Progress

By the United Press.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—Thousands of Polish Jews, routed from their homes throughout Germany in swift police raids for deportation to Poland, were herded in concentration centers tonight as the Warsaw and Berlin governments sought a last-minute agreement regarding their disposition.

The Polish government announced an agreement had been reached, only a few hours before the deadline for the mass "dumping" of the Polish Jews on the other side of the frontier, and the deportations had been halted.

German authorities asserted, however, the Warsaw announcement was "premature," and later the Warsaw foreign office admitted this was so.

Reports from the Polish side early Saturday indicated more than 1,100 of the deportees had reached Polish soil at various points but were being detained near the frontier pending further diplomatic negotiations.

In Vienna, where hundreds of the Polish Jews have been arrested, it was reported they might be transported across Czechoslovakia to Poland in sealed trains.

Rumania Made A Fascist State Under King Carol

Bucharest (Saturday), Oct. 29 (U.P.).—The government of King Carol II today renounced the last remnants of a liberal regime and proclaimed a complete totalitarian state, including the one-party system and corporate administration.

The announcement, made by Minister of Justice Victor Iamandi, brought Rumania into line with Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy and carried a step forward the royal dictatorship of Carol which was set up last February.

D. C. Hammer-Slayer of Wife Is Doomed to Chair by Jury

Death for Edward B. Bishop, 35-year-old mechanic, was decreed yesterday by six men and six women who found him guilty of murdering his pretty, 27-year-old estranged wife, Janie, last July 22.

Neatly dressed in a blue serge suit, the slender defendant stood stiffly and silently before Justice Adkins and heard the jury reject his story that remembered nothing of beating in his wife's head while horrified spectators rushed to save her.

The woman was killed as she fled after meeting her husband in Pension Park. Several witnesses said that when they stopped the attack Bishop told them he had warned his wife about meeting another man.

She ran across the park screaming when she met her husband late in the evening. They had quarreled in a restaurant shortly before. He took a hammer from his belt and chased her, witnesses said.

"That's the way to fix them," Bishop was quoted as saying when several men seized him and dragged him from where his wife's body lay on the grass.

Bishop told the jury he had been drinking and then "I saw about a million lights." The next thing he knew, he said, was that he came to and found several men beating him. He declared his head was sore for several days.

Assistant District Attorney Heflin urged the jury to convict Bishop of first degree murder, for which a sentence of death in the electric chair is mandatory.

Defense Attorneys Ross O'Donoghue and John E. Powell have ten days in which to move for a new trial.

France Shifting

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 28.—The foreign affairs committee of the Radical-Socialist Party Congress, meeting in Marseilles, tonight called for virtual abandonment of France's system of alliances in favor of a four-power alignment with Great Britain, Germany and Italy.

The foreign affairs resolutions committee overrode the objections of former Premier Edouard Herriot, staunch supporter of France's military alliance with Soviet Russia, who walked out on the committee during its discussions.

The recommendations of the committee conform with a speech which Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet will make before the congress tomorrow, announcing a shift away from France's League of Nations ideology in favor of "big four" collaboration.

League Held Futile

The resolution said:

"The 35th Congress regrets that the result of a series of faults for which neither the party nor its men are responsible, the League of Nations no longer is in a condition to assure security within respect of law to all people."

The foreign affairs committee added it was hoped the four-power collaboration would lead to an international conference where "according to President Roosevelt's wish," means of remedying the world's economic disorder will be examined.

Bonnet was to have addressed the Congress today but his speech was postponed due to a fire which swept the center of Marseilles. The foreign minister, it was learned, will formally proclaim the government's abandonment of its 20-year policy of protective security guaranteed by the League. Moscow, the Little Entente and Poland will be left to shift for themselves.

Will Please Hitler

Bonnet's speech, which is certain to please Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini, may serve as the opening wedge for abandonment of the Franco-Soviet military alliance.

Premier Daladier paved the way for such a renunciation yesterday when, in the keynote speech to his party's congress, he condemned the Communists for "sabotaging" his efforts and, in effect, outlawed them from the government majority.

The return to Paris today of Andre Francois-Poncet, new ambassador to Italy, from his seven years of service in Berlin coincided with newspaper reports he was bearing important reports of his farewell talks with Hitler. He will confer Monday with Bonnet.

"No War" Pact Seen

Despite the foreign office's denial of any "no war" agreement between Germany and France, the newspaper L'Intransigeant said that such an accord soon would be reached and would provide:

The two powers will outlaw war between themselves for ten years.

During the ten-year period they will collaborate to create new atmosphere of reciprocal confirdence.

Paris and Berlin will sign a press agreement, binding bitter attacks on each other in newspapers.

The two powers will proclaim a

Two Billions To Be Spent By Utilities

U. S. Aids in Program 14 Big Concerns Join To Strengthen Defense

By the Associated Press.

Amid a display of friendliness which left the Capital guessing, the Roosevelt Administration and 14 large utilities announced yesterday a far-reaching program to strengthen national defense and simulate industry by expanding private power facilities.

Utility executives pledged themselves to place immediate orders for equipment to add some 1,330,000 horsepower to existing generating capacity. They estimated that the "first stage" alone of the expansion program would mean an outlay of $2,000,000,000 in the next two years. This, they said, would double the recent annual rate of capital expenditures by the industry.

The Government's share in the undertaking—the first concrete development from President Roosevelt's restudy of national defense needs—will be to extend aid where needed in refinancing securities through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Some Men Cynical

Whether this display of co-operation might lead to a truce in the fierce struggle which the Administration and some utilities have waged in the courts, in Congress and elsewhere was not stated. Questions whether the development indicated better feeling was waved aside by Floyd L. Carlisle, utilities leader, who participated in today's announcement.

Some utility men, cautioning against use of their names for publication, passed the word that they were cynical and doubted the program would prove to be as far-reaching as pictured.

An Administration power survey group, at work since September, stressed that the primary objective was to increase power facilities of manufacturing centers which in wartime would be called on for a heavy output of munitions.

Johnson Confident

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War and chairman of the Administration survey group, emphasized that the new construction represented merely the first stage of a vaster expansion program and expressed confidence other utilities would co-operate.

Carlisle estimated this would involve an immediate expenditure of $117,003,000, followed later by some $240,000,000 for substations, transmission lines and other facilities. Other experts figured that 1,000,000 kilowatts was approximately 1,333,000 horsepower.

The following were listed as the principal areas affected:

Baltimore-Washington, Birmingham, Boston, Bridgeport, Buffalo-Niagara Falls, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Rochester, St. Louis and Schenectady.

SEC, Exchange Move to Avert Broker Failures

By the Associated Press.

Methods of stiffening the New York Stock Exchange's supervision over its members' financial affairs will be discussed, officials said yesterday, at an important conference this week-end between William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities Commission, and William McC. Martin, president of the exchange.

The two men will cover subjects embraced in the SEC's report on the failure of Richard Whitney, former exchange president, who went to jail for misappropriation of customers' securities.

President Roosevelt yesterday termed the SEC's report a horrifying document.

In commission circles, it was said the week-end conference would canvass means of improving exchange mechanism to prevent other failures similar to that of Whitney.

Recommendations being drafted are understood to include the following:

Limitation of outside financial activities of exchange members and of member firms; an independent checkup of members' accounts; publication of financial condition of member firms; separation of brokerage capital from funds available for underwriting of securities, and more stringent supervision of margin and nonmargin firms.

10 of 27 Heroes Getting Medals Sacrificed Lives

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission announced medal awards today to 27 heroes for saving, or trying to save, the lives of others. Ten of those honored, including a 15-year-old school-girl, lost their lives.

To two in the group went silver medals, to 25 bronze. The winners of silver ones were Thomas W. Galbreath, 27, South Dakota farmer, who died trying to save two little girls from a burning house at Wall, S. D., and to Christopher H. Thomason, 32, a Pueblo, Colo, laborer, for trying to save two girls from a flaming home in Pikeview, Colo.

The school girl was Margie Jean Snyder, of Palmer, Alaska, who was burned to death, but saved three children.

Soviet Won't Fight Japanese, New Chinese Envoy Declares

War to Last Indefinitely, Says Dr. Hu Shih Praises America's Foreign Policy in East Pumarejo and Elizalde Also Are Received

Although he expressed scant hope of Russia's openly uniting with China against Japanese aggression, Ambassador Hu Shih last night predicted his people will continue their resistance "for an indefinite time to come until we are assured of a just and honorable peace."

At a press conference, held a few hours after he had presented his credentials to President Roosevelt, the new Chinese Ambassador frankly discussed such delicate questions as Anglo-German mediation, national morale and Soviet intervention.

Received by the President yesterday, besides Dr. Hu, were Senor Don Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, submitting his letters of credence as Colombian Ambassador, and Joaquin Miguel Elizalde, new resident commissioner of the Philippines.

Seeks Financial Aid

Supplementing his formal remarks at the White House, in which he warmly praised this country's foreign policy, Dr. Hu told a group of newspapermen assembled at his residence that China continues to look to friendly powers for financial assistance.

But as for the Soviet's lending military aid:

"The Stalin regime desires to avoid war," he declared. "I do not think Russia care sto risk a conflict with Japan, what with Germany theratening in Europe and the existence of internal strife as evidenced by the purges which are reported."

He added that the Soviets, nevertheless, have been generous in supplying munitions to the Chinese defenders, emphasizing that this assistance has been given with no strings attached.

No Ties to Communism

"There is no condition," he explained, "that our central government shall take on a political affinity with communism."

He voiced the belief that the war will end when Japan has become exhausted in finances or manpower, or both.

"I admit," he said with a grin, "this is wishful thinking on my part."

The fall of Canton and Hankow has not destroyed Chinese morale, despite reports to the contrary, Dr. Hu said. Reminded of rumors that England and Germany may get together to effect an armistice, he gave them little credence and pointed out that the rumors originated in Berlin, not China.

In a mimeographed statement, distributed before he subjected himself to questioning, the Ambassador said Canton's fall was due to two causes.

"First, a large number of Kwangtung troops having been called out to fight at Shanghai, on the Lunghai Railway and in the Yangtse River fronts, there were not enough troops left for distribution over a long coast against a concentrated attack by the highly mechanized enemy forces.

"In the second place, there was undoubtedly some oversight and negligence on the part of local commanders who had banked on the improbability of Japan to invade South China at a time when she was busily engaged in a difficult war on the Yangtse.

Denies Sellout

"I am therefore grieved to find some newspaper correspondents and editors hastily jumping to the conclusion that the loss of Canton was due to the 'sellout' of local leaders.

"The defense of Hankow and its sister cities was naturally affected by the sudden loss of Canton. All reports agree that the evacuation of the Wuhan cities (Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang) was strategic and was carried out in orderly manner. Our main forces remain intact, and are now withdrawn to a new line of defense based on the Canton-Hankow Railway, stretching from Yochow to the northern part of Kwangtung."

Dr. Hu said his personal view that China will fight on until a just peace is effected is confirmed by latest information from home.

"Leaders of the provinces of Hunan, Szechuen and Yunnan have pledged to the central government their loyal support for continued resistance to the invader," he said.

Discount Peace Talk

"All rumors of peace talks can be easily discounted simply because a just peace is impossible at the present moment and my government cannot afford to accept a peace dictated by the victorious aggressor."

At the White House, President Roosevelt told the Ambassador he will find "the officials of this Government ready to co-operate heartily" in his endeavor to strengthen ties of friendship and cultural relationship between the two countries.

"Your generous comments in regard to the foreign policy of the United States are very gratifying to me," said the Chief Executive, "and I wish to assure you that the Government of the United States will continue its advocacy of the preservation and advancement of the principles of international law and of the orderly processes of international relations which have evolved with and have in turn promoted the development of civilization."

"Good Neighbor" Lauded

Ambassador Lopez Pumarejo, elevated from the rank of Minister which he has held in Washington since April, 1935, lauded the "good neighbor" policy with South America and the system of reciprocal trade agreements launched early in the Roosevelt Administration.

With the presentation to President Roosevelt of the credentials of Joaquin Miguel Elizalde, new resident commissioner of the Philippines yesterday, the relations between the islands and this country entered upon a new phase.

Elizalde, scion of one of the oldest and wealthiest families of the islands, comes to Washington at a time when the permanent trade relationship between the two countries is demanding attention. The islands become independent in 1946. In 1941 a new trade arrangement goes into effect by which the Philippines must pay 5 per cent of the tariff in effect with foreign countries on all goods exported to this country. This graduates 5 per cent annually until 1946, when a 100 per cent tariff is scheduled to go into effect.

This has been declared by President Roosevelt to be too severe and a committee appointed by him and composed of both American and Philippine representatives has been making a re-examination of the whole subject.

Elizalde, a 43-year-old Spanish don, has a wide acquaintanceship in American and European business and sporting circles. With his three brothers he has repeatedly beaten crack United States Army polo teams.

His grandfather set up the first trading post in the Philippines in 1854. From that the Elizalde interests have grown into an industrial empire employing 10,000 persons.

Former Legislator Arrested in N. Y. Bail Bond Racket

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Former State Assemblyman Jacob P. Nathanson, 37, was arrested today and charged with grand larceny, subornation of perjury and forgery in connection with a Brooklyn bail bond racket.

Nathanson was quoted by police as saying:

"If I'm indicted, I'll blow the lid off this bail bond business."

Nathan appeared before Supreme Court Justice Nova last July and asked him to accept a $15,000 bond for a client, awaiting sentence as a violator of the antigun law.

A signature on the bond was subsequently found to have been forged. Nathanson was accused of having helped perpetrate the forgery.

Jack Branch Honored

Jack L. Branch, son of Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, was among four Emory University students nominated yesterday as candidates for 1939-40 Rhodes Scholarships. He will face the Georgia State examining committee in December.

All Donors To Campaigns To Be Queried

Sheppard Group Acts To Spot U. S. Workers 500 Replies Already

A check on all contributions to Senatorial campaign funds was announced yesterday by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee in an effort to spot known Federal employes who have donated funds.

Chairman Sheppard said more than 5,000 letters had been sent to contributors and 500 replies already received. He said a small percentage of replies in hand acknowledged that donors were Federal employes.

The check followed a statement by the committee last week that evidence "seems to indicate" that approximately 50 persons known to be Federal employes had contributed to the campaign of Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio. The committee withheld action in the Bulkley case pending "further investigation."

All Donors Queried

Queries now are going out to all listed contributors in every state where there is a Senatorial race. The committee takes the stand that it is a violation of the criminal code for a Federal worker to make such a contribution, and likewise a violation for a candidate or his manager to accept one.

Results of the check will be laid before the full committee at meetings November 2 and 3 "for whatever action it decides to take."

Meantime, Lyle Jackson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, charged Democratic campaign fund contributions were being "brazenly exacted" from Federal employes, and asked the Sheppard committee to investigate "this political activity in this campaign in this State."

Associated Press dispatches from Lincoln, Nebr., quoted Jackson as saying the contributions are being collected in support of the Democratic candidate for Governor. There is no Senatorial contest in Nebraska.

Acting Works Progress Administrator Aubrey Williams last night promised investigation of charges by Representative O'Connor of political coercion of WPA workers in his district.

O'Connor had asked Works Progress Administrator Hopkins to make a personal investigation. Williams' statement, made in the absence of Hopkins on a Western tour, said the WPA field representative in charge of the New York region had been asked to see O'Connor, who was assured "careful and thorough investigation of all evidence presented."

Bennett Makes Charges

A demand for investigation by Hopkins of charges that Representative Hook, of Mitchigan, was using WPA workers in furtherance of his campaign was reported by the Associated Press from Ontonagon, Mich. John B. Bennett, Hook's Republican opponent, made the charges in a wire to Hopkins.

Plot Revealed To Ship Plane Parts to Spain

Hull Tells of Attempt Agent Posed as Turk Worked Via Canada

By the United Press.

Secretary of State Hull last night disclosed the Department of Justice is investigating a plot by a Spanish Loyalist agent, posing as a Turkish government agent to obtain American airplane parts for use in the Spanish civil war.

Hull said the occurrence was one of two attempts in the last year by Spanish agents to circumvent the neutrality act and the embargo on arms shipments to Spain. In the second case the Spanish agent posed as a Greek.

The disclosure was made by Hull in refuting charges that Joseph Green, of the War Munitions Board, had refused to issue export licenses in the two instances because the planes "might be going to the Spanish Loyalists."

Shipped Via Canada

Hull said 50 pursuit planes were ordered from a Canadian company by an agent of the Spanish government in Paris who furnished documents "purporting to show that the planes had been purchased by the Turkish government."

Subsequently the State Department issued licenses to several American companies authorizing exportation of aircraft engines and parts to Canada with the understanding that they were to be assembled in Canada and that the assembled planes would remain in that country, Hull said.

When it was discovered that the parts had been used to fill the Spanish agent's order, the export licenses were revoked, but not before 40 plans had been trans-shipped from Canada to Spain.

In a second case, Hull said that several efforts were made to obtain export licenses for 22 Bellanca planes, ostensibly to Greece. He said that the Greek government, however, refused to authorize importation of the planes on grounds they were destined for Spain. As a result, he added, no export licenses were issued.

Returning Fighters Barred

By the Associated Press.

Immigration Commissioner James L. Houghteling refused yesterday to drop deportation proceedings against 15 aliens now held at Ellis Island after trying to return to the United States from service in the Spanish war.

He told a petitioning delegation from New York that the law excluding aliens arriving without proper visas must be applied and the men would not be allowed to enter.

All are fromer residents of the United States who went to Spain to fight without taking out necessary re-entry papers.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

UNDERSTANDABLY, a feeling akin to fright has beset WPA project workers in the District following the pronouncement that with the up-swing of the employment curve in private industry a consequent down-swing in the relief workers may be anticipated.

As of last Monday (the latest available figures) the number of relief workers who might be affected by reduction in the District is 13,771.

Particularly disturbed are the men and women on the Federal Writers' Project. They sent a committee to see Director G. Alsberg and later quoted him as saying that the writers need fear no termination or purge list. No dismissals have been planned, and none will occur unless heavy, unexpected pressure is brought by the WPA administration, the director was quoted.

To us, a WPA spokesman said that no purge lists have been prepared, but obviously, if, as and when the reduction comes, the writers would take proportionate cut. But it is all indeterminate at the moment.

It was further said that the project workers will realize that there is nothing more fundamentally unstable than a project job. An hour later a WPA worker reiterated this in these words:

"The instability is the chief bugaboo, and the reason we all want to get off the projects as soon as possible. Few of us want to camp on a spot where good work brings no security at all. In private industry, cuts and reductions come, but the workers have advance warning and the recourse to Federal projects if they can't locate in private industry. When you're kicked from the projects you have the feeling of dissolving into thin air. You can't always get in private industry, despite the employment up-swings, we know.

"There is always a feeling of apprehension. We do good work, please the supervisors; but suddenly a cog slips high up in that unseen thing called the Government, and cut we go. But we don't want to go until something is definitely in sight elsewhere."

HAIL TO the Redskins: They not only give Washington a winning team, but come through, if need be, on behalf of the Postoffice Department. This column this week noted how one of its clients sent two football tickets by special delivery mail to a friend in Baltimore, the tickets being good for the Sunday Redskin game in Washington. The letter, mailed on Friday afternoon, wasn't delivered until Monday morning. The Postoffice Department said claim for refund could be made only on registered mail. But the Redskins, seeing our note, mailed our client two tickets to correct the matter.

Note to the Wage-Hour Press Section: A newsman complains to us that you are making newsmen put their questions to the legal section in writing, then sending the questions down the line of the Press Section to the legal section, which, it is contended, kills a lot of time. They would like to go directly to the source of information, it was said, as this procedure is more satisfactory all the way around. Otherwise, you're doing swell, the newsman said.

NOTES: Miss Olive M. Riddleberger, a Census Bureau employe for 43 years, will be retired Tuesday, as will James Griffin, of Coast and Geodetic Survey, whose service goes back 42 years. Aristide Fanti, of Bureau of Standards, leaves on the same date with a record of 34 years . . . Tonight—E. Claude Babcock's Federal Personnel Association dances at the Washington Hotel; the Treasury Department Recreation Association dances at the Wardman Park. On the Treasury committee are Alice B. Coleman, Miss Florence McGuire, Jane Cullen, Geraldine Westenhaver, Pearl L. Clarence, W. C. Ilgenfritz and W. T. Ritenour. The proceeds go to welfare work.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Inquiry Begun on Pension List Leak Gov. LaFollette Accused in Scandal

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis.—Harry McLogan, Milwaukee, chairman of the State pension department, today launched a personal investigation of the method by which Progressive obtained a list of Wisconsin old age pensioners, alleged by political opponents to have been circularized by Gov. La Follette for campaign purposes.

LA FOLLETTE

McLogan, also a member of the State industrial commission, is Democratic candidate for district attorney of Milwaukee County.

McLogan said he was acting on orders of officials of the Federal Social Security Board to determine whether any member of the pension department furnished a confidential list of pensioners to the Governor.

Milwaukee, Harry Bolens, Democratic candidate for Governor, asked the Federal prosecutor to take "legal proceedings" against Gov. La Follette on the ground of "misuse of the mails" and against those he said had coerced WPA workers to "vote the Progressive ticket."

Bolens said U. S. Attorney B. J. Hasting told him he would present the matter to the grand jury.

The jury convenes November 9.

"I request that you take legal proceedings against Gov. La Follette and others, for misuse of the United States mails in the recent pension scandal, which I have exposed," Bolens stated, adding:

"I believe that if it was illegal for the Governor to have obtained the list of pensioners, the use of mails constituted a conspiracy against the United States.

Newark, N. J.—Senator Lodge (Republican), declined tonight to discuss incorporation of an association with an avowed purpose of urging his "nomination and election" as President of the United States.

"I am very lucky," Lodge said, "to be in the Senate. I am giving up and intend to give up all my time to be a good Senator. It's a full-time job."

A certificate of incorporation of the Henry Cabot Lodge Association was filed yesterday with the Hudson County clerk at Jersey City. David J. Allen, Hudson County Republican, and four others were listed as trustees.

The Republican National Committee has collected nearly half a million dollars in the last two months, Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed reported yesterday.

The report, filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives, was for the period from September 1 to October 27. In that time, Goodspeed said, the committee has received $419,803 from more than 11,000 persons and spent $469,313.

The Democratic senatorial campaign committee reported contributions since September 10 of $28,750 and expenditures of $24,187.

The American Liberty League, which, its officials said, had confined itself in recent months to research and "keeping abreast of legislation and the governmental setup," reported receipts and loans of $61,050 since January 1, and expenditures of $57,983.

Richberg Asks Revision of Wagner Act

Cites Need to President Guest at White House Hanes Named to Post

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt heard from Donald R. Richberg yesterday that the Wagner labor act should be revamped to end "industrial warfare."

The former NRA administrator and one-time attorney for railway unions, was Roosevelt's luncheon guest. He said they discussed operation of the labor law and Richberg suggested that it should give "security and certainty" to industrial management.

"I am very sympathetic with the Wagner act," Richberg declared, "but I think it should be revised so as to bring in more mediation and co-operation. We can't have any permanent improvement unless we can get the machinery to iron out industrial conflicts without continual warfare."

He said the railway labor act seemed the ideal way to end industrial strife.

To File Report Today

Mr. Roosevelt had disclosed earlier that the board he appointed under this act September 27, in an effort to avert a threatened strike of 1,000,000 rail workers, would file its report with him at 12:30 p. m. today.

There have been many suggestions for revision of the Wagner act. Mr. Roosevelt has said he would call a conference of business, labor and Government representatives to study possible changes.

The Chief Executive said at his press conference that he had received a great many letters regarding the situation in Palestine. The President suggested recently that Palestine should be kept open as an unrestricted, international home for the Jews.

Hanes Appointed

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed that John W. Hanes had been appointed Undersecretary of the Treasury to succeed Roswell Magill, who resigned recently.

The White House announced that the President's scheduled address from Hyde Park, N. Y., next Friday would be made at 7:30 p. m., instead of 9:30, as previously planned. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to discuss the New York State political situation.

Dr. Scandiffio, Leaving Jury, Praises GHA

Lauds Its Facilities
His Expulsion Cited
Miss Stuart Testifies

Group practice gives the patient "far superior" treatment and saves him time and money, Dr. Mario Scandiffio—storm center of the co-operative medicine fight here—asserted yesterday after he testified before the xtraordinary grand jury which th Government would ask to indict the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society for conspiracy.

Dr. Scandiffio was understood to have told how he was warned to quit Group Health Association, Inc., or face professional reprisals. A staunch advocate of modern streamlined health methods, the young child specialist stuck to his guns. He was expelled from the District society. His appela is pending before the association.

U. S. Cites His Case

The Scandiffio expulsion is considered a cornerstone of the Government's evidence that the establish physicians' organizations unlawfully banded together in restraint of trade when they opened their publicity and legal battle against G. H. A. The Sherman anti-trust act, which the Department of Justice claims was violated, denounces conspiracies.

Should the jury hold the physicians' activity to be a conspiracy, the expulsion would be regarded as indisputably an overt act to carry it out.

Dr. Scandiffio was the fourteenth witness to appear. After him yesterday Miss Mary Frances Stuart, G. H. A. laboratory technician, testified. Both declined to tell what they said in the secret hearing.

Supervises Vital Tests

Miss Stuart's testimony was understood to have concerned matters not hitherto mentioned in connection with the alleged conspiracy and the Department of Justice prosecutors would not say why she was called. Under her supervision are vital clinical tests in the G. H. A. laboratory.

"From my experience in private practice and with group health activity," Dr. Scandiffio said, "I can say that the type of practice carried on in the group is far superior to the type of work done in private practice, for the reason that we have every facility at our fingertips.

"In private practice, a patient often comes in to his physician and needs some special laboratory work, which the physician isn't equipped to do. Or he might need constultation in some special field, such as surgery, or ear, nose and throat work. In private practice that means the patient must be sent out to a specialist.

Clinic Has Facilities

"If the patient knows of no one, the doctor must use up time contacting a specialist, and there is an interval of lost time, as well as additional expense to the patient. Then the patient must go to the laboratory, again a lost interval and more expense.

"Here at the G. H. A. Clinic we have all the facilities at our fingertips, and the same results are accomplished in one or two trips. This is one of the greatest advantages of group practice. We obtain consultation within a few moments, with no waste of time, and there is closer contact between the consulting physicians."

Dr. Scandiffio said the criticism that G. H. A.'s service was inadequate must have been based on misunderstanding of the resources and methods of the organization.

Dr. Scandiffio spent nearly three hours with the grand jury. Miss Stuart appeared for half an hour. The jury then spent yesterday afternoon studying files which have been placed before them.

The hearing will open its third week Monday.

Dapper Thug Robs Market of $250, Spurning Coins

A well-dressed, middle-aged man with a mustache, last night stepped into the Brookville Market, 6427 Brookville road, threatened the manager and three employes with a revolver and escaped with $250 in currency.

Isadore Suser, manager, told police the bandit shouted, "Don't move unless you want a bullet in the stomach." The man disdained small change as he emptied the cash register, Suser said, walked over to a drawer and extracted a roll of bills he apparently had seen stowed away while he watched from outside.

Police believed the man might be the same one who stole $180 Wednesday night from the Alban Towers Drug store, 2844 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Razing Will Begin In 2 Weeks for Municipal Center

Within two weeks the District will begin tearing down old buildings to make way for the $5,700,000 municipal center.

The Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract to the Hechinger Engineering Corporation to do the razing, which will include all buildings along Indiana avenue and John Marshall place, north of C street. For the privilege of razing the old buildings, the company will pay the District $1,659.

Meanwhile the District space committee was at work to find new quarters for agencies which will have to vacate. The public employment center has already moved to a new office. The lot used by the Police Department to store impounded cars will be lost.

Jailed Father Cries 'Ransom' in Custody Fight Over Son, Hidden 'Somewhere in Md.'

'My Boy Instead of Cash'
He Wants Conciliation
She 'Thinks It Over'

Whether a 4½-year-old child hidden from its mother "somewhere in Maryland" shall have two parents or one—and which one—will be unknown until Mrs. Norella Albritton, 1038 Hudson street, Arlington, Va., has had time to "think it over" in regard to her feelings for the child's father.

Until she makes up her mind, Zelner Albritton, 28, will continue to be at home in the District Jail—where he was lodged when he refused to surrender the boy after a court order.

At the courthouse yesterday, the young couple discussed the pros and cons of their relationship and also the future of their only child.

It was the father's idea that Mrs. Albritton should come home, so the boy's life wouldn't be divided between them.

The two are not divorced, although they were separated more than a year ago when the wife went home to attend her father during an illness—and never returned. Last November Mrs. Albritton filed suit in District Court for maintenance and custody of the child. The court assigned the boy to her, with the provision the father be permitted to see him.

Albritton, a sculptor and designer, took the child to Maryland and refused to return him to the mother.

"He had been ill with bronchial pneumonia, and I felt I could give him better care," he explained.

Mrs. Albritton obtained a writ forbidding the husband to leave the District. It was served to him October 3, but he, according to his attorney, Charles H. Quimby, could not raise the $500 bond and was accordingly sent to jail.

A hearing on the case was held Wednesday before Justice Oscar R. Luhring, who ruled the previous court order must stand. The husband, however, chose to remain in jail rather than surrender the child.

"It seems I'm being held for ransom," he said. "The only difference being I must pay for freedom with my son instead of money."

Dr. Pierce to Speak Before Unitarians

"You Can Take It With You" is the subject upon which the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., minister of All Souls' Church (Unitarian), will preach at the 11 a. m. service. This is the last in a course of sermons on "The Things We Live By."

Before the adult classes in the church school which meet at 10 o'clock, Dr. Stuart A. Rice of the Statistical Bureau, who was in Prague during the recent crisis, will speak on "The European Problem" and Judge C. S. Lobingier of the law school, National University, on "The Common Roots of Religion and Law."

"The Leap of Faith" will be the subject of Dr. Frederic W. Perkins' sermon at 11 o'clock.

Blaze Quelled At Columbia Hospital Here

Patients in the west wing of Columbia Hospital were alarmed by the odor of smoke last night when soiled linen in a basement storage room burst into flame.

Unable to extinguish the blaze, Lloyd and Frank Martin laundry employes, who had seen smoke billowing from a basement window, turned in an alarm. The blaze was quelled by an engine company before any serious damage had been done.

More than 100 adults and 65 children were in the structure at the time of the alarm. There was no panic and no disorder. The structure is fireproof.

Due to illness in Ross' family, the talk, scheduled for last Sunday, was shifted to this week.

Next Sunday a speaker yet to be announced will discuss the Far East. November 13, Joaquim de Sousa Leao, Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy here, will discuss "Brazil's Relation with America and Overseas Countries."

"The Present Agrarian Problem in Mexico From Program Viewpoints of Internal and External Policy" will be interpreted by Sr. Don Salvador Duhart, Second Secretary of the Mexican Embassy. This topic is subject to final confirmation.

"Floodlight on the Americas," featuring Dr. George Howland Cox, director of the center of Inter-American studies at George Washington University, will conclude the series November 27.

Daughter Wealthy Because Mother Fills Toper's Tomb

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP).—A jury decided today that 3-year-old Arlene Richine was entitled to collect $2,500, or 500 times the amount her mother wagered—and lost when she died—that she could drink a pint of whisky in one hour.

The award was against Paul Sakenas and Peter Waicunas, owners of the tavern where her mother, Mrs. Antoinette Richine, worked and had made the $5 wager. She had consumed three-quarters of the pint when she collapsed and died of acute alcoholism.

The suit was brought under the dram shop act, which holds tavern keepers responsible for acts performed by persons under the influence of liquor obtained in their establishments.

Birth-Control Clinics of N. C. Held a Success

Described to Conclave
Operated by State
First in Nation

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28.—A North Carolina health officer reported today marked success in the work of the first State-operated birth control clinics in the United States.

In a paper delivered before the closing session of the American Public Health Association's annual meeting here, Dr. Roy Norton, of the North Carolina State Board of Health, said there now are 56 birth control clinics operating in 50 of the State's counties, all under control of the board of health.

Advice on birth control—both to aid mothers in having children as well as to space them according to the economic status of the family—has been given to 1,140 wives in the State during the last 18 months, he said.

All the clinics were set up under the auspices of local medical societies and health officers, Dr. Norton said.

"The difficulty has been to meet the requests for establishment of clinics," he added.

Inauguration of the movement came as the result of hundreds of mothers, mostly of low economic status, writing to the board of health asking for birth control information.

Husband Silent 11 Years, Woman Asks Separation

Complaining that her husband did not speak to her for 11 years and then stopped supporting her, Mrs. Margaret Edna Weaver, 51, of 712 Nineteenth street northwest, yesterday asked the District court to sequester $50,000 worth of his property until she is awarded separate maintenance.

Attorney H. L. McCormick drafted the complaint in which Mrs. Weaver alleged that her husband, William Morgan Weaver, 65, of Shadyside, Md., owned considerable property in Washington. They were married here in 1913 and have one daughter.

Weaver recently retired after being an Interior Department guard for 20 years.

Auto Workers' Chief Seeks Standardized Pay

Detroit, Oct. 28 (AP).—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, announced today a plan to seek "standardization on a national scale" of wages, working conditions and hours in all of the 2,000 factories supplying automobile manufacturers with parts would be presented to the U. A. W. international executive board at Washington next Wednesday.

Under the proposal, Martin said, a minimum hourly wage of 65 cents would be established.

15,000 to Join In Holy Name Parade Here

Prelate to Preside
Program at Sylvan
Honor Christ, the King

More than 15,000 men and boys will march tomorrow in a Holy Name parade honoring Christ, the King. The tribute will be climaxed with a demonstration at the Sylvan Theater with celebration of pontifical benediction of the most blessed sacrament by Archbishop Michael J. Curley.

The march will start at Fourth street and Constitution avenue northwest. Sixteen bands of the Knights of Columbus, Elks, American Legion and other organizations will take part.

Following Constitution avenue to Sixteenth street, the parade will disband at the Sylvan Theater, where a sermon will be given by the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., former national director of the Holy Name Society and a member of the faculty at Catholic University.

Assisting Archbishop Curley at benediction will be the Rev. Edward Malloy, of St. Francis de Sales Church, and the Rev. Lawrence A. McGlone, of the Church of the Nativity.

In all Catholic churches tomorrow, special masses will be said and special sermons will honor the "Kingship of Christ."

In case of inclement weather, the parade will be called off, but the exercises will be held in Catholic University gymnasium. With ceremonies scheduled to begin at 2 p. m., a broadcast at noon tomorrow over local stations will announce whether or not the rites will be held indoors.

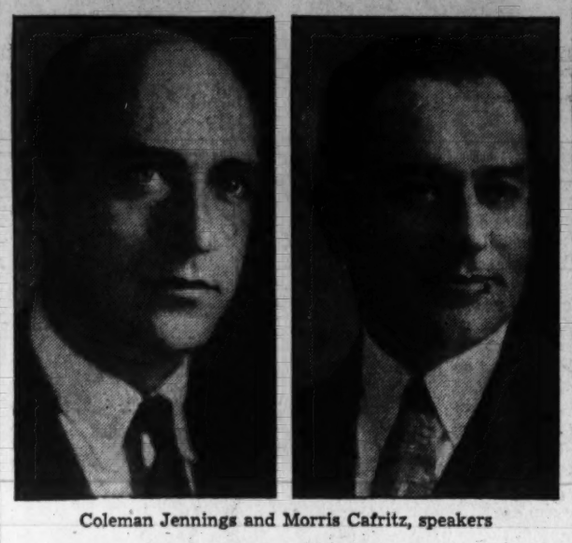
The mass will be Turners Mass, sung by the Boy Choristers, under the direction of Mr. C. A. Benson with Prof. Hward accompanying them.

Bishop Freeman to Officiate At Rites Before Chest Drive



Coleman Jennings and Morris Cafritz, speakers

To Introduce Three Lay Speakers
First to Appear in Canterbury Pulpit
Heads of 60 Agencies Invited to Attend

A public service of prayer and thanksgiving in spiritual preparation for the eleventh annual mobilization of the 60 agencies affiliated with the Community Chest of Washington will be held in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 8 p. m., with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., presiding.

Members of the clergy representing local churches and synagogues and the presidents of the 60 agencies have been invited to march in the procession.

After welcoming the congregation Bishop Freeman will introduce three lay speakers—Morris Cafritz, vice chairman of the Community Chest Campaign Committee; Col. William O. Tufts, former president of the Washington Federation of Churches and a leader for many years in the metropolitan unit of the Community Chest, and Coleman Jennings, president of the Community Chest and member of the cathedral council.

The presence of these three men in the Canterbury Ambon will mark the first appearance of laymen in this historic pulpit, which was presented to the cathedral in 1902 by the dean and chapter of Canterbury Cathedral in England.

Bishop Freeman will be assisted in conducting the service by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the cathedral, and the Rev. William M. Bradner, canon precentor, who will be master of ceremonies for the procession.

Bishop Freeman will deliver the sermon at the choral evensong service at 4:30 tomorrow, when 1,000 members of the Girl Scouts of America will assemble in the cathedral under the leadership of Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, national Girl Scout commissioner for the United States.

The sermon at the morning prayer service at 11 o'clock will be delivered by the Rev. Royden K. Yerkes, Ph. D., D. D., professor of systematic theology at the Theological School of the University of the South, who is conducting two conferences for the clergy at the College of Preachers, on "The Christian Doctrine of God."

Services for the day will begin with celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., and there will be pilgrimages for out-of-town worshipers following the 11 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. services.

Lutherans To Hail Church Festival

Special Rites Planned
Dr. Blackwelder to Talk
To Start Sermon Series

Tomorrow evening Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, will begin a series of six Sunday evening sermons on "Making God Real to Modern Men," using themes suggested by the Oxford Group movement. His first topic is "Can We Humans Achieve the Absolute?" November 6, "Is It Healthy to Share With Others One's Conquered Sins?" November 13, "Can One Trust Impulses After Prayer for Guidance?" November 20, "Is it Well to Publicize Personal Surrender to Christ?" November 27, "Is a Common Technique Necessary for Effective Christian Living?" December 4, "Do Spiritual Superiority Complexes Promote Christian Democracy?"

At both morning services the Festival of the Reformation will be celebrated. The Rev. Ralph William Loew, assistant pastor, will speak at the 8:30 matin service on "The Right to Speak" and at 11 p. m. Dr. Blackwelder will use as his theme, "The Word They Still Shall Let Remain."

St. Paul's. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, will use as his morning sermon theme "A King's Penknife." In the evening a song service will be conducted and the pastor's address will be on "Luther's Home Life."

Christ. This church will commemorate the anniversary of the Reformation as the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel speaks on "A Lutheran Preacher in St. Peter's Church in Rome."

Grace. The church will observe the anniversary of the Reformation movement, out of which Protestantism has come.

At the 11 a. m. service, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor, will speak on "If Luther Were Here Today." Three hymns composed by Martin Luther will be sung by the congregation.

Georgetown. The Lutheran church will observe the Festival of the Reformation. At 11 a. m. Dr. Harry T. Domer will be guest speaker. His subject will be "The Reformation in the World of Today."

The annual workers' conference of the Washington District Luther League wil be held in this church at 3:30 p. m. John Bittenbender will preside. The Rev. Ralph Loew of the Church of the Reformation will be the speaker. Supper will be served after the conference.

"Calling All Cars" will be the theme discussed by Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor, before Metropolitan, White House and Park policemen and their families.

Officers of each police unit will speak, and the Metropolitan Quartet, consisting of D. B. Grist, L. C. Bowers, E. G. Comangare and Charles Scott, will sing. Officers will serve as ushers.

At the morning service, Dr. Fendrich will speak on "The Two-Fold Failure of the Church."

Garden Memorial. The Rev. Philip Goertz, pastor, will speak on "The Church in My World" at the 11 a. m. service.

Chevy Chase. Dr. Hollister and the Rev. Randolph L. Gregory, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, will exchange pulpits for the 11 a. m. service. The Rev. Mr. Gregory's subject will be "The Church at Work."

Westminster. The Rev. Harry V. Porter will conduct the morning worship service and preach on "The Mind of Christ." At 8 p. m. he will preach on "Riches Through Poverty."

Bethesda. The Rev. John L. Parkes, pastor, will preach at 11 o'clock on the theme, "Then Jesus Came." At 8 p. m. the pastor will continue his series of sermons on "Can a Man Find God Today?"

Falls Church. Dr. Alton B. Altfather will preach on "What Price Our Young People?" at 11 o'clock. The A Cappella Choir of Jefferson High School will be the guests of the church and will sing several numbers.

Christian Science Topic 'Everlasting Punishment

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Micah 7:8: "Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." (Romans 13:14.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science commands men to master the propensities—to hold hatred in abeyance with kindness, to conquer lust with chastity, revenge with charity, and to overcome deceit with honesty." (Page 405.)

Rev. Mr. La Rue Speaks Twice Tomorrow

'Divine Introspection' Sermon Series at Night

At the morning hour his talk will be on "Where Should a Christian Live?" In the evening he will speak on "What Luther Called the Greatest Chapter in the Bible."

Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. the Woman's Missionary Society will meet observing the sixtieth anniversary of the society. Mrs. C. C. Hung will be guest speaker.

St. John's To Dedicate Memorial Pew

To Rev. William Hawley
Church's Second Rector
Dr. Hart Will Preach

A memorial pew to the Rev. William Hawley will be dedicated by Dr. Oliver J. Hart at the 11 a. m. service at St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow.

The Rev. Hawley was the second rector of St. John's serving from May, 1817, to January, 1845. A resolution of the vestry states that he discharged the duties of his office with singular fidelity for nearly 30 years, and as a sincere unostentatious Christian pastor won the unfading love of his congregation.

Other pews have been dedicated as memorials to the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, the Rev. Robert Johnston, Judge John Barton Payne and Mrs. Marinus Willett. A sixth pew will be dedicated soon to former Chief Justice Melville Fuller.

Dr. Hart will preach on "Life as a Great Trust" at 9:30 a. m. Other services will be Holy Communion at 8 p. m. with sermon by the Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, fifth in a series of sermons on the Epistle to the Colossians.

All Saints. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke will have charge of the early morning Holy Communion service at 7:30 o'clock, and the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter will be the speaker at 11 o'clock morning prayer.

Epiphany. There will be a Corporate Communion for members of the night branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, at 8 a. m. At 8:30 a. m. the church school will meet.

The rector, Dr. Z. B. Phillips, at 11 a. m. will deliver the fifth sermon in the series on "The Opportunities of Life in Our Present Day Civilization," the special theme to be, "Is the Futility of Life Any Answer to the Question of Today?"

At 8 p. m. there will be evening prayer and sermon by the Rev. Duncan Fraser, on "The Holy Catholic Church," third sermon in his series on "The Creeds."

On Tuesday the Feast of All Saints, there will be Holy Communion at 7:30, and a celebration with music and a sermon at 11 a. m.

Our Saviour. At the 11 a. m. service, the Rev. Alvin L. Wills, pastor, will speak on "A Faith for the Common Days."

Transfiguration. The Rev. J. J. Queally will officiate and speak as the church commemorates the Feast of All Saints, with services at 7:30 and 11 a. m.

Ascension. Silver Spring. The Rev. Joseph A. Hauber will preach at the 11 o'clock morning prayer on "Christian Charity, a Meritorious Obligation." Holy Communion and Sunday school are to be held at 7:30 and 9 a. m., respectively.

Youth in Capital Churches

Young people representing 147 churches affiliated with the Washington Federation of Churches will present a pageant at 8 p. m. Friday in Calvary Baptist Church, commemorating a decade of service to patients in local hospitals.

The program, sponsored by the hospital committee of the church federation, will feature the young people in Easter and Christmas carols usually sung for the patients.

With Miss Mabel N. Thurston, of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, as narrator, bedside visits, library service and other aids to the sick also will be dramatized by the young people.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray, chairman of the hospital committee, and her aides make 10,000 visits to local patients annually.

"The Balmy Mr. Brown," a comedy in three acts, portraying the life of a "society family" in a small American town, will be presented by the dramatic group of the Covenant Fellowship of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Casper Seline and Pauline Davis head the cast of 11, other members of which are Irma Vaughan, Olive Porterfield, Irving Allaman, Ruth Welsh, Charlotte Braun, Gordon Angle, Rita Fleming, Wilton Colt and James Richards. Mrs. W. H. Wagner, dramatic group adviser, is directing the play.

Morgan Harvey, editor of B. Y. Pickups, writes that:

The general B. T. U. assembly of Fifth Baptist Church will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p. m., directed by Bradley Thompson, discussing "Witnessing for Christ." Also that:

Charles Burton, at Grace Baptist Church, will direct the Fellowship Commission in presenting the annual homecoming program discussion of "Four Kinds of Homecoming," at 6:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Dr. Allen Deibert, professor of romance languages at George Washington University, will address the College Group of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Donnel B. Young, 7128 Hampden lane, Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Bertie Backus, principal of Alice Deal junior high, will address the Young People's society at 7:30 p. m. on "Problems of Character Development," in the young people's room.

The three young people's leagues of Emory Methodist Church, South, will meet at 7 p. m. tomorrow, with Isabel Mauger leading the intermediate group in discussing "Scoring on Right and Wrong." James Patterson will lead the senior league's debate on "World Friendship" and Miss Irene Cooper will direct the young people as it continues its series of meetings on "The Missionary of the Future."

Returning to the Covenant-First Fellowship for a moment—to note that Miss Helen Lyon will address the group at 7 p. m. tomorrow on "Youth and Its Prayer for Christianity." She has just returned from the International Christian Endeavor Convention in Sidney, Australia, in August. She did her returning by way of South Africa and Europe, observing as she toured foreign young people's religious activities.

Dr. D. H. Kress, of Washington Sanitarium, will show a motion picture on temperance after a fellowship supper of all youth organizations of Chevy Chase Baptist Church at 6 p. m. tomorrow.

The Luther Place Young People's Fellowship Tuesday at 8 p. m. will hear Mr. Schumann, senior student at Gettysburg Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., speak on his experience as a student in Germany last year.

Rev. Mr. Coyle Builds Church On 'Personal Evangelism'

Enrolls 331 New Members in Two Years
Crowds Force Third Service Every Sunday
300 Women in Mission, Charity Projects

"Personal evangelism" is the key to the phenomenal growth of the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, which has enrolled 331 new members during the two-year pastorate of the Rev. Thomas Law Coyle.

REV. COYLE

According to the pastor, who some time ago found it necessary to inaugurate an additional Sunday service at 8:50 a. m. to accommodate the crowds, his parishioners have spread the spirit of Sherwood throughout the Woodridge area, often bringing into membership habitual non-churchgoers.

This "Sherwood spirit" is exemplified in such activities as Neighborhood Circle Day, observed last Thursday, when six ladies of the congregation opened their homes to sister parishioners and and invited other women of their communities.

Serving as hostesses were Mrs. John Beck, Mrs. Anna Montgomery, Mrs. A. E. McClure, Mrs. H. V. Alexander, Mrs. Milton Fall and Mrs. Elsie Osborn.

Tomorrow, Visitation Sunday, will see 100 teams of two members each calling upon homes of members and prospective members.

300 Women Divided

To facilitate missionary and charitable projects, the women's classes, with more than 300 enrolled, are divided into three groups, including the Lookout Class, under Miss Grace Putman; the Friendly Class, led by Mrs. Edwin Shepherd, and the Alpha Class, taught by Mrs. George Tucker. Leper missions, a hospital in Arizona and a student at Berea College are supported by the units.

CUMMINGS (school)

Another "backbone" of the church is the Men's Class, conducted by W. B. Putman, local contractor, assisted by J. S. Wilhelm, former Canton, Ohio, editor. The men will sponsor a benefit minstrel show November 10.

Spurred by Homer Cummings, Sunday school superintendent; Mark Taylor, his predecessor, now Sunday school secretary and church clerk; Mrs. J. S. Pollard, junior department head, and Mrs. W. T. Helm, primary group supervisor, Sunday school enrollment has soared to 960 members.

One Layman Moderator

Music is an outstanding feature at Sherwood. Under the leadership of Roy K. Easter, graduate of the Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N. J., choristers consist of an a cappella group of 35 college-age people and an adult vested choir. Mrs. James P. Benfer, who recently retired after 25 years' service as organist, has been succeeded by Mrs. Easter.

EASTER (choir)

Among Sherwood's most active workers are Chester Smith, one of the few laymen ever to be named moderator of the presbytery; John Carlson, Wallace E. Perry, Harry Foss and French Morgan. One of the founders of the congregation, in 1909, was the late Conrad Chavey, builder of many Woodridge homes. Wilmer A. Eisenhart has served continuously for 25 years in various official positions of the church.

Serving under Chairman Herbert F. Stateser, of the board of elders, are James Allan, James P. Benfer, Albert Chipman, Joseph E. Coe, Mr. Cummings, Vernon Durst, Gene Lawson, A. E. McClure, O. E. Meinzer and C. R. Smith. The trustees, headed by Chester Bletch, consist of James O. Bouton, Mr. Easter, H. N. Foss, H. A. Linger, E. E. Martinsky, R. M. Oller, Dr. J. W. Pollard, W. B. Putman and George F. Tucker.

Three Handle Publicity

The board of deacons, under Wallace G. Perry, which has been rendering outstanding service to unemployed and other unfortunates, is composed of Lester Burn, J. B. Byers, Robert G. Carnahan, Shell Davis, Perry Edwards, E. A. Eisenhart, C. S. Gilliam, W. B. Lydenberg, W. H. Montgomery, Charles Morgan, E. T. Newkirk, H. F. Niemeyer and Lyle Werth.

TAYLOR (secretary)

H. Paul Firestone, H. C. Maynor and E. R. Temple have charge of publicity, and Mrs. Maybelle C. Sherwood has been instrumental in developing the four young people's societies.

"The Inner Drive" will be the topic of the sermon by the Rev. Mr. Coyle tomorrow at the 8:50 and 11 a. m. services. At 8 p. m. the minister will preach on "Momentum."

Mt. Vernon Place Will Inaugurate Drive for $75,000

Tomorrow, Consecration Sunday, at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will mark not only inauguration of the financial drive for the new educational building, but the second anniversary of Dr. John W. Rustin's pastorate.

It has been necessary to schedule an additional service at 9:15 a. m., anticipating the congregation's response to the request for pledges to the building fund. Parishioners are asked to raise $75,000 toward the construction cost of $125,000.

Dr. Rustin will speak on, "Shall We Go Forward" at both the extra service and the 11 a. m. rites, and at 8 . m. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, is to preach on "Be a Plum Tree."

Emory. The Rev. Horace E. Crommer will preach at the morning hour on "It Shall Not Be." At the evening service he will preach on "Is It Right?"

Ascension Men's Club

Walter Johnson will be a guest at a meeting of the men's club of the Church of the Ascension in Silver Spring, Md., Tuesday at 8 p. m. Refreshments will be served the club, which is open to all men of the community.

'Recovered Rapture' Dr. Daugherty's Theme

Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, Memorial United Brethren minister, will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Recovered Rapture." He will also teach the Fultz-Crescent Brotherhood Class at 9:40 a. m. Junior church will meet at 11 a. m. and vespers at 7:30 p. m. in charge of the young people, with a closing message by the minister.

National City To Hear Irish Friend of China

Dr. Paul There in 1895
Guest of Li Hung Chang
Speaks Here Tomorrow

A native Irishman beloved by the Chinese people is to be guest preacher at National City Christian Church tomorrow morning.

Dr. Alexander Paul first went to China in 1895, adopted the native costume and later became a teacher in the home of the famous old statesmen, Li Hung Chang.

For years since, he has been executive secretary of the Oriental missions for the United Christian Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ. He has a wide knowledge of India, Japan, the Philippines, as well as China, and recently returned from a six-month visit to the Orient.

"What Did Jesus Do to Men?" will be the theme of the associate minister, the Rev. Ivan H. Dugan, in the evening.

Columbia Heights. The Rev. A. P. Wilson will take for his morning topic "Sources of Personal Power" and in the evening the series on "Great Bible Questions" will continue with "The Sinlessness of Christ."

Japan Stiffens Defiance of World Powers

French 'Aid' Protested
Extremists Have Way
Rule of Asia Is Aim

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 29.—Japan drove forward with her conquest of China today in the face of increasing opposition from the great powers, including the United States.

There was a noticeable hardening in the Japanese attitude, and Occidentals in Shanghai believed that extremists in Tokyo had converted the Japanese Premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, to their doctrine that complete Japanese domination of East Asia must be established once and for all time.

Events indicating the determination of the Japanese included:

In Paris the foreign office confirmed reports Japan had protested to France against alleged shipments of arms entering southwest China from French Indo-China—an action which was considered possibly to portend Japanese occupation of the big Chinese Island of Hainan, which dominates the sea approaches to France's south Asian empire.

Gunboats Isolated

Meanwhile, Paris called Tokyo's attention to the fact Japan has blockaded the Yangtze River in at least a technical violation of international law, since she has made no formal declaration of war against China.

The French navy ministry announced its despatch boat, Admiral Charner, and the gunboats Francis Garnier and Argus, are isolated on the Pearl River near Canton—which the Japanese also have closed temporarily.

The Japanese were especially concerned about alleged French munitions shipments since Chinese Generalissimo Chiang has established a new center of resistance in Yunnan Province, southwest China, which is connected with French Indo-China by railway and by a motor truck route.

It was believed here the Japanese intend eventually to occupy Yunnan and oust French interests which long have been dominant in that province.

In Hankow, former national capital of China which has been occupied this week by the Japanese, the United States Consulate was obtaining evidence in connection with the death of Phoebe Nyhus, 3-year-old daughter of Arthur Nyhus, of Fertile, Iowa, who was killed in a Japanese bombing raid on Tungpeh, Honan Province, 40 miles northwest of Sinyang, on October 24.

The child's father, a Lutheran Brethren missionary, notified the consulate that Mrs. Nyhus and another daughter, Ruth, eight years old, were wounded slightly.

The family fled into the interior after the bombing.

Nyhus said his mission buildings were marked by United States flags when the Japanese planes appeared.

The Japanese contention was the Nyhus family had remained in "a zone of military operations" despite the fact Japan repeatedly had warned all foreigners in this district they should flee to points of safety.

The Japanese said that Chinese soldiers had sought refuge around the Nyhus mission and the bombs were directed at these "enemy groups."

Throngs Cheer Rulers

Tokyo, Oct. 28 (AP).—A rare public appearance of the Emperor and Empress, each carrying lanterns, tonight stirred the cheers of hundreds of thousands of their subjects in a celebration of the capture of Hankow.

Nearly 1,000,000 persons participated in the organized victory demonstrations, chanting war songs and waving lighted paper lanterns. Long columns of marchers converged on the imperial palace, the war and navy offices and the Yasukuni shrine, Japan's Pantheon dedicated to the souls of the war dead.

Emperor Hihohito and Empress Nagako stood for nearly half an hour on the Nijubashi (Double) Bridge crossing the moat around the imperial palace. At the sight of their majesties a wave of exclamations swept the closely packed throng, welling into a deafening roar of adulation amid cries of "Banzai!"

Farm Bureau Chief Expresses Doubt On 2-Price Plan

By the Associated Press.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said yesterday he thought Secretary Wallace's proposal for a two-price farm program would represent an excursion into "an untried field." He said "it might work and it might not."

The Wallace plan envisions purchase of surplus commodities by the Government and their sale to needy persons at low prices.

O'Neal called at the White House with a group of Southern agriculture officials to discuss the cotton problem. He said the group informed the President that the federation was "fiightingly for the present program as it is."

Kaiser Plays Host To Archeologists

Doorn, the Netherlands, Oct. 28 (AP).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm today was host and chairman here at a meeting of archaeologists.

Annually for the past 14 years Wilhelm has invited leading German, Netherlands, Austrian, Hungarian and other archeologists to Doorn for these discussions. It is called the annual meeting of the Doorner Arbeitsgemeinschaft or cooperation committee of savants.

The former Kaiser always presents one paper himself. This year he spoke on "The Origin and Use of the Baldachin," an ecclesiastical canopy. His paper was not made public.

Glider Record Claimed For 9,000 Feet Altitude

North Conway, N. H., Oct. 28 (AP).—Lewin Darringer, of Philadelphia, claimed today a new altitude record for gliders after a flight which he said carried him up 9,000 feet.

He said he made the flight after being towed by an airplane to an altitude of 2,500 feet.

6-Mile-a-Minute Flight by New Army Plane Is Seen as Answer to Foreign Air Challenge

Lieut. Benjamin S. Kelsey (inset) flew a P-37-type plane shown here from Dayton, Ohio, to Buffalo—360 miles in 61 minutes—for an unofficial Army plane speed record

Navy's 'Fortress' Here Makes Dash From Coast President Will See It

America's answer to the challenge for air supremacy was revealed yesterday when the Army disclosed details of the flight of a pursuit plane which traveled 360 miles in 61 minutes.

Military authorities were particularly gratified by the fact that the 6-mile-a-minute flight, which took place Wednesday, was made in a pursuit plane carrying full military equipment, because bombers recently have been developing speeds outstripping the small fighting craft intended to intercept bombardment planes.

Foreign speed claims also will be answered by the new fighter. The German Messerchmitt is believed to have traveled at 380 miles per hour, but reports received here state that it was stripped for racing. Britain's Spitfire exceeded 400 miles per hour, but was aided by a 75-mile-an-hour tail wind, officials declared.

As the Army was checking on the new record, the Navy's $1,000,000 Flying Dreadnaught arrived at Anacostia Naval Air Station yesterday after a 13-hour and 55 minute dash from San Diego, Calif.

Neither flight was made as a stunt, officials stressing the fact they were routine performances.

Lieut. Benjamin Kelsey made his 360-mile trip from Dayton, Ohio, to Buffalo, N. Y., to inspect another new Army plane while the Navy flying boat, commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Andrew Crinkley, came here on one day's notice for inspection by President Roosevelt.

The plane flown by Lieut. Kelsey already has passed the experimental stage and a squadron of 13 of them have been ordered for the Air Corps, officials said.

Although pleased by the success of the plane, known as the P-37, the Army intends to announce completion in a few days of another and even faster model, designated the P-40. An experimental craft, details of its design will not be made public for some time.

An all-metal, single-seater monoplane powered by a liquid-cooled Allison motor, the P-37 is a considerable departure from the earlier P-36, of which 210 have been ordered by the Army.

Most notable change is the use of a liquid-cooled engine rather than an air-cooled power plant. Army officials describe the older engine as "a big job which is like pushing a barn door through the atmosphere" and point to the superior streamlining and maneuverability which can be attained by use of the liquid-cooled type of motor.

To incorporate recent improvements, however, it has been necessary to turn out the new fleet with little regard for the possibility of mass production. Standardization and mass production are being carefully studied as part of the Administration's re-examination of defense needs.

President Roosevelt, who has frequently hinted that an increase in the Nation's air power may be necessary, will drive to Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station today to inspect first-line Army and Navy planes.

George W. White

As the National Capital, Washington has more than its share of notables who are prominent in the sense of possessing admirable reputations in many and various fields of activity. By the same token the city is deficient, compared with others of its size, in men and women with a family tradition of essentially local leadership. The District of Columbia counts relatively few native sons who have always been not merely associated with the locality but whose careers have throughout been devoted with single-hearted purpose to the cause of a better municipal life in this disfranchised community.

This situation emphasizes the loss to Washington in the death of George W. White, for almost 30 years the president of the National Metropolitan Bank. Mr. White was born in Washington, as were his forebears before him. He was educated at the old Emerson Institute here. In the course of a long and active life—it is more than half a century since he started work with the institution of which he became the highly successful head—his circle of friends and admirers grew steadily to huge proportions. Indeed there are no Washingtonians, in the strict sense of the word, of whom it could be said that their passing would leave a greater sense of loss.

This is due only in part to the commercial importance of Mr. White's work as president of one of the largest local banks. It is due only in part to his wide interest and active leadership in many civic enterprises. The sense of loss is heightened, for Mr. White's many friends, by appreciation of the quality of his manhood, by the realization of all who knew him that here was a true gentleman of the highest integrity, of absolute dependability, of pervading ideals discernible through his pronounced personal modesty and stronger in their influence because of this leader's mellow, unselfish and charmingly whimsical disposition.

George W. White was a banker of the old school. He had that intimate knowledge of his clients and his community which has become all too rare as the professional aspects of banking have become subordinated to purely commercial considerations. He was a citizen of whom the Capital could be, and was, profoundly proud. He was constructively conservative in his profession, his politics and his philosophy. But his conservatism was of that admirable and too infrequent type which really seeks to conserve, in the interest of the future, the best of what humanity has learned, through the test of long and bitter experience, to be practical, to be reliable and to be true.

The National Symphony

Tomorrow afternoon the National Symphony Orchestra begins its eighth season under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler. From this simple statement emerge several significant implications, not the least of which is that the musical life of the National Capital was never in a more healthy condition than is the case today. The orchestra was founded at a time of pronounced economic insecurity, and to the cautious it seemed an act of optimistic temerity to organize an undertaking so purely cultural in nature. During the succeeding years, amid continued uncertainties in the body politic, the faith of the founders has been justified by the unfailing support of the public.

Not only has there been no relaxation of loyalty on the part of the faithful patrons, but there has also been a steady increase in attendance and a remarkable growth in the membership of the orchestral association. The success of the campaign for the sustaining fund last spring was unprecedented; the amount stipulated as essential was over subscribed, and the list of contributors extended beyond the expectations of the management. This response can have but one interpretation: that the people of Washington have realized the importance of good music as an intangible but essential asset in the community.

Music serves many purposes, from mere entertainment to intellectual refreshment. But its greatest function is spiritual renovation. With poetry it shares the paradoxical office of ministering immaterially to our material welfare. "Poetry," says Allen Tate, "finds its true usefulness in its perfect inutility," and this truth is affirmed by the Spanish poet, Pedro Salinas: "Poetry has always been surrounded by an atmosphere of wonderment, and in this resides its great strength. Nothing protects it more than its quality of being a thing of exceptional value and luxury, a useless thing." Great music is pure poetry, and great composers come as close as mortals can to expression of the ineffable.

It is with the performance of great music that Dr. Kindler and his musicians have served us well in the past and will doubtless serve us even more effectively in the years to come. For the growth of the orchestra in artistic stature has naturally been commensurate with the increase in public appreciation. Between musicians and auditors there is a constant interaction, a mutual stimulation by which both are benefited. With each season the National Symphony becomes more expert in interpretation, Washingtonians more happily aware of the excellence which their interest serves to foster.

Hague And The Court

Last week the Supreme Court of New Jersey upheld the action of the Jersey City authorities in refusing to grant Norman Thomas a permit to speak at an open air meeting. This week a judge of the Federal Circuit Court issued an injunction prohibiting Mayor Hague and his fellow commissioners from interfering with the distribution of leaflets and circulars by CIO labor organizers. He also affirmed the right of these invaders to speak in public parks under certain conditions. The rule he laid down is that if, on previous occasions, public speeches had resulted in disturbances copies of the addresses to be delivered must be submitted to the authorities in advance.

It would appear, therefore, that notwithstanding the more liberal Federal ruling by Judge Clark the city authorities are still in a position to place a good many obstacles in the way of public speaking by orators who have incurred the displeasure of the police. One must await the outcome of the efforts of the CIO to exercise the privilege of free speech before deciding that the battle for elementary Constitutional rights in Mayor Hague's bailiwick has been won.

On another and fundamentally more important issue, however, Judge Clark has taken a strong stand—that is, the practice of forcibly removing or deporting from Jersey City various persons whom Mayor Hague finds distasteful. If a municipality or a State could freely exercise power to eject members of the C. I. O. or other individuals whose activities are viewed with alarm, this country would soon become one in which citizens could move about only with the permission or by the sufferance of State and local officials.

We might soon find ourselves grappling with local refugee problems of an acute nature resulting from the refusal of certain communities to tolerate the presence of particular groups arbitrarily judged to be dangerous to the peace and welfare of the other residents. In other words, if the example set by Jersey City in driving out Norman Thomas and various labor leaders who have incurred the suspicion of Mayor Hague could be followed with impunity, free movement and interchange of ideas would probably soon become a lost ideal.

As Justice Clark points out, the power of deportation is a national power and can only be exercised against aliens. And aliens are entitled to a hearing before being sent out of the country. If laws are broken, the remedy does not lie in banishing the offender to a neighboring city or State but in detention and arrest. To permit local governments to deport individuals deals a much more direct and effective blow at the rights of free speech and assemblage than outright denial of permits to speak which can be challenged in court.

It is encouraging that a Federal judge has taken a strong stand against the high-handed proceedings that have rid Jersey City of labor leaders on the Mayor's blacklist. But one doubts whether a lower court decision will have a very chastening effect upon the Hague machine when the Administration is actually aiding and abetting it by permitting the Secretary of War to enter the guarded precincts of Jersey City to endorse the candidacy for Senator of one of the Mayor's right hand men.

Exit For Bluecher

The mystery regarding the fate of Marshal Vassily K. Bluecher is only partially cleared up by the announcement in a Moscow newspaper that his post as commander in chief of the Red Army in the Soviet Far East has been filled.

Is Marshal Bluecher still in Russia or has he managed to find refuge abroad? Does he remain among the living or has he, perforce, joined that numerous band of civil and military workers in the Soviet vineyard who, having fallen afoul of Stalin, now rest in unlocated graves? These questions are not answered. What appears certain is that a brilliant strategist and superb military organizer, who more than anyone else was responsible for the building up of Russian prestige in the Far East, has been summarily and inexplicably eliminated from the picture.

The fact that Bluecher's popularity with the rank and file of the army he led did not prevent his being purged is eloquent proof of Stalin's power. The Soviet dictator is still obviously stronger than any he has come to regard as a possible rival. But at the same time the Bluecher episode is further evidence of that disturbed and chaotic internal situation in the Soviet Union which has played so great a part in sharply reducing Russia's international influence.

M. Daladier's Defense

Premier Daladier's speech to the Radical Socialist Congress at Marseille was that of a man who finds attack the best means of defense. Although the Munich settlement in which he personally participated has won the approval of overwhelming majorities in both the Chamber and the Senate, it continues to produce in France a deep sense of chagrin and uneasiness. There can be no glossing over the fact that it meant the doom of 20 years of French efforts to organize the European continent and has reduced that nation to the status of a second class power.

These facts M. Daladier finds it impossible to pass over; they are indelibly written on the minds and hearts of all Frenchmen. But for both personal and patriotic reasons he can hardly afford to see the picture in an altogether gloomy light. That is why, at Marseille, he roared a denial that at Munich France had capitulated or allowed herself to become the victim of German pressure. That is why he has espoused the idea that France can readily reach agreements with Germany and Italy which would strengthen peace. That is why he denounced the Communists, his party's erstwhile partners in the Popular Front, for their attacks on him. And, finally, that is why he has emphasized to his fellow Radical Socialists and to the French people generally that in losing out in Europe France still has her empire and it is there "that a large part of the future of France lies."

As to the latter, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Munich settlement has weakened the French empire even as it has weakened the British empire. Already, in the Far East, Japan's successful thrust in the direction of Canton has made France's position in Indo-China highly vulnerable. In consequence, Japan has hastened to demand that France stop all shipments of arms and munitions to China over the railroad leading from Indo-China to Yunnan.

The external prospect, despite all of M. Daladier's qualified optimism, is not a bright one for France. Even less so is the domestic outlook. But in this latter connection M. Daladier has done his nation a real service by refusing to sugar-coat the unpalatable truths which France must swallow if she is to be restored to good health. The budget for next year, he revealed, will total 102,000,000,000 francs, or almost half of the entire national income. On the other hand, receipts are not expected to total much over 66,000,000,000 francs. Already in desperate straits financially, France faces the possibility of even worse to come unless heroic measures are speedily taken.

What these measures will be M. Daladier has not yet revealed. His government has plenary power to act in the financial sphere. There is every reason to believe it will act with all necessary vigor. But the essential task of reform cannot be carried out by the government alone. It rests with the French people themselves. As M. Daladier correctly points out, France does "not need either a savior or a man of destiny" but hard workers "who will do their task day after day and prepare that of tomorrow. The miracle will come, but it will be the fruit of hard work and patience."

The breakdown of French production was one of the basic factors which placed France in a position of marked weakness relative to Germany. Unless the production energies, for so long dammed up, are now released France's difficulties are certain to increase rather than diminish in the critical days that lie ahead.

Halloween

Mother Eve was the first of the apple queens. Other Eves, who have been apple queens in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland, have been equally lovely. But only one, All Hallows Eve, has been quite so mischievous. No other Eve ever tied an apple and a lighted candle to a string and set it swinging for an Adam to bite at.

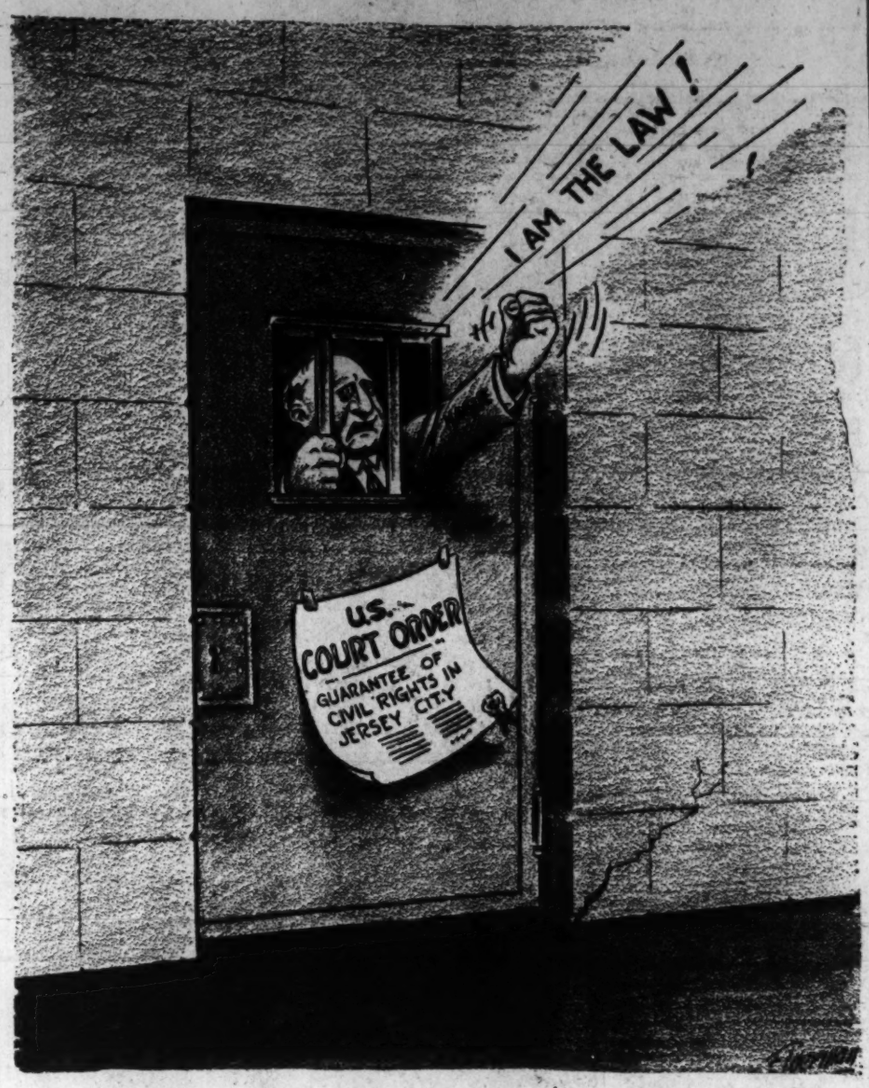
And, bless her, she is one of the first of the Eves to be a matchmaker. Long ago she began to tell the girls whom and when they would marry; and, with a little very human collusion, she was very frequently right; and is to this day.

Ay, Eve of All Hallows is a member of one of the first families; though by no means pure-blooded. It is her Druidical ancestry that causes her to light bonfires in the British Isles; and her Roman ancestry that prompts her to do reverence to Pomona. That is why she is nuts to a small boy. And it is not wholly unconnected with the fact that the light that burns in the pumpkin's eyes always burns with at least one candle power.

And as for her masquerading, that is really another touch of nature, for what are the forests doing nowadays but masquerading in all kinds of brilliant colors? Surely, a lady is entitled to a little splurge before turning the mike over to all the saints.

Old-timers boast of "the good old days," but all the pictures we've ever seen in old family albums were of persons who looked as if they were sitting on the ragged edge of a nervous breakdown.

Jurisdictional Dispute



Letters to the Editor

Marx And Fascism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is unfair to say, as stated in your editorial on Karl Kautsky in the issue of October 19, 1938, that, "Karl Marx certainly never envisaged the kind of economic and social order in continental Europe that has succeeded the regime of private capitalism whose downfall he so confidently predicted." If Marx's theory were interpreted in a straight line then Fascism and the Russian type communism do contradict Marxism. But if we emphasize economic factors over the response of subjective conditions we are mechanical and do not give the correct analysis of Marxism.

We have to pay attention to subjective factors. The great trouble of Marxists has been a consideration of objective forces over the subjective ones, (cycle, production, exchange, etc., are the objective factors.) Subjective forces are responses of human beings, especially the proletariat to these objective factors. If one assumes that the proletariat will always look to those objective conditions with the overthrow of capitalism we contradict Marxism.

Marx says that given a certain set of factors revolution is possible but it is not necessary that the revolution will take place. War might prevent it and lead to either reaction or socialism. Engels often said that, "the chief threat to the class struggle is a great war which will push Europe back into the dark ages and set back class struggle many years although eventually the proletariat will rise again."

National differences are to be considered, also racial differences. These differences often cut across class struggle. If a revolutionary situation arises under capitalism and neither the bourgeoisie nor the proletariat is able to seize power then the bourgeoisie may abdicate its power to a dictator. (Definitely Hitler's position.)

We are not attempting to defend Marx in his mistakes, as he admittedly made many, but we do feel that he must be studied thoroughly before such generalizations as those contained in The Post's editorial can be made.

Madhouse

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin might have been speaking of the Dies committee when he remarked in 1935: 'Having been in international politics for most of the time since the war, I will not write myself down a pessimist, but I will say that at times I feel that I am living in a madhouse."

Not since those hectic days of the discredited Palmer "Red Raids" have we witnessed such a travesty of justice as we now have during this so-called "investigation" of alien activities. Honest citizens have been called before a witch-hunting court to be judged by inferior men as intolerant as our unlamented Puritans. Witnesses, by their own admissions revealed as unreliable stool pigeons, company spies and ex-convicts, are allowed to testify against decent citizens—are allowed to charge Catholic labor leaders with communism and further to disgrace our courts and democracy.

Chairman Dies is merely conducting a "smear campaign" against the Administration. The Government would do well to investigate the forces behind this farcical "investigation" and to stop the committee from spreading antidemocratic and Fascist propaganda under the flimsy excuse of investigating aliens. What is more alien to America than the antisemitism and antilabor attacks of the Dies committee? If we deport men like Chairman Dies the country would be better off.

Question Of Ethics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President is reported as having made the following broadcast on October 26:

"The way of democracy is free discussion—as exemplified by the objectives of the forum to which I am speaking. Free discussion is most greatly useful when it is restrained and relates to facts. It is not useful to suggest either to the American people or to the peoples of other nations that the American Government, its policies, its practices and its servants are actuated by motives of dishonor or corruption. To do so is, of necessity, an attack on the American system of constitutional representative government itself."

This statement just does not make sense. Intent, that is, motive, is a fact. Furthermore, intent is the half of all crimes—accomplishment, the other half. If an official spends the public's money before election in the honest but mistaken belief that the expenditure is necessary to relieve distress, then at most he has only made an honest mistake; but, if he spends the money, under the guise of relief, with the intent to influence the election, he is a political malefactor who should be removed from office.

Sit-Down Strikes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of October 24, under the caption, "The Right To Sit Down,'" was indeed timely.

As a member of a craft union affiliated with the A. F. of L., personally I believe a reform brought about by force at its best is only temporary. Liberty and justice are essential to good government and general welfare. Good will, understanding and conscious responsibility of moral limitations and lawful restraint within a guild are potent factors in co-ordinating harmonious relationship and stability in volunteer organizations.

We must not tamper with the sacred rights of others. The sit-down strike, or confiscation of proporty or abuse of it, is criminal and demoralizing in effect. It also invites serious retaliation. Regardless of how fascinating and advantageous it may seem to be at any time as a reprisal, it is morally wrong. It is raiding by force the sacred rights of others. In fact it is trespassing pure and simple, and not justified under the law or principle of ownership.

If a cause is just and warrants retaliation, then justify it by placing the responsibility on the arbitrary source. Strikes are much like crime, in that they don't pay and should be used only as a last resort.

No Offense Intended

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Earning a livelihood is a serious business to women and since their right to do so is being so widely challenged at present, you will pardon us if we do not laugh with you at the poem captioned "Career Women" to which you gave a prominent spot on the editorial page on October 19.

It is noted with interest that this little gem is reprinted from the Chicago Daily News. (Col. Knox, publisher, and defeated Vice Presidential candidate in the 1936 election.)

The Issue Of States' Rights

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with mixed emotions that I read your editorial of October 15, "Recurrent Lynchings." I was gratified to read that you considered the lynching at Ruston, La., "just as barbarous as the crime of which the victim was accused."

I cannot agree, however, that because the number of lynchings has decreased that "compared with previous years, this represents an improvement." If you should read of the lynching of Henry Smith in Paris, Tex., on February 1, 1893, as reported in the New York Times of February 2 of the same year, you will find that the only difference in the two lynchings is in the person, time and place. Forty-five years later that same tendency to lawlessness and barbarism is still prevelent and will cause even one lynching to stink to the high heavens.

Why is "anti-lynching legislation repugnant to the American system of Government?" Is not the American system of justice universal throughout the breadth of this land? Are not colored American citizens citizens in every sense of the word?

We colored Americans believe the American way to be the best way and the American way calls for the stamping out of this insidious evil.

Jews And Arabs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Knott's letter carried a semblance of logic until he referred to the Jews creating a situation similar to that of the Czechs and Sudetens. He assumes that Palestine is rightfully Arab and the Jew, a foreigner. The Sudetenland region was originally Bohemia and continued German immigration made it Sudetenland. Palestine was the home of the Jew in Biblical times. Although the Romans destroyed Jerusalem and the greater part of the Jewish population with it, there were still 70,000 surviving Hebrews, who although forced into dispersion, were still the rightful heirs of that land.

The Moslems, like the Germans, drifted into Palestine, until they claimed that land as their own. Palestine isn't the pleasantest spot for a peace-seeking people. It is the desperate situation that exists today for the Jews that causes them to turn eyes toward a country that has had its soil fertilized with the blood of man, perhaps more than any other in the world.

The Arabs have their own land, and unlike the Jews, Palestine is not their sole refuge. It is indeed ironical that the two nations who have so much in common and similar in origin cannot, or will not be permitted to, live together in peace.

Nationalized Railroads

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "master minds" of Congress have declared that there is no reason for railroad labor to take a wage cut. They urge that the Government take over the railroads.

The experience of Canada with its operation of the railroads should have a deterring influence, but why worry how deep the Government goes into debt? To the drowning man it makes no difference whether the depth is 20 or 2,000 feet.

They overlook the fact that labor wages among railroad employes would still be higher, after the wage cut, then wages in similar industries. And they have overlooked the fact that the little man is interested in railroad systems as a private enterprise through stock holdings, bank accounts and insurance policies.

The master minds did not point out the losses to the communities in the taxes that the railroads pay—and the thriving communities of today might become the deserted villages of tomorrow.

The Post Impressionist

Witch—1938 Model

THIS being a very witching time of year, perhaps it is not amiss to tell of a real witch I know who keeps a large plantation pretty much under her thumb.

They call her the Conjure Woman, and for the thirty-odd Negro sharecroppers on the farm she fills the offices of doctor, midwife, undertaker and fortune teller. Her wish is their command. The best chickens, the finest hog meat and every vegetable that grows on the place find their way to her cabin.

No one knows how old she is, not even herself. The estimates run from 100 years up to 150. It is safe to say that she is not less than 100 and is probably more. Her hair is a dead white, her skin is brown and crinkled like grained leather and her eyes, solemn and unblinking, like two bright prunes.

When I saw her first, she was sitting on the porch of her tiny one-room cabin, with a pipe stuck between her toothless gums. She seemed to be muttering to herself, but as I rode by she stopped and peered intently at me. Perhaps she remembered back into the past when other Yankees had ridden by, perhaps it was something else, but that look made me feel as if a snake had bitten me.

My inquiries about this old woman drew fearful glances from the Negroes and rebukes from my relatives at the plantation house. It was only by bribing Henry, the foreman, with a can of tobacco that I learned she was the "Conjure Woman," and that she was skilled in the arts of voodoo.

On the pretext of rabbit hunting I started toward the ravine where the Conjure Woman's cabin lay. Although it was almost noon the cabin stood in deep shadows. The place seemed deserted, but I felt those black prune eyes as if I had seen them. In the back of the house was a garden in which grew some very strange-looking plants. Later I found that these were "yarbs," guaranteed to cure all ailments of man or beast—some for misery, some for colic, some for warts or almost any other complaint. Behind the garden was a pool of brackish water in which tadpoles were swimming. But my inspection was terminated by the sight of the Conjure Woman coming from the house toward me. I turned and muttered, "Hunting rabbits," and marched off at the double quick.

My foolhardy visit to the Conjure Woman's premises was broadcast over the plantation's grapevine telegraph before sundown. My uncle warned me that it was dangerous business, not because he had any belief in the Conjure Woman's magic but because the Negroes' belief in it was implicit and unshakable. That was the secret of her success, he said. Her magic worked because the people believed it would work. Her plane of intelligence was so much higher than that of the other tenants that she could capitalize to the full on their fear of her. She was very old—she knew a few medicinal herbs, and she was in her way an artist.

Clarence, the citified house boy, was the only one, black or white, on the place who seemed willing to talk about her at all. It was from him I learned that my uncle had reason enough to fear her. Merely by a few words she could make the people contented and industrious or sullen and lazy.

Clarence told me many an eerie tale about the Conjure Woman's prowess. There was the time she had foretold the ruin of the cotton, and the boll weevils had come to fulfill her prophecy. There was the time she told Bob, one of the hands, that his days were numbered. A few weeks later Bob died of an accidental ax wound he gave himself while cutting wood.

Could it have been that Bob's fear of the Ju Ju she had put on him had made him so nearly insane that he lost control of his reflexes? At first his wound, though serious enough, seemed not likely to be fatal. Did his conviction that he was going to die make recovery impossible?

What I think is that, through her crude and instinctive knowledge of psychology, of weather and crop conditions and of the workings of the human body, she actually held a life and death power over these simple and credulous people. Poor Bob in some way had incurred her anger.

Nevertheless, her influence was for the most part good. Not many of the colored people trusted white doctors, and in that hinterland, 17 miles from the nearest town, it was often impossible to get a doctor when one was needed.

Chris, wife of Henry the foreman, had brought many a baby into the world with the Conjure Woman's help. When Kolo fell upon his gun, the knife-and-turpentine treatment saved his arm and quite possibly his life. She frequently and successfully treated ailments among the livestock, and no calf was ever weaned save upon her advice. She let it be known when she thought there had been sufficient frost for butchering.

To the folks in the Big House she was deferential, but not servile. The white children obeyed her and often let her wise, white old head do their thinking for them. The White Missus consulted her about canning and preserving. And it was admitted she had saved my cousin's life when he had the croup.

Outstanding Commentators On Current Events At Home And Abroad

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Royal Indigent

Every shriek-easy who has not a previous engagement to take on about something else at the moment will now make a noisy case for Government medical care out of the report from Philadelphia that a destitute woman had her baby unattended, and lost the baby, after six physicians refused to respond to an emergency call.

This report ignored, however, the well-known fact of life that such cries do not come without warning like gunshot wounds and traffic injuries, and avoids consideration of the possibility of contributory negligence by the woman and the man involved.

THE ACCOUNT is incomplete as to why a woman so long forewarned had failed, whether by her own fault or for other reasons, to arrange to receive the benefit of free services which undoubtedly exist not only in so large and enlightened a city as Philadelphia but almost everywhere in this country.

This incompleteness is no ground for an assumption that the woman and the husband did neglect their responsibilities, but neither is it just to suggest, as the account and some comment have suggested, that the six physicians were simply heartless and without excuse. It might not be difficult to find one doctor who would simply refuse to trouble himself with a charity case at an inconvenient hour, but six would have a variety of reasons, some legitimate.

MOREOVER, if the hospital services of Philadelphia are anything like those of New York a woman need not have a baby to bring the ambulance to her door with an interne to do the right thing by her. In New York, at least, the royal indigents who know the facilities which a mothering city provides for their little ills have been known to call an ambulance to fetch a doctor to treat a cold, and there is a verifiable case of a conscientious and miserably overworked young doctor who was turned out of his bed in the middle of the night to do for a lady whose only trouble was that she could not get to sleep.

If the young physician had whanged the lady briskly over the head with a bottle to relieve her trouble that would have been the human thing to do. Instead, however, the youth whipped up something in a glass, gave a dose of the same to her husband—who was wakeful, too—and tucked 'em in, turned out the light and tiptoed away on his career of succor to suffering humankind.

THE SAME DOCTOR had recently been yanked out of bed—they were short-handed in the hospital, as usual, and he was sleeping fast in sprints—to attend a colored woman who was drunk and had cut her foot on a broken glass—nothing serious. But as she sat in the chair and he cleaned and bound her wound the patient maintained a flow of robust comment, the gist of which was that he must be a rotten doctor or he would see that she was in desperate need of rest and recuperation in a good hospital.

But, while there are those so alert to the prerogatives and rights of indigence that they hesitate not to call an ambulance doctor to treat them for hangover, baldness or chronic fatigue, there are many others so shiftless, ignorant and lazy that they neglect quite respectable ills, such as childbearing, until they are suddenly thrown on the doctors' hands as emergencies.

IN THE TOWN of Dayton, Tenn., at the time of the memorable monkey trial, there were three general practitioners, one of them a Hopkins man, who made a practice of returning to Baltimore every year or two to keep up with his work.

There was no reason why anyone in that town should have been susceptible to typhoid, with inoculation to be had for a small price or even for the asking, but in a population of 1,500 there were 15 cases of typhoid, and two of the reporters sent in from Washington later came down with it, too, having neglected, apparently, to maintain their immunity.

NOT TO FIND fault too readily with the press work on the story of the destitute Philadelphia woman, I suggest, nevertheless, that the account left untold facts which were no less important than those it did tell. How came the patient not to have made arrangements for attendance in an expected emergency? Was it any fault of hers or the husband's, or can it be that Philadelphia simply does not give such assistance? If free care is available is it, then, the duty of the doctors and social service workers to go about scouting for patients?

And, finally, what about the six doctors? What were their reasons, and did anyone even trouble to ascertain whether they were already occupied with more forehanded patients or, perhaps, thought it was a case which the ambulance service should take in its stride?

One-Night Stand

The Lawrence (Kansas) audience Saturday night that greeted Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, known affectionately to 130 million people as "Eleanor," was not a good house. The section in the memorial hall of Kansas University Saturday night that rises above the basketball floor was entirely vacant, more than 1,000 seats. The seats on the basketball floor were only fairly well filled. The gallery was packed.

Emporians will know how it looked when they remember how a pretty good show looks from the stage at Albert Taylor Hall with the student activity tickets packing the gallery and the faculty and Emporia townspeople scattered around in the best front seats.

But nevertheless, Eleanor put on a swell show. There is one smart woman. She talked apparently extemporaneously. Probably she has said the same thing so many times she remembers it. If she had a manuscript it was not obvious to the audience.

She has a rich, clear, beautiful, well-modulated voice. The rhythm of her accent is not unlike Theodore Roosevelt's. Indeed, her whole manner resembles his. She was his brother's child, his favorite niece. And that branch of the Roosevelts has marked her for its own, rather than the branch into which she married.

Although the body of her talk was sensible, well-considered and had definite form and compactness, the questions which she answered after the formal talk were most revelatory. She suggested that these questions be sent to her and required they should be written when they were presented. She answered them with a quick, gay candor and unflinching courage which were of the first Rooseveltian quality. The replies delighted the audience.

One question asked—and of course she meets it wherever she goes: "Will the President run for a third term?" She answered: "There are some things that should not be discussed among polite people, even between husbands and wives, and that is one of them."

12,370 Colonists Are Leaving Genoa for Homes in Libya

20,000 Altogether Will Migrate From Italy
Two Babies Born on Trains to Seaports
Homesteads Will Be 30 to 123 Acres

By the Associated Press.

Genoa, Oct. 28.—Twelve thousand three hundred and seventy men, women and children took their quarters tonight aboard nine vessels to sail at noon tomorrow for Libya in one of the largest mass migrations for colonization in modern times.

In all, about 20,000 will sail from Genoa, Naples and Syracuse.

The Genoa number had been increased since the colonists left their homes. Two of the more than 60 expectant mothers bore children while trains were bringing them from inland villages of northern Italy.

Genoa furnished a festive reception and farewell today for the emigrant peasant families. Tonight they were getting acquainted with their shipboard accommodations and with each other.

They will be neighbors on homesteads along the coastal reaches of the north African colony.

Each family already had its homestead allotted and each colonist wore a card and bit of ribbon indicating his destination and the name of the village from which he had come.

The homesteads consist of 30 to 123 acres, depending on the condition of the soil, a three-room dwelling and a well. Each colonist family was required to have not less than three male members between the ages of 16 and 60 and two females. Many of the families were much larger.

Each man was chosen for his strong faith in fascism and his able body. The majority were small land owners or share croppers. Italy's Libyan colonization program calls for migration of another 20,000 persons in 1940.

Aboard the nine ships at Genoa were 30,000 tons of provisions, including 25,000 gallons of wine.

Premier Mussolini, who has said that "an empire cannot be held and defended without a nation which peoples its compactly," planned to review the colonists' flotilla at the island of Vencotene after the Genoa ships and those from Naples join for the Mediterranean journey.

Naples and Syracuse honored colonists leaving there in a fashion similar to the Genoa celebration. The celebrations were emphasized by the fact that today was the sixteenth anniversary of the march on Rome—the birthday of Fascist Italy.

Golf With A Radio Set

("Roy S. Mather, of Atlanta, anxious to hear a football game and play golf at the same time, had a caddy carry a portable radio set all around the course with him."—News item.)

Golfer: What's the distance here, boy?

Caddie: 654 kilocycles.

Golfer: The hole, not the radio station.

Caddie: Oh, it's about 220 yards.

Golfer: O. K. Shut off that radio until I finish my swing. (He dubs it.) Not so good. Tune in on the football again. It's a better game than golf.

Golfer (on the next shot): What should I use here, boy?

Golfer: A what?

Caddie: I'm sorry . . . I was talking about the football contest.

Golfer: Oh, yes, the football game. What happened? Did the fellow score?

Caddie: No, he had a clear field and fell down.

Golfer: He must have looked up.

Golfer (on the next shot): Where's the ball?

Caddie: On the 15-yard line, third down.

Golfer: The golf ball, not the football, you idiot.

Caddie: It's in the trap.

Golfer: It'll be tough getting out of this one.

The radio (as the golfer addresses the ball in the trap): Now, folks, I'll let you hear the crowd cheering . . .

Golfer: Don't cheer; I may not make it.

Radio: It's a wonderful sight . . . everybody is happy and gay.

Golfer (dubbing another): That's what you think!

Radio: It's been a fine game so far with plenty of scoring.

Golfer (taking his fifth in the sand): Plenty of scoring is right!

Radio: So far it's been a good, clean game . . .

Golfer: Clean, but not good! How do I stand now?

Caddie: You've had six in the trap.

Radio: Yale has the ball and will now kick.

Golfer: Maybe that's what I'd better do if I'm ever going to get the ball out of here. (He kicks it onto the green.)

Radio: I can't tell just what happened. The officials are in a huddle. I think there will be a penalty on that play.

Golfer (startled): And I didn't think anybody saw me!

(The curtain will be lowered to denote a lapse of 15 minutes, during which the golfer takes 12 putts.)

Radio (as the thirteenth putt goes by the cup): It's over! It's over!

Golfer (angrily): I know it! (There is another interval.)

Golfer: (finally sinking the putt): There! I'm glad that's finished.

Radio: The umpire has picked up the ball and is bringing it back 15 yards.

Golfer (swooning): Help!

The Third Consecutive Term

IN HIS DISCUSSION of a third term at the Herald Tribune Forum Mr. Rexford Tugwell said that "there is a good deal of loose talk about 'tradition.' I do not know exactly what makes a tradition." Mr. Tugwell ought to know. When there is an unwritten rule of action which has never been broken, it is not loose talk to say that the rule rests on a tradition and that it is a very strong tradition.

It is so strong a tradition that only once in American history has the possibility of a third continuous term come within sight of being practical politics. That was in 1876, toward the end of Gen. Grant's second term, and so deep was the opposition that the House of Representatives passed a resolution denouncing the suggestion as "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions." There was no serious attempt to nominate Grant for a third consecutive term.

FOUR YEARS LATER, after he had been out of office during the Administration of President Hayes, Grant came very near to being renominated. In the Republican Convention of 1880, he was the leading candidate until the thirty-sixth ballot. At that he failed. For, while the tradition against letting the same man be President three times is not so strong as the tradition against three consecutive terms, it was, nevertheless, strong enough to stop Grant, who, according to Senator Foraker, would otherwise have been nominated by acclamation.

With the exception of Grant in 1876, no one has even tried to be nominated for a third consecutive term. Washington, Jefferson and Jackson could easily have been nominated and elected. They refused. Coolidge might have been. But he refused. Theodore Roosevelt did run for a third term. But that was in 1912, after he had been out of office four years. In 1908 he refused to be a candidate for a third consecutive term.

THE ACTUAL SITUATION then is this: There is nothing in the Constitution to prevent a President from being elected three or four or five times in a row. But there is an unbroken tradition for more than two terms against his being nominated in a row, and an almost unbroken tradition against his being a candidate for three terms even if they are not consecutive. This means that while a President could be re-elected, the circumstances would have to be exceptional and the reasons for re-electing him would have to be overwhelmingly strong.

The advocates of a third consecutive term would have to show that there existed a national emergency of the gravest kind. One can imagine such an emergency. Had Lincoln, for example, lived, had the Civil War still continued at the close of his second term, the case for a third term might have been compelling. But unless the case is compelling, there is no case at all for a third consecutive term.

It may be asked how we shall know when the compelling case arises. If ever the compelling case arises, we shall recognize it easily enough. The President in office will be renominated without serious opposition in his own party, and re-elected without more than nominal opposition from the other party. It will be self-evident to the great mass of the people that the emergency is too great to risk a change of administration.

EXCEPT IN A SITUATION so extremely critical that it has never yet appeared in American history, the objection to the third consecutive term is, it seems to me, quite unanswerable. Once you remove the rule against three terms in succession, you have, of course, removed the rule against four or five terms. This would literally revolutionize the fundamental character of the American Presidency. For whereas now our political system is based on the expectation that the President's power is limited to a fixed term, the destruction of the rule would mean that a man might be President indefinitely, and that he would be entitled to try to be President indefinitely.

The fact that the same man might be President for, say, 20 years would mean that any one who opposed him was risking his whole political career, and that those who served him faithfully were best serving their own ambitions. A more certain way of destroying independence in American politics, of choking off the rise of new talent, and of cultivating the spirit of subserviency, can hardly be imagined. If a man might be President indefinitely, is it not evident that only the very bold would dare to oppose him and that the ambitious would have every incentive to court him?

TO RECOGNIZE the evils that this would bring, it is not necessary to declaim about the danger of monarchy or the danger of dictatorship. The certain evil would be a profound impairment of the party system, and a devitalization of the democratic process.

A man who might be President indefinitely would be a man whom it was at once too dangerous to oppose and too profitable to support. We must remember that politicians are rarely saints and heroes, that they are just ordinary ambitious men. What man of normal ambitions would care to criticize a President who might never during the critic's career cease to be President? What normally ambitious man would fail to ask himself whether his best chance of advancing himself did not lie in taking orders from the man who was already in office? Is it not clear that to break the rule is to change the inner spirit of the American system of government?

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have been faithful to the precedent established by Washington and Jefferson, because every time it is seriously questioned they realize again that the rule is not based upon an arbitrary and irrational prejudice, but upon a deep wisdom in the way men behave. Not every rule that Washington and his associates laid down has survived. They were not infallible and the force of the tradition against the third term does not rest upon the belief that they were infallible.

The tradition rests upon the conviction that in this important matter they were right. The precedent has become a tradition because whenever the question is seriously considered, the reasons which convinced Washington, Jefferson and Jackson are found to be as compelling as they ever were. For it is one of the certain truths about popular government that the term of the Chief Executive must in all normal conditions be regarded as fixed at a definite limit. If there is no limit and if it is not fixed, the channels of normal opposition and of orderly succession are no longer as open as they must be if a democratic republic is to continue.

Tablet to Be Unveiled At Site of Church Ruins

Winchester, Va., Oct. 28.—Services are being arranged for the dedication on the afternoon of Sunday, November 6, of a bronze tablet marking the ruins of the first Lutheran Church, which stand in Mount Hebron Cemetery, here.

Judge Philip Williams, of Winchester, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address. The Rev. Carl A. Honeycutt, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, will be in charge of the ceremonies. Other pastors co-operating will be Dr. S. L. Flickinger, of Centenary Reformed Church and the Rev. W. J. Finck. The tablet will be unveiled by Miss Mary Elizabeth Miller.

Newswriters And Mr. Dies

By Mark Sullivan

Possible Prejudice?

CHAIRMAN DIES, of the Congressional committee investigating un-American activities, complains that from the beginning a "campaign of misrepresentation, ridicule and sarcasm was conducted by those who hoped to discredit the investigation."

As to the Administration, Congressman Dies can support his charge with at least three specifications. He can show that President Roosevelt and two members of his Cabinet have made statements about the committee which include ridicule and show hostility. It is certain the Administration does not like this committee and what it is doing.

Mr. Dies has also charged that part of the press has tried to "discredit" the committee, has printed "sarcastic articles" about it, has "obscured" its work. What any writer says about the committee might have either of two motives. It might arise from a motive of the sort Mr. Dies implies. Or it might be a completely sincere expression of the writer's feeling.

I KNOW that some writers who have no reason for prejudice against Mr. Dies or his committee, who write about this subject in the same spirit in which they would write about any other public subject, have criticized the committee. They have written that the Dies committee sometimes listens to and gives publicity to statements unsupported by proof, that the committee does not make preliminary investigation to substantiate allegations which witnesses are permitted to make.

I do not think the Dies committee is any more to be criticized on the score of its procedure than other Congressional investigating committees, notably the one a few years ago headed by Senator, now Justice, Black. However, two wrongs do not make a right. If any newspaper writer has a sincere conviction that the Dies committee follows an improper procedure, such a writer cannot be criticized for saying so.

LET US TURN to the type of criticism which, if it exists, Mr. Dies is justified in complaining about. Early in the committee's hearings a witness before it was Mr. J. B. Matthews, who described himself as formerly "more closely associated with the Communist Party's united front movements than any other individual in this country." Mr. Matthews alluded to a newspaper columnist, Mr. Heywood Broun.

Mr. Matthews quoted a conversation in which, he alleged, Mr. Broun said he "was resigning from the Socialist Party in order to have greater freedom to work with the Communists."

To this Mr. Broun took exception. He asked the privilege of making a statement before the committee. Mr. Broun said, in part:

"I quit the Socialist ranks because I was irked by party discipline . . . I am against fascism . . . I am not a Communist and I never have been a Communist."

IN MR. BROUN'S statement there is a curious differentiation. He says, "I am against fascism." He does not say, "I am against communism." His statement about communism is, "I am not a Communist and I never have been a Communist."

This differentiation in form of statement may be merely accidental. Mr. Broun may be as much against communism as he is "against fascism." I have no proof to support any interpretation contrary to this. If Congressman Dies had questioned Mr. Broun he might have found out the precise shade of thought Mr. Broun holds. Common judgement speaks of him as quite radical. It is easy to understand how Congressman Dies may feel that Mr. Broun's subsequent criticism of the committee was based on prejudice.

MR. BROUN is more than an Individual writer. He is the founder and head of an organization, the American Newspaper Guild. Many members of the guild, in the course of their work, report, transmit and edit news about the Dies investigating committee. Further, the Newspaper Guild is an affiliate of C. I. O. and some of the Dies committee's hearings have included charges that in some of C. I. O.'s industrial divisions there are communist tendencies.

The Newspaper Guild might reasonably give thought to whether, in the interest of independence and freedom of the press, it is wise for an organization of newspaper writers to be affiliated with C. I. O., or with any other organization or sector of thought whatever.

More Munichs?

By Barnet Nover

The Long Road Of Capitulation

THE MUNICH settlement was not the first, although undoubtedly the most spectacular, capitulation by the democracies to the totalitarian dictators. The habit of bowing to threats of force began as long ago as the fall of 1931 when Japanese troops seized Mukden and in so doing tore up the Nine Power Treaty, the Briand-Kellogg Pact and the League Covenant. It has continued with only rare interruptions from that day to this.

Some day this habit of surrender will be broken. But there is little evidence that this day has yet dawned. On the contrary, there is much to substantiate the belief that having made peace with Germany at Czechoslovakia's expense, Great Britain and France will not be averse to making peace with Italy at the expense of Republican Spain and with Japan at the expense of China!

A DEAL concerning Spain appears to be definitely in the offing. The stage for it was set as far back as the Anglo-Italian agreement of last April. Although dealing with a wide variety of questions at issue between the two countries, the treaty's going into force was made contingent on the withdrawal by Italy of a substantial number of its "volunteers" in Spain.

At that time the presumption was that it would not be long before the treaty would be implemented. In London's opinion it was only a question of weeks, anyway, before Franco's victory would be complete. It was no doubt for this reason that the Anglo-Italian agreement provided that those Italian troops not already withdrawn by the time the war ended were to be withdrawn as soon after the war as possible.

FRANCO'S dream of victory, however, has never materialized. Quite the contrary. Since the Spanish republican offensive on the Ebro last July, Franco's military prospects have steadily been dimmed.

Not long ago the diplomatic correspondent of the London Times declared that "the superiority of the loyalist over the rebel army is no longer contested by any serious observer." He adds that "there has been a complete change of opinion among military experts on this subject. All the skepticism that was poured, and to some extent understandably, on the loyalist army has now been turned into great respect."

In view of this it is possible to believe that were Franco to lose his foreign "volunteers," were the non-intervention agreement loyally observed by all signatories or, alternately, were Republican Spain permitted to get ample supplies from the outside, the Barcelona government would emerge victorious.

ON THE BASIS of both logic and self-interest, therefore, Great Britain and France would seem to have every reason for reversing their positions on the Spanish issue. The great victory won by the Fascist powers in central Europe would, in part, be offset by a Fascist defeat in the Iberian peninsula.

As it happens, logic plays little part in the calculations of the London and Paris governments. The moving spirit of their policies is fear. Since Mussolini has repeatedly declared that Italy will countenance nothing but a Franco victory in Spain, they may let him have that victory or at least a compromise in the long run tantamount to victory, rather than create a new cleavage between the democracies and the totalitarian states. And the Duce is willing to play ball with them at least to the extent of ostentatiously withdrawing a certain number—announced as from 10,000 to 15,000—of Italian volunteers.

For Great Britain this gesture may be sufficient to put the Anglo-Italian agreement into force. Then Franco will be granted belligerent rights and with warships borrowed from his Fascist allies could carry out an effective blockade of Republican Spain which he has thus far been unable to do and which might starve the Barcelona government into submission or at least into the acceptance of a compromise.

HAVING SOUGHT to justify Munich on the ground that it paves the way for a real settlement in Europe, Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier are obviously loath to destroy the chances of such a settlement by a strong stand in Spain. Capitulation is easier.

What holds true with respect to Spain holds true with at least equal force with respect to China. For there the triumph of the Japanese, who now hold every port, every major railroad and every important city east of Hankow, is, outwardly at least, a very impressive one. Rather than see any more of their intersts in the Far East destroyed by an all-powerful Japan they may make a deal with that country to save what they can of their holdings.

IN THIS LATTER connection the note sent by the United States to Tokyo on October 6, but not made public until this week, has a special significance. It makes it apparent that, regardless of what Great Britain and France may do, the United States is not prepared to sanction a capitulation to the Japanese. And, as it happens, this Nation is in a position by the exercise of financial and economic pressure alone to make Japan pay heavily for the destruction of American rights and interests in the Far East.

There was a disposition, at first, for the Administration to accept the Chamberlain interpretation of the significance of the Munich accord, and even to take some credit for the peaceful, if Draconian, solution of the Czechoslovakian crisis.

That mood of qualified hopefulness appears to be passing, if President Roosevelt's radio speech of October 25 is any indication. For no opposition leader in Great Britain or France has better stated than he has the essential menace of Munich when he said that, "Peace by fear has no higher or more enduring quality than peace by the sword," and added that "There can be no peace if the reign of law is to be replaced by a recurrent sanctification of sheer force."

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks seem directly pointed at what happened at Munich last month. But it is fair to surmise that it was prompted even more by fear of what may happen in the Far East in the not very distant future.

'Little Women' Is Revived at Metropolitan

Is Perfectly Cast
Hepburn Is Star

"LITTLE WOMEN." RKO-Radio picturization of the story by Louisa Alcott, adapted to the screen by Sarah Y. Mason, starring Katharine Hepburn, with Joan Bennett, Frances Dee, Jean Parker, Paul Lukas, Edna May Oliver, Douglass Montgomery, Henry Stephenson, Spring Byington, Samuel Hinds, Mabel Colcord, John Davis Lodge and Nydia Westman. Directed by George Cukor. Revived at the Metropolitan Theater. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

By bringing back "Little Women," the Metropolitan Theater management accords moviegoers a last chance to see a picture that received universal critical praise and then went on to become a great boxoffice success.

"Little Women" not only perpetuates the beloved story of Louisa Alcott in screen form, but offers an engrossing picture of a vanished American era. After all, the period of the bustle, the oil lamp and the tintype had its own special fascinations. Some of its favorite sentimental approaches seem strange to moderns—but that was the way they looked at things back in 1860. Thus "Little Women" may be said to be a costume piece—but it's one of the best.

The four sisters, Jo, Amy, Beth and Meg, are represented by a quartet of Hollywood's top-flight young actresses—Katharine Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Jean Parker and Frances Dee. Miss Hepburn, as Jo, is what they called the "new woman" many years ago, a hot-tempered, boyish, loving young person.

A Self-Portrait?

Jo is given to scribbling, and the idea has grown up that she is a self-portrait of Louisa Alcott. When "Little Women" was published, Jo was regarded as quite a radical girl.

Joan Bennett, as Amy, and Frances Dee, as Meg, are at their best in demure and sweet roles with a touch of mischief. Jean Parker has never before or since had such a lovely role as that of shy little Beth, marked not to linger in this world for long.

The story of "Little Women" is known too well for recapitulation. Or if there are those who do not know it, they should have the pleasure of learning it freshly and in full from the picture. It is a pretty commingling of smiles and tears and giggles fragrant as an old-fashioned garden, innocent as a nestling. The four sisters in bangs and pinafores all might have stepped from ancient daguerreotypes—except for those generous glimpses of pantalettes when Jo takes a tumble or two.

Is Quaintly Staged

The settings are an undiluted delight in quaintness and fullness of detail. The knick-knack burdened what-nots, the graceful and uncomfortable sofas, the rococo chairs, the general air of black walnut elegance—it's all pretty grand even though you'd shudder at the thought of actually living with such dood-dads.

An excellent musical short presents Clyde Lucas, brother Lyn Lucas and the Lucas orchestra, all doing their special brand of melody. Trick camera angles and glimpses of studio mechanics, in getting lighting and sound effects, add a definite novelty. A scientific short entitled "Unusual Occupations" shows the young lady officially authorized to sign President Roosevelt's name, also other folks with strange jobs.

The newsreel is enriched with flashes of the latest sweepstakes winners, also a glimpse of the Paris automobile show and the glass 1939 car that is France's latest contribution to civilization.

RKO-Keith's

"Inside the Maginot Line," the new March of Time issue which appeared on RKO-Keith's screen yesterday, must be seen to be believed.

In it, the unique March of Time camera takes us on a tense, revealing trip into the very core of France's subterranean fort on the German front. Provision is made for 250,000 men to remain at least a year, resisting attack from land or air. Steel, cement and military discipline make up this underground world upon which France rests her hope of immunity from invasion.

A background of military conscription also is given in this revealing story of preparedness.

Beginning its third week at Keith's, Deanna Durbin's latest picture, "That Certain Age" is achieving a rather enviable longevity of its own. With understandable naturalness, the delectable Deanna plays a 15-year-old, hovering between childhood's friendships and grown-up romances.

In her support is juvenile Jackie Cooper, suave John Halliday, sleek Irene Rich and amusing Melvyn Douglas.

It is a picture not only for all good Durbanites, but for all who appreciate clean, charming entertainment.

Berry and Rooney Race to Hit in 'Stablemates'; 'Brother Rat' Remains Peppy Comedy of Youth

Is Story of Tracks Has Emotional Tug
Stage Bill Clicks
At Loew's Capitol

"STABLEMATES." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by William Thiele and Reginald Owen, adapted to the screen by Leonard Praskins and Richard Maibaum, costarring Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney, with Arthur Hohl, Margaret Hamilton, Marjorie Gateson, Oscar O'Shea, Minor Watson, Jennie Morris, Spencer Charters and Sam McDaniel. Directed by Sam Wood. At Loew's Capitol.

While thrilling race sequences lend the picture a high pitch of excitement, it is by no means the ordinary race track melodrama that Loew's Capitol Theater presents this week in "Stablemates." It is, rather, the deeply emotional study of a great devotion that springs up between an apprentice boy, who comes into ownership of a potentially great race horse, and a paddock roustabout, intent on evading the law for past transgressions and keeping himself saturated with alcohol.

BELL

The derelict is a former veterinarian rated among the foremost of his profession; the stable kid is an orphan whose love for horseflesh makes the track seem the only logical source of an agreeable and illustrious career. The two meet under circumstances that are not too promising, but from their common interest in thoroughbreds there springs an attachment that progresses to the point of Mickey's adoption by Tom Terry and the satisfaction of the law through their complete devotion each to the other.

Such is the real groundwork of the story of "Stablemates"—by turns humorous, thrilling and infinitely pathetic in the view of any susceptible sentimentalist. Embellishing the tale, of course, are many of the excitements of the major tracks and a considerable amount of that maligned quality usually stigmatized by the name of "hokum." Hokum or not, it produces a final fadeout that may safely be guaranteed to exert a sizable tug at the heartstrings.

Stars Ideally Cast

The costellar roles are intrusted to the two contemporary actors competent to do them the fullest justice before the cameras. Wallace Beery, in the role of Tom Terry, finds himself confronted with opportunities that closely resemble those he encountered in "The Champ" some years ago, with Jackie Cooper the earlier counterpart of the currently ascendant Mickey Rooney. The prodigious Master Rooney has further opportunity to demonstrate that he is perhaps the most versatile and most reliable of the younger actors soaring to stardom on the screen. The others in the cast do not particularly matter, although all are capable players when intrusted with tasks commensurate with their abilities—especially Arthur Hohl, Margaret Hamilton, Marjorie Gateson and Minor Watson, a well remembered former member of the National Theater Players.

There are high points of comedy as well as sentiment in "Stablemates." Mr. Beery's adventures with his second-hand automobile, his amorous exploits with the scheming country widow, who sets her cap and her late husband's wardrobe for him, and Mickey's shrewd conversion of Terry to the cause of salvaging a seeming equine wreck provide many robust laughs; the bitter consequences of Terry's earlier defiance of the law are no less productive of moments when many handkerchiefs are whipped out by the audience. The picture has a double punch and is extremely well directed by Sam Wood and effectively photographed to do ample justice to some of the most famous racing plants in the country. "Human interest" is the term usually employed to describe the fundamental narrative unfolded in "Stablemates"—"hokum" applies only to some of its trimmings.

Haakon Triumphs Again

The stage portion of the bill at the Capitol this week is distinguished by the presence of Paul Haakon, the brilliant young dancer, in the headline spot. Mr. Haakon's present repertoire consists largely of dances Washington has seen before, but they are executed with such admirable skill and grace as to seem always new—the "Spanish tap dance," the "Portuguese sailor" number, the "Russian sailor" and the rest. The star is again assisted by Eunice Healey, a young artiste who divides her skill equally between the classic ballet and modern taps. Together they are close to overwhelming in the perfection of their work.

George Beatty, an agreeable singing monologist, is back at the Capitol to serve as master of ceremonies and contribute an ace comedy turn of his own. One of his songs is a bit on the shady side, but he is a facile clown, even so. Among the heaviest applause winners also are the Frazee Sisters, familiar songstresses, whose nicely blended voices and tricky arrangements met with immediate approval at the hands of yesterday's second audience. The Chester Hale Capitol Dancers once more offer colorful background for the vaudeville bill, concluding their routines with Mr. Hale's favorite "Can-Can," a naughty recrudescence of the wild spirit of those "Gay Nineties."

Phil Lampkin's "Radio Impressions" overture and the Fox Movietone News complete an entertainment that yesterday's audiences distinctly approved.

Costly Negligee

Joan Bennett wear a negligee in "Artists and Models Abroad" that is one of the must costly garments of its kind ever made. It is woven of spun gold.

She Was First

Maxine Sullivan, dusky songstress, now making her debut in "St. Louis Blues," featuring Dorothy Lamour and Lloyd Nolan, was the first singer to swing traditional music. Her syncopated rendition of "Loch Lomond" started the current vogue.

All of the essential elements that contributed to the sensational success of "Brother Rat" on the stage have been preserved in the Warner Brothers' film version of the John Monks, jr. and Fred F. Finklehoffe comedy of undergraduate life at the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, Va. Not all, of course, are quite so emphasized as they were in the George Abbott original, but, in the main, this spontaneous bit of sagacious nonsense remains a fast-moving, hilarious and, at times, emotionally tense study of perplexed youth, flaming romance and service school discipline.

The opening scenes of the picture, disclosing scenes at V. M. I. that are as stirring as they are authentic, place the audience — at least in Washington—in an immediately receptive mood for all that follows. All that follows, in a manner of speaking, is plenty. The cadets are in perpetual financial difficulties, a crucial baseball game impends, the girls are coming down for assembly—and the star pitcher of the team is married and his wife about to have a baby!! Out of this piling up of harassments, the authors have concocted a breezy story that already is known to all seasoned theatergoers throughout the United States.

Eddie Albert Steals Show

The casting for the greater part is excellent. The most meddlesome and reckless of the upper classmen, Billy Randolph, is enthusiastically, but not too realistically, played by Wayne Morris, who, one somehow feels, never attended a military school. His methodical and conscientious roommate, Dan Crawford, is seriously and effectively impersonated by Ronald Reagan. Recruited from the original stage cast, Eddie Albert garners a preponderance of the acting honors, being crowded only by William Tracey, also from the stage, in the role of the persecuted "brother rat," Misto Bottome. Romantic interest is sustained by Priscilla Lane, not so importantly cast as in "Four Daughters," Jane Bryan and Jane Wyman, with Miss Bryan rather stealing the honors, along with Eddie Albert, as his secret wife, desperately alarmed by the predicament in which they find themselves. The character of Mrs. Brooks, the dowager baseball fan of the stage comedy, is reduced to a position of distinctly minor worth both by the adapters and the playing of Jessie Busley.

Military authority is upheld by Henry O'Neill, as the commandant, and Gordon Oliver, in the part of Capt. "Lacedrawers" Rogers, and Johnny Davis explodes all over the place as the excitable and irresponsible A. Furman Townsend, jr. Louise Beavers inherits the part of the servant girl and Olin Howland that of the taxi driver who doubles in the role of betting commissioner and liaison officer with the pawnshops.

In view of the fidelity with which the V. M. I. locale and atmosphere has been captured by the cameras, it is not surprising that "Brother Rat" should have been an overwhelming success in Lexington upon the recent occasion of its world premiere, or that that estimate of its worth should be reflected in the National Capital.

Production Manager Harry Anger has supplemented "Brother Rat" with a stage bill that rollicks noisily along in true college spirit. It is co-headlined by Herbie Kay's Orchestra and Eleanore Whitney, Paramount dancing star, in person. The Kay instrumentalists lean decisively to the "swing" side in their band numbers, but provide gentle harmonies when converted into a glee club. "Fuzzy" Combs, "scat" singer; Wynne Fair, the orchestra's blonde vocalist, and King Harvey, tenor, do the soloing.

Eleanore Whitney's appearance seemed altogether too brief, but did encompass two of her swiftly rhythmic tap numbers—one with orchestral accompaniment and one without any music whatsoever—and a moment or two at the microphone, during which she did a bit of an impersonation of a typical Hollywood "glamour girl" and then thanked the customers for the enthusiasm with which they had greeted her. Miss Whitney is an accomplished young woman, making her first stage appearance of the season at the Earle this week. She is off to an excellent start.

Marian Belett and the English Brothers likewise score in an interval of rough-house dancing and acrobatics, in which Miss Belett seems to take an awful beating and like it! The Earle Roxyettes, among their numerous routines, this week dance out tunes on ankle sleighbells—a good trick even if you can't do it with Roxyette precision.

In addition to the Paramount News, the Earle's high-power program includes "The Declaration of Independence," a timely short subject depicting the circumstances of the signing of that mighty document. It deserves to be seen.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 28.—When my son, Bill, offered to give me a day's rest and do my column, I accepted with alacrity. Now I'm torn between maternal pride and fear. This is his maiden voyage in printer's ink, and my fear is that it may be so good you won't want mine again. Here is it:

HEDDA HOPPER

On watching my mother, whom hereafter I shall refer to as "the Hopper," work herself up into a maniacal frenzy trying to fill Hedda Hopper's Hollywood with something suitable, I decided it was about time she had a day off to lie in bed, relax and read a good book—she's got one. Very sympathetically considering her hair tearing condition, I told her of my intention and suggested the above remedy. She was delighted and assured me that she certainly would go to bed—that she needed a rest. Whereupon, she dropped everything and left for the other room.

Feeling very pleased, I sat down to see what I could do. I had no more than picked up a pencil when she appeared, thanked me very much and was gone. We didn't see her again all day. The way people rest these days is something.

After I had been seated for about an hour, without the brain turning over, I decided this "day-off" business was not so hot. I have seen her arise in the morning and wonder what was going to be the content of her column for the day . . . and I have at times chuckled at her discomfiture. But now the worm has turned and I am not laughing.

Considering subject matter, I figured the most logical theme to write about was the Hopper. This in itself is a gargantuan task and worthy of a book the comparative size of "Gone With the Wind," which, barring legal infringements, would be an apt title. When one earnestly desires to see her it is most customary to find that she has gone with the wind!

Realizing that it would take a much better man that I to do justice to her in writing, I decided to let it go and turn to a much less intricate subject.

It's worth a laugh to witness the construction of Hedda Hopper's Hollywood. This, of course, when I'm fortunate enough to do so. Usually I'm kicked, quite rightly, out of the room.

Behind a card table, littered with everything imaginable, with an energetic Dachshund parked spasmodically in her lap, and dressed in the slap-happiest concoction ever seen outside the confines of a circus, sits the Hopper, searching frantically amid the debris on the card table for her glasses. These found, and with the aid of a few Shakespearean gestures, the column is tentatively begun.

I might pause here to say that though my mother's acting ability on stage and screen has never been questioned, during the writing of her column it reaches supreme heights, which, barring the advent of her writing, she probably never would have attained.

Then there are, of course, those times when she will turn to her charming secretary and ask her to get whoois on the telephone. The secertary, hardened by this time to anything the Hopper has in mind, keeps right on typing. Fifteen minutes later the Hopper will look up and ask: "Have you gotten whoosis yet?" "I'm not quite sure, Miss Hopper, who whoosis is," meekly replies the secretary. "Oh, you know, the man who phoned me yesterday while you were in the other room." This crisis is put aside when lunch is announced, and forgotten when it's over.

Columbia

"Sing, You Sinners" is the picture which Bing Crosby should have made long ago, for it fits his personality like one of these new-fangled three-dimension gloves. As Joe, the lazy brother of a trio of boys belonging to Elizabeth Patterson, an easy-going do-nothing, who finds himself at the race track, Crosby romps home a winner.

Fred MacMurray is the one who works and Donald O'Connor the kid member of the triad of brothers. Fred wants to marry Ellen Drew, but feels he should stick with the family until Joe takes hold. Joe does take hold, tight, like a turtle in a thunderstorm, once he gets fitted for a race track plaid coat.

We like Bing Crosby, feeling that he has a charm unequalled by anyone else in his class. Therefore, we are prejudiced in his favor. Life magazine hurled some hosannahs at him for his handling of this role, however, and chances are they hold no stakes in his movie company. His other pictures have been sticky, oftentimes, with Bing mooing to a gorgeously dumb little thing. This time he teams with MacMurray and little Donald for some smooth singing which is effortless and entertaining.

Crosby is our dish, and "Sing You Sinners" is elegantly served at the Columbia after a week at Loew's Capitol.

Dick Tracy gets involved with a super-special welding machine in the latest chapter of his harrowing adventures. That man knows everything, handles every situation, surmounts every obstacle. Right now he is in a pretty tough spot which will require some fast extricating. We bet on Tracy.

Besides the headlines caught in the newsreels, there is a fairly interesting historical short about Marshal Ney, Napoleon's chief strategist, who might be that school teacher in that grave in North Carolina. Interesting surmising for the historically inclined.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 28.

JIM FARLEY: You described Tom Dewey as a "10% racket buster" and said that the Federal prosecutors, instead of Dewey, eliminated "Gurrah" Shapiro from the racket scene . . . Last night "Gurrah" secretly was removed from the Federal prison and brought to the Tombs—presaging an indictment and trial for murder . . . District Attorney Geoghan: The bondsman involved in that $15,000 fake bond before Justice Nova is initialed L. C. The lawyer who vouched for it is initialed J. N. . . . Sigmund Freud: A national magazine soon will publish a psychoanalysis of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin—made by your colleague, Dr. Jung.

JOCK WHITNEY: Your ace jockey, Sammy Renick, whose contract to ride for you expires next month, will not renew. He's leaving for Hollywood to accept one of two offers—to ride for Elizabeth Arden or for Louis B. Mayer . . . Erskine Caldwell: Sam Grisman, who has held a 25% interest in the production of "Tobacco Road," yesterday sold that interest to his partners therein, Jack Kirkland and Harry Oshrin . . . Westbrook Pegler: Life magazine, which expected to publish Heywood Broun's article about you and your article about Broun, turned down Broun's article about you. Heywood punched too hard.

TOMMY MANVILLE: Joe Howard, the song writer who wrote "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?"—and who was the Robert Taylor of his day—has had seven wives, and now is being sued by one of them . . . The suit will be settled shortly. In consideration of the lady's dropping her action, Howard will assign to her all the rights in his forthcoming autobiography—"The Seven Wives."

COL. LINDBERGH: Paul Wendel, whose hoax-confession postponed Hauptmann's execution, has brought a $450,000 suit against the 12 men involved in his kidnaping, including the Ellis Parkers. This week a motion to dismiss the 50-page complaint will be brought by Attorney John Backer for failing to notice the case for trial . . . Blossom Seeley: Billy Rose yesterday signed your husband, Benny Fields, for the next Casa Manana show. For the first time, Benny will appear on Broadway—in blackface . . . Mrs. Ogden Reid: Lou Gehrig's speech, before your Herald Tribune Forum, was ghost-written by your sports columnist, Richards Vidmer.

GOV. LEHMAN: Alexander Woollcott is flying from Chicago to New York Sunday evening to make a 15-minute address in your behalf . . . Columbia Broadcasting System: The radio entertainers now are in the last stages of contract negotiations. But watch the monopoly investigation in Washington and see whether you're involved . . . Adolf Hitler: The bookshop at 280 Park avenue is offering copies of your book, "Mein Kampf," for sale. Purchasers will find it—in the department labeled "mystery."

CRITICS' CIRCLE: Robert E. Sherwood, author of "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois," lectured at the Group Theater Symposium and told of the difficulty he had with one particular portion—which he altered after the opening night . . . "I wasn't satisfied with that particular moment in the play," said Sherwood . . . "Is that the moment," asked one of the audience, "which John Mason Brown, the critic, didn't like?" . . . "No," replied Sherwood. "The moment which John Mason Brown didn't like—was the moment the curtain went up."

JOE LOUIS: Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight champion, is being sued by his lawyer for nonpayment of a $75 fee . . . Irving Berlin: The association of music publishers in Germany, where the officials won't pay royalties to American composers, have asked ASCAP to inform them as to the reasons why Nazi music isn't played in this country.

WILL HAYS: Sam Levene deserves an Academy Award for his work in "The Mad Miss Minton." . . . Wesley Stout: Reuben Maury, Capt. Patterson's editorial writer for the News, is writing editorials for Collier's.

ELSA MAXWELL: "Cafe Society," Paramount's newest film, is now having its first set built. More than 60 men are needed to help build the set. That's more people than could be found in some of the smartest cafes these last few days . . . Newspaper Guild: Ed Frayne, who resigned as sports editor of the Journal-American, is being succeeded by Max Kase. Frayne will join Mike Jacobs.

Czechs Press Italy, Reich to Be Arbiters

Ask Quick Decision
Note Sent to Hungary
20th Birthday Noted

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Oct. 28.—Czechoslovakia sought quick decisions from Germany and Italy tonight on proposals that they serve as arbitrators in the Hungarian minority dispute.

The Czech government suggested in a new note to Hungary that both Prague and Budapest sound out the two powers within 24 hours on their willingness to accept the role of peacemakers.

This suggestion was made in response to Hungary's latest note in which she agreed to German-Italian arbitration provided Czechoslovakia approved of certain methods of procedure.

The Hungarian issue found Czechoslovakia in no mood for celebration of her twentieth birthday today. A brief radio speech in which Premier General Jan Syrovy told the nation to refrain from "wasting your time talking politics" was the only anniversary event, in contrast with the big manifestations of previous years.

From the border came reports of approximately a half million men still under arms. The army general staff reported additional minor skirmishes along the frontier. The flare-ups were charged to Hungarian terrorists.

May Yield Land at Once

Budapest, Oct. 28 (AP).—Czechoslovakia notified Hungary tonight she was giving consideration to a Hungarian demand for immediate occupation of undisputed areas of the neighboring republic.

The Czechoslovak note, the eleventh diplomatic exchange between the two governments in their minority dispute, said the Hungarian military attache at Prague had been called in to discuss technical questions involved in the occupation.

Hungarian authorities expressed expectations of occupying the undisputed area early next week.

decision to settle by friendly negotiations any difficulties during the ten-year period.

Big problems, including the question of Germany's colonial demands, will be taken up as rapidly as possible.

Il Duce Optimistic

Rome, Oct. 28 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini expressed today unusual optimism on prospects for appeasement in Europe before a crowd celebrating the sixteenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome while conversations were started between the partners in the Rome-Berlin axis.

"The clearing of the political horizon is becoming accentuated and is continually becoming more vast and promising, he said in a brief address from the balcony of Palazzo Venezia.

While he spoke, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop conferred with Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano. Hungary's claim on Czechoslovakia for Ruthenia was among the subjects discussed, and usually well-informed circles expected Rome and Berlin would agree on a settlement by plebiscites.

Labor Backs British Arms

London, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Labor Party tonight indorsed the creation of ministries of defense and supply which have been advocated to speed up Great Britain's rearmament.

A Labor Party manifesto, attacking the government's foreign and domestic policies, declared the country must be made safe from air attack and that arms necessary for defense and fulfillment of Britain's obligations as a member of the League of Nations must be provided.

Parliament will wind up the business of the present session by Friday. The government is expected to announce the effective date of the Anglo-Italian treaty, perhaps November 15.

Captain of Liner Describes 10-Hour Battle With Flames

Praises His Crew
Passengers Calm
Chief Officer Hero

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Fire at sea, the bane of all seafaring men, caused no undue alarm among the crew members of the German liner Deutschland, and many of the 591 passengers learned of the fire only after it was extinguished, Capt. Karl Steincke, master of the ship, said tonight as the liner docked.

Steincke said he "had not even the remotest idea" of what caused the fire, and sabotage was not suggested.

The skipper, who displayed a sheaf of testimonials from passengers, gave a vivid description of what happened Tuesday night off the coast of Newfoundland.

"It was shortly after 7:15 p. m. Tuesday," the captain said, "when I was advised of fire in the No. 2 hold forward. I immediately investigated and ordered an alarm sounded in the cabin class. My gallant crew availed themselves of axes, hose and other means of fighting fire. I could not, at that time, tell how big or how intense the fire was.

Holes Cut in Bulkheads

"Steam was blown into the hold, but when the heat neared the fire doors, smoke rose rapidly and I ordered holes cut in the bulkheads and carbon dioxide was forced into the hold.

"In the meantime we tried, but found it impossible, to speak to passenger liners for assistance. Only the Manhattan answered and it was 250 miles away, 12 hours steaming, so its help was out of the question.

"So it was with a heavy heart that I decided to call freighters in the neighborhood whose stations were not occupied. I had the S O S repeated until the automatic alarms on such freighters as were within call were set into action.

"I was conscious of the fact that this created great excitement, especially among relatives and acquaintances of the passengers and crew, but I could not take that into consideration.

Many Ships Responded

"In a short time a whole row of ships answered of which I requested the American Traveler, the Europe of the Norwegian Line and the Collamer for assistance."

"I then stopped sending out SOS signals," the captain continued. "Meantime, I had ordered a small group of the crew to make boats clear so we might be fortified for any emergency. At that time the sea was calm, but unfortunately radio advices from Louisberg, N. S., had said strong southerly winds, even to gale force, were in the offing. This we had to take into account.

"My brave crew under First Officer Alfred Raschke and Chief Engineer Adolf Kolster combatted the fire.

"Third-class passengers were brought to the cabin and tourist class by the purser and a movie show was put on in the tourist salon while a dance was started in the cabin class.

Passengers Not Alarmed

"At no time did the pasesngers show any alarm. Their behavior was exemplary and helped us in battling the situation.

"Through the use of the carbon dioxide, smoke was kept down and First Officer Raschke, donning a smoke helmet, attempted to enter the hold to fight the fire from the inside. He was prevented by the heat and the smoke, however, but he did discover the fire was only between decks on the starboard side.

"We found then, that the carbon dioxide was not quick enough so I ordered holes cut through the decks and with eight stea mhoses, under great presure, we continued our fight.

"Again and again my brave crew were driven back by smoke and gas and 22 men went to the hospital for treatment. First Officer Raschke was overcome four times, but returned voluntarily each time to the task confronting us.

"Finally we found we were making headway. The bulkheads cooled off and the smoke became less.

"Because all of my officers were occupied in fighting the fire my radio operators served as nautical officers. They were magnificent.

"At 3:55 a. m. Wednesday the steamer Europe and at 4 a. m. the American Traveler came alongside. I then dismissed the Collamer because immediate danger was over.

"Fortunately all my officers and 40 per cent of my crew are trained firemen—trained by the Hamburg Fire Department. By 5 a. m. we opened the hatches and fought the fire directly so that by 5:24 a. m. The fire was extinguished and the crew went back to their stations.

"We kept watch on the hold the rest of the trip. The passengers went to bed without exception and many never knew we had a fire. It was a horrid experience but we came through safely."

Nazis Herding Polish Jews Into Camps

ality status of all Poles living abroad, affected about 55,000 Polish Jews in Germany.

Three trains loaded with several thousand Polish Jews arrived at Neubentschen on the German side of the border shortly after 9 p. m. and the Poles started on foot for the frontier 2½ miles away.

Neubentschen railroad officials said it was uncertain, however, whether the Poles had actually crossed the border. The departure of a third train from Berlin was cancelled on police orders, indicating some agreement cancelling the expulsions might be anticipated.

Reich Fears 'Burden'

German authorities indicated the mass deportations would be halted if Poland agreed to extend the Polish passports of these 55,000 Jews and prevent them from becoming persons without a country and a "burden" on the Reich.

Poland assured Germany, it was announced, that any action under the new Polish law, announced on October 6 to be effective in 14 days, would be limited to passport examinations and would not actually involve disfranchisement. In view of this, Poland regarded Germany's action as "premature," it was explained.

Other Nations Act

Other countries having Polish Jewish minorities were taking swift measures to counteract the Polish law and hundreds of Poles whose passports have been taken up arrived at the Polish borders from Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Hungary to be taken into custody immediately by Polish police.

The Italian government announced it was not taking steps similar to Germany's because it is "not interested" in the origin of foreign Jews. Under a recent Fascist decree all foreign Jews who took up residence in Italy since 1919, even though they have acquired Italian citizenship, must leave the country by next March 3 under threat of forceful expulsion.

In Berlin, Polish women were arrested when their men folk could not be found by the police squads. Those rounded up for deportation were allowed to take clothing, blankets and two days' supply of food.

The roundup, according to the German government's orders, must be completed by midnight, 24 hours ahead of the deadline set by the Polish government for the new citizenship registrations.

Suspect Seized For Letters Sent To Sally Clark

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 28 (AP).—A 33-year-old Lynn shoe worker, charged with sending a series of letters to Miss Sally Clark, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, son of the President, was held for observation today.

The man, Peter Harritos, was seized on complaint of Mrs. F. Haven Clark, Sally's mother.

The letters asked financial aid in establishing bowling alleys. Mrs. Clark reported them when the final missive instructed Sally he was "coming out to talk" to her.

The man admitted that he sent the letters and that he also had sent letters to President Roosevelt, Gov. Hurley and other public officials, police say.

G. O. P. Leader Sees Gain of 7 Senate Seats

Politics

ing at a minimum sum losses in all three.

"The trend is our way, particularly in the farm States," insisted the sanguine Townsend, following a check with party leaders in each State.

He predicted Senator Davis (Republican), will win in Pennsylvania against Gov. Earle, and Senator Nye (Republican) will survive in the North Dakota melee.

Best Republican Senate bets to win he listed as Kansas, where Senator McGill is opposed by the Republican, Clyde M. Read; New Hampshire, where Senator Brown is fighting it out with Representative Tobey, Republican; New Jersey, where he gives the edge to former Senator Barbour over Mayor Hague's candidate, William H. L. Ely; South Dakota, where Tom Berry (Democrat), and Chandler Gurney (Republican), are mixing it; Ohio, where Robert A. Taft, son of the former President and Chief Justice, is pressing Senator Bulkley, and Wisconsin, where he calls Senator Duffy a certain loser.

Chief upsets forecast by Townsend were in New York, where he gives John Lord O'Brien a chance to win over Senator Wagner; California, where he thinks Sheridan Downey's "$30 every Thursday" cart will spill; Illinois, where he says Richard J. Lyons' prospects against Representative Lucas have been underestimated, and Indiana, where he says Senator Van Nuys still has a fight to win.

Sees 50 or 60 in House

Besides Van Nuys, Townsend declared two other conservative Democrats, Senator Gillette, in Iowa, and Senator Lonergan, in Connecticut, might fall victims of what he called the Republican "upgrade" in both States.

Townsend stepped out of his role as Senate Republican campaign chairman to predict Republicans will pick up "between 50 and 60" seats in the House. The American Institute of Public Opinion has indicated a minimum Republican House gain of 53 seats, but the House Democratic Campaign Committee still places its maximum House loss at 25.

Republican spokesmen have spotted Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Oregon as brightest for Republican governorship gains. They add as possibilites Kansas, Colorado, Idaho, Wisconsin, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

As the campaign neared a close, speculation still turned on whether President Roosevelt in his Friday night speech would confine his appeal to support of Gov. Lehman and Senator Wagner in New York or express himself in more general terms.

A Republican radio broadcast last night featured Senator Bridges in a frontal attack on New Deal policies and an appeal for "election of independently minded and courageous Republican Senators and Congressmen who will not take their orders from the White House."

Senator Vandenberg will follow tonight with a broadcast from Columbus, Ohio. Earlier a Republican program will be broadcast from eight cities, featuring a relief worker, college students, a grocery clerk, a farmer, a factory worker, a businessman, a doctor and a housewife, Republican headquarters said.

Williamsport Dinner

Dr. John W. Long, president of the Williamport Junior College, will speak tonight at a dinner of the Williamsport Dickinson Seminary and Junior College at Wesley Hall, after the football game between the Junior College and George Washington University.

Dies to Tell How New Deal Fought Inquiry

testimony accusing Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan of "treasonable" activities in the 1937 sit-down strikes.

The President commented that his only suggestion to his questioners was that they interview reporters covering the committee's hearings. He said he thought such an interview would make a grand story.

The continuing wave of denials mounted again yesterday. From Jackson, Mich., came a telegram to the White House from a former Republican Governor, Chase S. Osborn, who lauded the President's defense of Murphy and asserted he would vote for Murphy's re-election in November.

California Inquiry

Dies announced he was sending a sub-committee, consisting of Representatives Starnes, of Alabama, and Mosier, of Ohio, both Democrats, to California to question 150 witnesses about communism in that State.

Meanwhile the California commander of the American Legion, Henry G. Watters, disclaimed in San Francisco all responsibility for testimony by Harper Knowles before the committee.

Knowles, testifying as a Legion official, declared that two Democratic candidates for office in that State were Communists—Culbert Olson, gubernatorial candidate, and Ellis Patterson, candidate for the vice-governorship, and that Sheridan Downey, senatorial candidate, was a former running mate of "Communist" Upton Sinclair, the novelist.

The Associated Farmers of California, an organization scheduled to be investigated by the La Follette committee, and of which Knowles said he was secretary, on leave of absence, also disclaimed any knowledge of Knowles 'activities.

Calls Him "Propagandist"

Former California Legion Commander Dan. W. Emmett wired from Los Angeles that "Knowles is a paid propagandist of certain industrial associations that are opposed to labor in any form."

Commander Watters said that "Knowles is not speaking for us."

All others involved vigorously denied the charges.

Dies said he would hear witnesses from Ohio next week. He gave no explanation for suddenly calling off hearings yesterday, which were to have featured testimony supposed to establish links between American organizations and Communists in loyalist Spain.

Enters Strecker Case

Dies decided yesterday to accept the invitation of Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson to file a brief as "amicus curiae" to the Supreme Court in the Strecker deportation case.

This case has important bearing on deportability of Harry Bridges, head of West Coast maritime activities of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Secretary of Labor Perkins has stated that unless the Strecker case were reversed by the Supreme Court it would be impossible to deport Bridges.

The invitation for Dies to associate himself with the Government on the brief and in argument of the Strecker case came after the Texas Representative had accused Jackson of having "omitted important findings" in his application for a hearing of the Strecker case before the Supreme Court.

Woman, 50 Belies Age By Figure

Has No Double Chin Exercise Responsible Lazy Muscles Toned Arms Are Firm

By Ida Jean Kain.

ONE OF the most fascinating women we have come across is frankly 50. She takes a mischievous delight in telling her age, because no one believes her! And how much more satisfying that is than to be shy about telling your age—four or five years shy—and having no one believe you.

She has a trim figure and fine erect carriage, but so do many women of 50. The reason she looks so incredibly young is that she hasn't the slightest suspicion of a dual chin or a dowager's hump, and her arms are firm and round. These portions of the figure can be such flagrant tattletales about one's age!

Exercise Belies Years

But if you know how to go about it and are willing to take a little time and exercise, you can always manage to look a few years younger than your birth certificate warrants. Keep the muscles of the throat, chin, nape of the neck and arms active and there won't be any sagging tissues to give you away. Muscles respond miraculously to a bit of attention.

Here is an exercise to encourage a lovely line at the neck and chin: Stand straight and tall and, without moving your body, thrust out the jaw, keeping the mouth closed. Turn the head slowly and forcefully from side to side, eight times, feeling the neck muscles become tense and firm. Always relax these muscles very, very gradually.

And another for the chin and neckline: Lie across the bed, face down, with the head hanging loosely over the edge, entire body limp. Tighten the muscles in the neck and raise the head until it is in a straight line with the body, then slowly tilt the head back. Concentrate all the movement in the neck muscles, letting the other muscles remain limp.

Arm Movements Good

Pulling up constantly with the back of the neck muscles is an excellent corrective for both a double chin and that ugly little hump on the nape of the neck, but an effective exercise is to cup the hands, place them under the chin with fingers toward the ears and, resisting with the hands, slowly bring the chin forward. Then go into reverse, resist with the chin and force it back, slowly, with the hands. About twice will be enough of that.

There are many exercises to tone and strengthen those lazy muscles on the backs of the arms. One of the simplest is to stand with the arms straight out from clenched, and move the arms in the shoulders, fists lightly clenched, and move the arms in small circles. All the movement should be at the arm sockets.

Two Sides of the Fur Question

Furs in both short and long versions proved popular at the fashion showing yesterday at the Shoreham. The shako, vast muff and collarless beaver jacket, left, are durable appointments for the young girl, while the luxury of lynx tuxedo revers on black wool, right, are glorifying to the tall, slim woman

Furs Adopt New Color Tones Fashion Showing Reveals

Honey, Smoke Blue, Platinum Popular Also Take on Widely Varied Roles Appear as Hats, Muffs, Dress Trims

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

FURS are lush and opulent this year. They are sleek and well-bred, or soft as kittens' ears and long as a movie star's hair. They have been dyed and bleached into wondrous new tones of honey, smoke blue and pure platinum. These were observations gleaned from a rich looking collection of furs featured yesterday at a fashion showing during the luncheon hour at the Shoreham Hotel.

The importance of fur bearing animals to the fashionable woman was expressed in this presentation not alone as coat material. Furs were worked with a deft touch on hats, muffs and ensembles. Pinwheels made of thick silver fox, cuff-brimmed pill-boxes, shakos and elfin bonnets of mink, beaver and caracul played an exhilarating role in bringing quiet toned gowns to life.

Incredible varieties of big and little muffs were evident as the one dash of personal expression necessary for black or wintry toned gowns and ensembles.

How to Buy Wisely

With this showing of luxury and economy furs, and with these first wintry flurries being felt, much attention is being given to the purchase and care of furs. A few suggestions along this line might not be amiss. As to selection:

Buy all furs from a reputable furrier. Never purchase a "marked down bargain" from a fly-by-night dealer selling all his stock at a loss.

Buy the very best of whatever fur you purchase. Don't buy cheap duplications of broadtail or mink.

Consider your choice of fur in relation to your pocketbook and your present wardrobe. Natural blue fox is new and popular. Red and crossed foxes are worth considering and the silvers go on forever. Safari sealskin, last year's bright discovery, has diminished in price. Alaska seal and all the chubby furs, such as mouton, possum and beaver, are chic and durable. Skunk, along with its new-found friend, bleached skunk, is strongly sponsored. Persian lamb, caracul, broadtail and mink are dependable short-haired furs of ageless beauty.

Care Is Important

Care of furs is vital to their graceful old ages.

Have a fur coat cleaned and glazed at least once a year by an expert furrier.

Send fur coat to a furrier every three months if it gets hard usage daily.

Avoid matting furs. Avoid sitting down carelessly, don't rub or handle furs too often. Repair all rips immediately.

Store furs in summer. Avoid excess heat and sun which shorten a fur's life. During winter months hang furs up the minute they are removed.

Brush furs as religiously as you would your own hair.

The glossy healthy furs exhibited at yesterday's showing looked as though they had been schooled for the most exacting tests, for their pelts were glistening with health. Zirkin Furriers presented both furs and gowns at this showing. Julia accented them with fur-bearing hats and Stetson furnished high riding shoes.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Short Skirts

NO MATTER what anybody says you are NOT going to get a dress with too short a skirt. They're simply trashy. The really distinguished women never wear them. You will insist on having a skirt that comes an inch below the fullest part of the calf just as all the big style experts advise. Just let the dress clerks try to make you into a common shopgirl type! Just let 'em try!

The first dress you try on has a hem reaching a few inches below the knees. "Of course this could be lengthened," you begin. "Oh yes," replies the salesgirl, "but that would take away all the snap. Besides that's really long—compared with the way they're wearing 'em."

You point out frigidly that YOU are wearing the dress, not THEY. She still insists it's "a perfect length." "Now you're really the type that can wear the short dresses. So many women's legs . . ."

No use for her to try that on you. You demand another dress. It is a trifle longer, but baggy in waist and shoulders. And of course with a long V-neck.

"Now see," she says triumphantly, "that isn't nearly as smart.

You try another shop. In the fitting room you don a dress, approach a mirror and find yourself a ballet dancer. "The full pleated skirts are worn a lot shorter than the other kind," helpfully suggests the saleswoman. "And it really looks much longer when you sit down."

Still—you cannot sit down all the time.

You try a plain straight one. It comes almost to your calf. You take a chair and it slides up above your knees. The saleswoman is soothing. "Now when you stand up——"

Well, it's a cinch you are not going to stand up all winter. Nor be tugging continually to get your knees covered when you sit. Of course, maybe, if your knees were different—Oh, well, you'll try a more conservative shop.

For twice the price you had planned on paying, you find yourself in a creation of what the saleswoman calls "genteel length." "It's not that I've got anything against legs as legs," she says, "but I really think this dress gives you more dignity."

"Dignity!" The word does not set very well with you. And the image in the mirror is not encouraging. You look sort of strange to yourself . . . and dowdy . . . and, well, oldish.

You ask for something with "a little more life." You put it on, walk in front of the mirror. You seem topheavy—all waist—and, well, legs.

"Of course, the shorter skirts are more girlish," encourages the saleswoman.

At the fourth shop the dresses some way do not seem so short. And yet they reach barely below your knees. Well, maybe you have had the wrong perspective—been too old maidish in your reaction to them. You are always that way—holding out against everything new.

You try on one that almost makes you gasp. "You're sure this isn't too short?" you ask the saleswoman.

"Not a bit—on YOU," she replies "Besides, it won't be so short after it gets the set of you."

You study yourself in the mirror. It is pretty short—still, of course, everybody IS wearing them that way.

"It's so much more youthful," chimes in the clerk. "And smart.

Probably she's right. It really doesn't seem so terribly short—compared to some.

"Another thing," continues the clerk, "they're getting shorter every day."

You look in the mirror again. "Are you sure," you ask as you turn to the clerk, "that this really isn't too long?"

Mary Haworth's Mail

What's Wrong With Intelligent College Woman Who Laps Up Lurid Love Stories, Goes Unwashed, Untidy?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if you could help me to help a friend of mine who seems to be headed for a lifetime of frustration and unhappiness unless she changes her ways. She is 29 years old, not unattractive when well-groomed, is really intelligent and is a graduate of one of the large Eastern universities. However, she is dirty and slovenly in appearance most of the time. She has lost one job (and maybe more) because of her unkempt appearance.

I know that she doesn't take enough baths. I think that she goes to work some days without even bothering to wash her face and hands. At least half the time her face is entirely devoid of make-up—not even powder. She has good looking clothes but takes no care of them. Usually they are soiled and mussed; buttons and snaps are missing or hanging by a thread. Her hair, like the rest of her, is badly cared for—stringy and unclean.

Although I have said she is intelligent, she prostitutes her intelligence by living on a mental diet of lurid, cheap magazine love stories. She is man-crazy and sex-starved, but her starvation doesn't inspire her to do the only thing that might attract a worthwhile man's attention, namely: improve her personal appearance.

If she takes more than one drink (and it is becoming a habit with her to take more than one) she becomes loud-mouthed, talkative and indiscreet. I think her drinking is an attempt to escape from her own sense of inadequacy, frustration and loneliness. She has very few friends, since she doesn't attract them easily and seems to be too lazy to exert herself either to make new friends or to keep the few she has.

She has a fairly good clerical job at the moment and I am in a position to know that she does her work with reasonable efficiency, but personal sloppiness isn't tolerated for long in most offices. I am sure that she could be attractive and companionable if she made the effort. But as things are, she is a total loss to herself and her friends. How do you diagnose such a case? What can be done to help her? I don't know a great deal about her family background, except that they are respectable people of some means. I shall appreciate any suggestions you may make.

Case for Internist

DEAR X. Y. Z.: If a personality let-down of the sort described is to be remedied, it must be brought to the attention of an internist, i. e.—a specialist in the diagnosis and treatment of organic and functional ailments. It may be a case of glandular imbalance, requiring the attention of a skilled endocrinologist; or it may be a reflection of an incipient mental illness; and there is some remote possibility that it might be the warning symptom of an unsuspected syphilitic infection.

Since such theoretical factors must be reckoned with, and definitely established or rejected in process of determining the cause and cure of "changed personality" (as the affliction is known in medical circles), you can readily see that this is not a matter for lay speculation and prescription. Therefore, the most constructive contribution you can make to your friend's welfare is to persuade her to consult an internist at the earliest possible moment—and by an internist I do not mean a general practitioner of the family-physician type; I mean a specialist of the sort described above. There are several excellent men in this field of science practicing in the city.

Tiny but Stylish Cottage Has Everything Yellow

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

Maxine has about the tiniest cottage in town, but she's managed to give style. In the first place, she had the outside painted light yellow, instead of the white you'd expect for a little place like that. Then she's planted a profusion of yellow flowers that are rotated so that there's something in bloom from early spring till late fall. Daffodils and forsythia first, then yellow tulips, marigolds and calendula, nasturtiums and zinnias, yellow peonies (rare!), snapdragons, yellow iris, poppies, yellow gladioli, then chrysanthemums.

Inside, the living room has pale yellow walls and crisp yellow sheer curtains. There's a soft French blue carpet on the floor and most of the big furniture is covered in a garden flowered chintz—yellow flowers on a pale grey ground. One piece has a plum covering for contrast. The furniture here is walnut—simple in line and finish but good in design.

The dining room has walls of palest blue with a blue carpet as in the living room. Here an old set of oak furniture has been bleached and the chair seats are covered in yellow. Chintz draperies match the furniture coverings in the living room.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 28.

HAVING BEEN twice to the Monte Carlo Ballet in the fawtnit, surrounded by gibbering and long-haired ballet maniacs of both sexes, I find that the new race of ballerinas has brought quite a smattering of town sports and night-life gallopers into the stuffy old Metropolitan. These new toe-pointing belles are cuties of the first rank, and the old-time dancers with the gnarled and knotty stems are no longer on view—they're planted in parks.

ALICE HUGHES

In addition to last year's ballerinas, such as Toumanova, Knockerova and Tiperova, there are two outstanding and eye-filling debutantes among the premieres this season. One is the exotically beautiful Nina Theilade, whose papa was a Danish journalist and whose mama was of royal Javanese blood. There's a mixture for you. I saw the girl dance in Massine's ballet, "St. Francis." Like all these high-hat hoofers, she's been dancing since babyhood, and is only 21 now—according to the book. She tells me she never diets for that superb figger and doesn't know how much she weighs. She puts on an old dress now and then, and if it fits, she knows the torso is under control. Simple and effective. Scales are dull.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—What of the Lindberghs. A strange change has come upon the public attitude in their regard. Many feel that the United States has cooled to the colonel, owing to his present desertion of his native land and press reports, fact or fancy, of his European activities. For years he has not cared to keep his birdfame alive. On the other hand, quiet, retiring little Anne Morrow is in the public eye and heart, beginning, of course, with the tragic trial. Now she emerges, with her second book, "Listen! The Wind!" as a genuine literary artist. Pages of the new tome prove that she is a writer of the first rank. Read the book, if you haven't. It's a piece of work! Odd, that she seizes the attention of her countrymen as the colonel breaks bread with the German air hierachy . . . Some girl, that one.

Have you seen the new fur worked out from the modest, shy raccoon? Well, ma'am, it's something. It has overtones of mink, it's as light as kid, and comes in a feather lightweight resembling beaver or nutria. It's deep pile doesn't mat. It may sound impossible, this mixture, but one of the finest local stores boosts and sells much of it as a handsome sports fur for cruise and resort wear. Thus the humble raccoon is rescued from the football stadium and sent to Palm Beach.

Rebeca Trucco, Envoy's Daughter, Toasted at Party At Chilean Embassy on Troth to Robert Knowlton

Wedding in November Home Already Leased Her Fiance With U. P.

Led by her father, the Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco, the family and close friends of Miss Rebeca Trucco gathered at the embassy late yesterday afternoon to drink a champagne toast to her and Robert Knowlton. Their engagement was announced at yesterday's party, coming as no great surprise as the couple have been seen together constantly since they met two years ago at one of the Friday Evening Supper Club dances at the Sulgrave.

When the three Trucco sisters, who have served as their father's hostesses here, first came to Washington, they could not speak a word of English, but now they are as proficient as any American. Mr. Knowlton has already learned Spanish, and yesterday toasted his future bride in her language.

The couple expect to be married the end of November, probably at the embassy, and have leased the home of Forrester Davison on Florida avenue. This cunning old house is one in a row which was recently done over by Wolcott Waggaman.

The pretty, dark-eyed bride-to-be is the daughter of the late Laura Gaete Trucco, and a sister of Manuel Trucco, Miss Marta Trucco and Senora Fernando Illanes, the former Graciela Trucco, whose marriage here last winter was one of the highlights of the social season.

Mr. Knowlton Hails From Boston

Mr. Knowlton is the son of the late Frank Knowlton, of Boston, and of Mrs. Richard Burleson, who with Col. Burleson lives in Honolulu. He attended St. Marks School and Harvard, from which he was graduated, and also studied at Mannix Walker's Foreign Service School in Washington. He is now with the United Press.

Almost immediately after his daughter's marriage, the Ambassador will sail for Chile with his son, Manuel, and Miss Marta Trucco. The envoy has been here 5 years, the usual length of service for a diplomat in one country, and does not know whether he will come back.

Yesterday telegrams and letters of congratulation piled high on the hall table at the embassy. Huge boxes of flowers kept arriving, and there was all the exciting atmosphere of an engagement announcement.

Several diplomats were in the small group, among them the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus. The latter's hat, a lipstick red tricorne with a veil, was the identical model as that worn by Senora da Zuberbuhler of the Argentine Embassy, who was also present.

Feathers Noted On Many Hats

Miss Ruth Dove looked smart yesterday in a long checked coat of tweed and a small black hat. Mrs. William T. Mann wore a becoming purple wool frock with a baum marten scarf and a black brimless hat with the longest feather yet seen. Marquis Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy, incidentally, had to give up sitting between ladies because the feathers in their hats kept jabbing him in the eye.

The guest of honor wore a burgundy colored frock with shoes of the same shade and an enormous corsage of orchids. Her sister, Marta, was in a printed frock with a brief jacket.

James Parks, John Galliher and Clement Conger were among members of the younger set at the party. Others were Miss Stellita Stapleton, in a new and very becoming silver fox jacket, hip length and collarless; Miss Dolly Corbin, Miss Anne Kiess, Miss Florence Harris in a mustard yellow jacket with a black skirt. Miss Nancy Brereton, Prince del Drago and Joao de Deus Ramos, of the Portuguese Legation were others present.

The table was centered with artificial pink and white carnations, and there was a huge white frosted cake along with the cookies and hors d'oeuvre.

Excess Tobacco System Weighed

By the Associated Press.

Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials said yesterday they were considering a plan for handling excess poundage of burley tobacco growers who have complied with the Government's acreage allotments.

Under the plan, a grower would be able to deliver his entire burley crop, including the allotted and excess poundage, to a designated warehouse, where the crop would be handled. After sale of his tobacco, the grower would be paid in full for his allotted poundage, plus 50 per cent of the value of his excess crop.

The excess poundage would be stored in bonded warehouses until the Government permitted its sale. Funds from the eventual sale would be distributed among participating growers.

Growers now have three courses in the handling of excess poundage. They may sell it and pay the 50 per cent penalty provided by law; they may deliver it to a co-operative, or they may hold it until the Government permits its sale.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

AMONG THE MANY festivities which will mark the Middleburg Hunter Show this week-end will be the dinner which Mrs. Amory Perkins will give tonight at her new home, Journey's End.

Among the Washington residents who will journey to Middleburg for the dinner are Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy; Col. McFarlane Reed, Military Attache of the embassy; Spottswood White, and Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker, who have leased Mrs. Perkin's former home in Middleburg, the Shelter, for week-end use, will also be present at the dinner.

OTHERS entertaining tonight include Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Davis, who will give a dinner for the judges; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Read, and Freddy Warburg. Harry Worcester Smith will give an oyster roast for about 30 friends.

The family classes will be among the most interesting at the horse show, which starts at 9:30 and continues through the day. Mr. and Mrs. William C. Langley, of New York and Virginia, will have the largest entry with nine of their family riding together: Mr. and Mrs. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. James Van Alen (the former Eleanor Langley), and their two sons, Jay and Sammy Van Alen; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young, nephew and niece of the Langleys, and their young son, Sandy Young.

Harry Worcester Smith will have riding with him his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith, and their son, Crompton, jr. There is about 72 years difference in ages between Harry Smith and his grandson.

ANOTHER entry is that of Mr. and Mrs. William Hulbert and their children, Catherin, Helen, Elizabeth and Billy. Others entered are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skinner and James B. Skinner; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Talbott and their two yound daughters; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church 3d; Mr. and Mrs. Plunket Stewart, and her two daughters; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson and their daughters, Miss Neville Atkinson; Mr. and Mrs. Barry Hall and their children, Nancy and David Hall; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost and their sons, Harry jr., and Winston Frost, and numerous others.

Mrs. Frederick Prince will appear at the show riding the beautiful shestnut hunter with which she is shown in a portrait recently completed by Frank Voss.

Dog Mart Sponsor Gets Appeal From Poor Chicago Boy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 28.—A Chicago boy who says he is "poor" but is willing to "pay a quarter a week," wrote the Chamber of Commerce yesterday asking them to send him a dog. The appeal was made after he had seen a newspaper picture of a collie puppy which was taken at the recent dog mart here.

The latter, addressed to W. Barton Mason, mart auctioneer, read in part:

"Dear Mr. Barton:

"I want a dog. I always wanted a dog but I am too poor to buy one. I could pay for the postage. You could put him in a crate box and put him on a train. When the delivery truck comes it could be C. O D.. I have a job of 25 cents a week. I could send you a quarter every week. My name is Daniel Barton, 11615 Vincennes avenue, Chicago, Ill."

Nazi Consul's Recall Sought For U. S. Attack

Talk Called 'Impudent' Scored Free Speech Hull Gets Protests

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 28.—The attack by Dr. Hans Borchers, German consul general at New York, on the democratic institutions of free press and liberty of worship brought demands for his immediate recall today from anti-Nazi groups.

Dr. Borchers' speech, delivered Thursday night at a meeting sponsored by the German consulate, was described as an "impudent violation of diplomatic courtesy" by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League.

[Dr. Borchers said "the fight against our country seems to be setting in anew right at this moment," and declared the speeches of Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, are "picked up here at will and used by our adversaries as they see fit," the Associated Press reported.

[He praised Germany's internal and international political aims and called the Munich agreement "a wonderful success without employment of force."—Editor's note.]

Protests to Hull

The league sent a telegram to Secretary of State Hull demanding the German government be asked to recall Dr. Borchers. The league also invited the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, administrator of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, to join in its protest to the State Department.

Another demand for Dr. Borchers' recall came from the American Jewish Federation to combat communism and fascism. In telegrams to Secretary Hull and to President Roosevelt, Chairman Milton Solomon, of the federation, said:

"We cannot conceive how an official of a foreign government could have the insolence and temerity to thus attack our American institutions in an American city and where hundreds of thousands of Jews live in amity with their Christian neighbors.

No Action Contemplated

By the Associated Press.

State Department officials said yesterday no diplomatic action was contemplated in connection.

The consul's speech has not been called officially to the attention of the department. It was not believed in informed circles he had transgressed rules of diplomatic practice.

Finnish Envoy To Crown King Of Apple Fete

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 28.—Eer Jarnefelt, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Finland to the United States, will crown E. Lee Goldsborough, of Shepherdstown, as "King Lee IV" of the 1938 annual apple harvest festival here the afternoon of November 10, festival officials announced today.

The fact that his country is a heavy importer of apples from orchards in this belt was a consideration in his selection, Chairman John L. Lightner said. He was invited to occupy the role through Congressman Jennings Randolph, of this Second District, who will accompany him here and probably act as master of ceremonies.

Ambassador Jarnefelt is the second envoy to bestow the mythical crown. Last fall Ambassador Oswaldo Aranha, of Brazil officiated.

Navy Day Visits Of Stork Break Annapolis Record

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—"Anchors Aweigh" seems likely to displace conventional lullabies in the Annapolis Emergency Hospital maternity ward.

They really celebrated Navy Day yesterday in the ward with the advent of three Navy babies, two future prom "drags" and an admiral of 1990. It was the first time within memory, hospital attaches said, that three Navy juniors arrived the same day.

Lieut. and Mrs. Hugh McClean and Lieut. and Mrs. Welford C. Blinn became the parents of baby girls. A son was born to Chaplain and Mrs. John E. Johnson to complete the biggest "Navy Day celebration" in hospital history.

Bacteriologist Appointed In Arlington

Navy Man Chosen
Scholarship Arranged
Classes Elect

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0809

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan yesterday announced appointment of H. J. Ivy as county bacteriologist, effective November 1, in charge of the laboratory of the county disposal plant.

Ivy comes to Arlington County from the Naval Medical School, where he has been for the last 20 years in the bacteriological department, in charge of instruction of trainers. He is chief pharmacist's mate.

The new laboratory will be operated much on the lines of the State laboratory, Hanrahan said, and will be similar to the branch State laboratory located at Luray. The bacteriologist will be a member of the staff of county health officer and will be under his supervision.

Board to Act Today

Final action on applications which have the approval of the Zoning Appeal Board for two major housing projects will be taken by the county board at its meeting today.

The applications for a rezoning from residential A to residential B represent an expenditure for two large scale apartments of $10,500,000.

One application was from Ashton and Margaret Jones for a 120 acre site located on North Washington boulevard about 1 mile beyond Glebe road. The development is planned by the Mace Properties, Inc. Approval by the county board will start construction of the first unit of 204 appartments to cost approximately $620,000. The second application was made by Calvin Heley, E. R. Lady and B. M. Smith for a 40-acre tract on the south side of Columbia pike between South Edgewood and South Cleveland streets and extending to the Army and Navy Country Club. This project, planned for 650 apartments veloped by Gustave Ring, builder to cost about $3,000,000, will be de- of Colonial Village.

Scholarship Arranged

The Soroptimist Club of Arlington County has voted to establish a scholarship for an Arlington girl, graduate of Washington Lee High School. The scholarship is for a loan or grant each year for as many as three years, and is to be based upon merit and need. Award of the scholarship is under the supervision of the project committee, consisting of Mrs. Pearl W. Sharpe, chairman; Mrs. Francis Bell, Dr. Verlin Miles, Mrs. Nann Middleton and Mrs. Kathaleen Clarke.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, of the Lewis Hotel Training School of Washington, spoke at the meeting last night. Mrs. Lewis spoke on "Venture Clubs: Their Origin and Their Progress."

Class officers in three grades at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School were elected yesterday. They are:

Ninth grade—Donald Reid, president; Wayne Blumingburg, vice president; Mary Lucy Parrish, secretary, and Wendell Blumingburg, treasurer.

Bedtime Story

Desperation Sharpens Wit

Desperation sharpens wit;
Spurs to make the most of it.
—Old Mother Nature.

Desperation is nothing new to Peter Rabbit. It is almost a daily experience with Peter. Time and time again he has been in a tight place from which he could see no way of escape, but in the end he has escaped. Usually it has been because he was quick enough to take advantage of some chance so small that it hardly looked like a chance at all.

Peter was in desperation now. He was dodging around shocks of corn in Farmer Brown's cornfield trying to keep out of the clutches of Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy. So far he had been successful, but how long could he keep it up? They were two to one, both bigger and stronger than he. He would tire before they did. He must find a place of safety or a way of escape. He must do it soon. He couldn't hope to keep on dodging successfully for very long.

Now Sue had seen Peter's race for life from out on the Green Meadows to the lower end of the cornfield. She had watched from behind a shock of corn at the upper end of the field. Her heart had been in her mouth, so to speak, for she didn't want Peter to be caught. Now she could get only tantalizing glimpses of Peter's pursuers because so many shocks were in her way. So she began to move toward the lower end of the field, all the time trying to keep hidden by shocks of corn.

It happened that Bowser the Hound had been let out at Farmer Brown's house, and sniffing about, as is his way, to discover what news his nose could tell him he found the trail of Sue. He wagged his tail. He liked Sue. She often took him with her when she went to walk. He would join her now.

So with his nose to the ground Bowser followed Sue's trail down the Long Lane to the cornfield. He was so intent on finding Sue that he paid no attention to anything else. It was just after Sue had started to try to get nearer the chase that Bowser caught up with her. He wagged his tail and grinned as she discovered him. Just at the minute he was more glad to see her than she was to see him.

And then Peter Rabbit dodged out from behind a shock of corn and for the first time saw Sue. It would seem that he must also have seen Bowser the Hound. If he did he didn't hesitate. He ran straight toward Sue. Lipperty-lipperty-lip he ran as if he were running to meet one of his best friends. He was, although, of course, he couldn't know that. Desperation had sharpened Peter's wits. He knew that he had no chance whatever with Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy. He was panting for breath and he was tired. He couldn't run so fast as he had been running. Sooner or later one of his pursuers would catch him. So he headed straight for this two-legged person who had so unexpectedly appeared.

Now Bowser the Hound would have bolted after Peter had not at that very instant Reddy Fox appeared from behind that shock. He was running so hard that he had hard work to slow enough to turn to one side as he caught sight of Bowser at the same instant that Bowser saw him. With a roar of his great voice Bowser was off, for there is nothing in the world that Bowser loves more than to chase Reddy Fox. Forgotten was Peter Rabbit. Forgotten was Sue.

Of course, Mrs. Reddy also lost her interest in Peter Rabbit when she saw Bowser and Sue. Peter had done the one thing that could save him when he had run toward Sue. Now he sat down panting as if he would never be able to stop. Even when Sue slowly walked to him he didn't move more than a hop or two, just enough to get out of her way. He was trembling. Sue saw it and stopped.

"Poor Peter," said she. "I guess you have had fright enough for one day. I wouldn't hurt you for the world, but perhaps you don't really know that. So I won't frighten you any more." She stood still and presently Peter slowly hopped behind a shock of corn.

From way over in the Old Pasture the voice of Bowser came clear on the crisp air. Reddy Fox had something else besides a Rabbit dinner to think about.

Skunk Invasion Vexes Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 28.—City officials had under consideration today the problem of what to do about an invasion of skunks here. The odoriferous little animal has moved into the corporate limits in such numbers in recent weeks that property owners are protesting.

The police department, which successfully repelled starlings a few years ago, is starting to look collectively worried.

One family of skunks has taken up its abode under the back porch of residence, and in other sections the skunks have been boldly walking around in backyards in broad daylight. At another place one attacked a hunting dog and put him to rout, another fell into a grease pit at a filling station.

Speed Urged For Survey in Montgomery

Civic Unit Asks Action
Need Is Stressed
Bazaar Is Arranged

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post. 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation yesterday urged the board of commissioners to authorize immediately the county government survey, for which $5,000 was appropriated Tuesday.

In letters sent to each member of the board, Allen H. Gardner, of Woodside Park, chairman of the association's committee on legislation and legal action, stated:

"The appropriation, standing alone, does not, of course, accomplish the desired end. It is hoped that the board will follow the appropriation immediately with the selection, authorization and employment of a competent, independent organization to make a thorough study of our county government. There should be no difficulty in this selection, since full information on the outstanding organization qualified to do this work is, and has been for some time, at the disposal of the board.

"One of the outstanding organizations for this type of survey now seems willing to undertake the work, using its own funds to defray the major part of the cost of the study. Delay, even though short, may easily mean the assignment of the staff of that organization to other projects. For this reason and many others, we urge that the action of your board in making the appropriation available for the survey be followed next Tuesday, November 1, by selecting a proper agency and making a contract with that agency."

Gardner explained that the agency referred to was endowed and would be in a position to make a survey at no extra cost to the county.

Purpose of the proposed survey is to find more efficient and economical methods of conducting the business of the county's government.

Mrs. Robert L. Lefevre heads the committee in charge of arrangements for a community dinner and bazaar to be given by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Takoma Park elementary school in the near future.

Other members of the committee are Mrs. A. S. Murphy, Mrs. E. J. Coulson, Mrs. Marie Bozievich, Mrs. Donald Bliss, Mrs. Houston Jones, Mrs. W. P. Duffy, Mrs. R. R. McCurry, Mrs. W. R. North, Mrs. Norman Jones, Mrs. V. V. Hemstreet, Mrs. J. W. Thomas, Mrs. Peter Remsen and Mrs. A. M. Tack.

Dinner Set for Thursday

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church at Huntin Hill, Md., will sponsor a turkey dinner at the church November 2. Chauncey M. Lone is chairman of the committee on arrangements. In a prior announcement the dinner was scheduled for November 3.

Pigeon Shoot Today

Many of the best shots in Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and other nearby points are expected to participate in the sixth clay pigeon shoot of the Rockville Izaak Walton League Chapter at the old fair grounds in Rockville today. Reuben Riggs, president of the chapter, will be in charge. There will be three classes and the entire afternoon will be devoted to the sport.

In the morning the chapter will sponsor a fox hunt under direction of Mrs. Alice Berry, of Rockville, and a dog show at which the judges will be A. G. Rolfe, W. Frank Ricketts, Harry J. Hunt and Erwin McIntyre.

Meetings scheduled for the coming week by the recently-organized Upper Montgomery County Fusion Committee, of which Preston L. Snyder, county supervisor of public school property is chairman, have been announced as follows: Monday, Martinsburg; Tuesday, Jerusalem and Browntown; Thursday, Takoma Park. All will be at night. Republican candidates for county offices will be among the speakers.

Under auspices of the committee, a meeting will also be held at Rockville the night of November 7.

Prince Georges Bond Interest Held Too High

Dolby Hurls Charge
Accuses Democrats
Speaks at Rally

Bird H. Dolby, Prince Georges County candidate for the House of Delegates on the Republican ticket, last night accused the Democratic board of commissioners of paying "excessive interest rates on the county's bonds."

Speaking at a rally at Queen Anne, Dolby declared high interest last year cost taxpayers $51,305.

"Our taxpayers are paying 3, 4 and even 5 per cent on the total bonded indebtedness of $3,616,500, instead of the normal rate of 2 per cent," he asserted.

"Last year the county paid $123,635 in interest. Had the rate been 2 per cent, the county would have paid $72,330, saving $51,305. This would have made it possible to cut the tax rate 7½ cents on each 100."

Dolby said the "excessive interest rates" were "understandable" because certain Democratic leaders were high officials and large stockholders in banks which held a large percentage of the county bonds.

John F. Lillard, jr., candidate for the State Senate, decried the present Democratic political rule, declaring the voters had been presented with a "hand-picked slate."

Liquor Permit Canceled

W. S. Alexander, administrator of the Federal Alcohol Administration, announced yesterday an order had been issued dismissing proceedings for revocation of the basic permit of the Colmar Manor Wholesale Liquor Corporation, Colmar Manor, Md., upon surrender and cancellation of the permit.

Jackson to Tour For O'Conor Slate

Havre de Grace, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore has decided to campaign for the Democratic Party, James H. Broumel, Democratic campaign manager for Harford County, said today.

It was the first indication that Jackson had decided to support the gubernatorial candidacy of Herbert R. O'Conor who defeated the mayor in the Democratic primary.

While no announcement was made by Jackson at the Baltimore City Hall, Broumel said he received the following letter from the Mayor:

"I acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 25, relating to the Democrats meeting at the Opera House at Havre de Grace Friday, November 4 at 8 p. m. I sincerely hope nothing will interfere with my anticipated pleasure at being with you."

Rev. Otto Burhenn Dies; Baltimore Pastor

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Rev. Otto Burhenn, 61, pastor of the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Baltimore, died in the West Suburban Hospital today after an operation for a stomach ailment.

Mr. Burhenn had been visiting here. He is survived by his mother, three sons and two daughters.

Dr. Baum, 84, Dies In Middletown

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—Dr. Charles Baum, 84, retired physician and president of the executive committee of the board of trustees of Gettysburg College, died of a heart attack Wednesday night at his home in Middletown, Pa. One of the oldest alumni of the college, he had been a trustee since 1902.

He recalled events of Civil War times and with his father heard Abraham Lincoln deliver his famous dedicatory address in the National Cemetery here on November 19, 1863. He sat on the steps of the speakers' platform and after the exercises shook hands with the President. Dr. Baum practiced medicine in Philadelphia for 57 years.

C.I.O., A.F.L. To Resist Cuts Under Wage Act

Wage

tures the opinion that it means the hourly, not the weekly, rate of pay.

Employers Propose Cuts

The act requires that, where workers are employed in excess of 44 hours per week during the first year the law is in operation, they shall be paid time and a half for the extra hours. So long as overtime is paid, they may remain at work an unlimited number of hours.

This provision applies, not merely to employes affected by the minimum wage requirement, but to all workers engaged in or indirectly concerned with interstate commerce, no matter what their pay rate is. The only persons exempt are those employed in a "bona fide" professional, executive or administrative capacity.

Boris Shishkin, of the A. F. of L. research staff, said reports are being received that many employers are proposing, in cases where employes have worked more than 44 hours per week, to cut the workweek down to 44 hours and the pay to correspond.

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the A. F. of L., declared, however, the organization would undertake to resist efforts by employers to reduce weekly compensation.

"We interpret the law," he said, "to mean that there shall be no reduction in weekly wages in cases where hours of work are restricted to the 44-hour maximum."

Andrews Can Only Interpret

There appeared to be some doubt whether the A. F. of L. would insist that employers should raise hourly rates, where employes are paid on an hourly basis, to give workers the same weekly rate of pay for a shorter week. It was made clear, however, that the A. F. of L. would oppose wage slashes where the rate of pay is on a weekly basis.

C. I. O. officials took the view that aggregate weekly compensation should not be reduced, whether the pay rate is on a weekly or hourly basis.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that Andrews has no authority to issue a ruling on the question. His view is only interpretative. The final word in all cases rests with the Federal courts.

Padway said the A. F. of L. is instructing unions throughout the country that the national organization is opposed to weekly pay cuts by employers seeking to avoid payment of overtime. C. I. O. leaders are doing the same.

Number Affected Not Great

To what extent the attitude of the national organizations may result in local disputes between employers and workers is a matter of conjecture.

Shishkin explained that, so far as members of A. F. of L. unions are concerned, only a "fringe" of maintenance workers are now employed more than 44 hours a week. Padway said the number of A. F. of L. union members working in excess of 44 hours probably would not exceed 25 per cent of the total. The proportion of C. I. O. union members working longer than 44 hours is not known, although officials said the number would not be great.

In many cases workers employed more than 44 hours are truck and bus drivers and railroad men eempt from the hour provisions of the act because these concerns are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Favors Pedestrian Control Laws

78,000 Farm Homes Receive Medical Care With U. S. Help

Group

from national representatives of the medical profession.

The FSA points out that the plan has succeeded only through co-operation with hundreds of doctors throughout the country who, in many cases, formerly gave virtually free attention to families which, under the new plan, pay $20 to $30 a year for the same care.

From the standpoint of the FSA, the program has proved valuable "strictly as a business proposition."

Finds Risk Is Good

"Quite aside from any humanitarian purpose," says Dr. W. W. Alexander, administrator, "the FSA has found, as a lending agency, that a family in good health is a better credit risk than a family in bad health. It has developed plans for medical care because it has found that good health is a necessary part of a family's rehabilitation."

Farm security files tell of numerous cases similar to that of the Arkansas farmer who rested on his plow for ten minutes after finishing each furrow. The man's neighbors advised FSA officials against making a loan, but medical examination disclosed that the farmer suffered from hernia and pellagra. With these conditions corrected, the county supervisor reported he was dealing with an energetic farmer likely to settle in full his obligations to the FSA.

First step taken by the FSA in extension of the project is an agreement with the State medical association, authorizing negotiations with medical bodies in counties where the need is most urgent.

Agreements Differ

In its understandings with the local medical groups, the FSA provides that the total amount a borrower is to spend for medical care during the year must be within the family's ability to pay; that the family have free choice of physicians, and that funds set aside for compensation of doctors be placed in trustees' hands at the beginning of the operating period.

Beyond these essentials, agreements differ widely in various localities. Fees are usually set between $20 and $30 per family per year, and where necessary the FSA will increase its loan.

The plan in widest use stipulates that a certain portion of funds in the hands of trustees be set aside at the beginning of each year for hospitalization and emergency needs, including surgery, with remaining cash then divided into equal monthly allotments.

Doctors Administrators

Physicians submit monthly statements for their services, and if total bills for any month exceed the amount available all bills are proportionately reduced and each physician paid his pro rata share. If claims for payment are less than resources on hand, the balance is carried forward to the next month or end of the year, and then used either to complete settlement on bills for months in which funds were not sufficient, or returned to the families.

No "bureaucrat" can come between the patient and his physician under the plan, since the doctors themselves, through their county medical associations, perform the bulk of local administrative duties. National and regional administrative personnel consists of only a dozen officials, five of them physicians. Director of the project is Dr. R. C. Williams, detailed to the FSA from the United States Public Health Service. FSA farm and home supervisors in each county stimulate interest in the plan, but the health program, for them, is only one of numerous spheres of activity.

Doctors serving the 78,000 families, according to the FSA, express general satisfaction with the plan, and fears of needless requests for medical attention have not materialized. In the early weeks of the project's operation in several counties, families summoned physicians "just for the novelty of the thing," but after becoming satisfied that the plan really works, apparently were content to call the doctor only when they needed him.

lowed him into the county, and all are doing very well, indeed.

The result is that the Washington police, unable to get their hands on the men who operate the numbers racket, only can hope to harass them by arresting their agents in town—the men and women who write down the bets and those who pick them up and carry them out to Maryland.

United States Attorney Pine, after a check-up yesterday, issued figures showing that there was a sharp drop in indictments after President Roosevelt signed the new anti-lottery law last April.

Arrests Decline

There was an average of 22 indictments a month prior to the passage of the law, whereas thereafter the average dropped to nine a month.

Pine, assuming that the police were just as diligent as they had been, concluded from these fewer indictments that there were fewer violators to arrest, and consequently less playing of the numbers.

The records of Capt. George Little, chief of the vice squad, also show a drop in arrests right after the new law was passed. In January, for example, Little's men made 30 arrests in connection with the numbers racket. Then, in April, the month President Roosevelt signed the bill, the number fell to 6. In June there were only 3.

27 Seized Last Month

Last month, however, Little's men arrested 27 men and women on numbers charges.

If fewer arrests mean a diminution in numbers gambling, do more arrests mean an increase in such gambling?

The answer of the underworld is that the new law threw a scare into the operators and agents, and caused many of them to lie low for a while. That is when the arrests fell off. Now, the underworld says, most of those who went for cover in the spring are back collecting bets.

There may not be as much numbers gambling as there was prior to the passage of the new law, but there is a lot of it. Washington, with its steady Federal pay roll, is a gambling town, the gamblers say and the police admit.

Pedestrians Favor Arrest Of 'Jaywalkers'

Traffic

he expressed willingness to submit to arrest for "jaywalking."

"Sure," he said, "if the District sets up rules for pedestrians I would deserve to be arrested if I violated them. It would be a good thing for Washington if something is done to both protect pedestrians and make them be more careful."

Richard Helfer said he lived in Rochester, N. Y., and had been in Washington only a short time.

"We have pedestrian control laws in Rochester," said Helfer, "and we have succeeded in cutting our pedestrian fatality toll 35 per cent during the past year. I think such laws should be adopted in every city."

His wife agreed that from what little she has seen of Washington, something should be done to "make things safer for walkers."

Explaining he had always lived in a city where pedestrian control laws were in effect, Walter Hickman, of Arlington, said he thought they would "work very effectively here."

Walter Moore, a student, of 3700 McKinley street northwest, predicted Washington's juvenile population would be "much better off" if some measure was taken to keep youngsters off the streets and make them cross at intersections.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., where he came from, Percy Storm said pedestrians don't obey the rules even though police attempt to enforce them.

"If such a program is to be effective," he said, "pedestrians must be arrested and fined the same as motorists who break the law."

Ralph Lewis, of Kentucky avenue southeast, said:

"It is positively the best thing that could happen to Washington. Pedestrians should have been made to observe safe walking rules long before this."

Don Smith, who refused to give his address, was all against the plan.

"Do you walk against a red light and cross in the middle of a block now?" he was asked.

"Sure."

"Would you do the same thing if there was a law against it?"

"Sure."

"Then you don't believe in pedestrian regulation?"

"Nope."

The "man in the street" program will be repeated today at 12:15 p. m. from Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, scene of a recent pedestrian fatality.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: My personal nomination for the comic Senator of stage, screen and cartoon: Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina . . .

Bill Douglas . . . sound

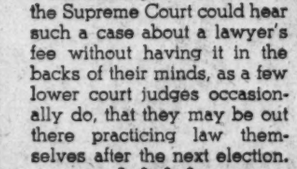
One high Government official says he'll continue to bear down on the radio chains so long as they broadcast so much hotcha music and alarming voices . . . Most popular phrase of the week in Government circles: "We mustn't export our soil for paper promises."

* * * *

Spurred on by the most bouncing lady lobbyist in town, one big-shot industrialist paid $5,000 for the privilege of drinking a couple of highballs at a party where Senator Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn, the majority leaders in the two houses, were present . . . He could just as easily have taken them to lunch for $3.50, or maybe they'd have bought his lunch. (He got his money's worth, maybe, by pinching the lady lobbyist once or twice.) . . . Or so the story goes.

* * * *

An amazingly long memory was demonstrated by an eminent German diplomat here, who explains the Hitler attitude toward the Catholic Church by recalling that Louis XIV grabbed German provinces while German Catholics and Protestants quarreled. (So 300 years later the Catholics are being appeased.) He also justifies the expulsion of the Czechs and other minorities by recalling that many Germans left Alsace when France took it over in 1918. Sounds like a revenge motif, just a little awry.



"—peace between John and William"

Unlike some New Dealers, Secretary Perkins does not seem to think the resignation of either John L. Lewis or William Green is an indispensable preliminary to peace between C. I. O. and A. F. L. . . . The Labor Department is hopeful, if not sanguine, of early labor peace, using those words "hopeful" and "sanguine" very precisely.

* * * *

Occasionally the Justices of the Supreme Court show how much they relish a fine point of law, or a case that's interesting beyond the ordinary. During a case the other afternoon, involving the claim of a lawyer for a $1,500 fee from the estate of an insane war veteran whom he had helped collect some war risk insurance, five of the eight justices kept peppering the learned counsel with questions, some of them rather mordant . . .

Incidentally, the Justices of the Supreme Court could hear such a case about a lawyer's fee without having it in the backs of their minds, as a few lower court judges occasionally do, that they may be out there practicing law themselves after the next election.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: Lowest price thus far for the $15 set of FDR's works is $6, at a book store which put them on the rental shelf, where they remained unmarred . . . (A really formidable chap would be a Roosevelt hater who had read all five volumes.) . . . Far from being alarmed about the Japs in Hawaii, Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of our island possessions, thinks they're as patriotic Americans as any of our second-generation citizens.

"—our Japs are patriotic"

Perhaps the soundest liaison man between the New Deal and business is Bill Douglas of SEC. He made a good impression on the more progressive Wall Streeters, who have crowded the Roosevelt-haters into the background . . . Maybe his name should be added to any long list of men who might be acceptable to Roosevelt and to his Democratic adversaries for 1940, along with Joe Kennedy's. Douglas probably talks quietly with more big businessmen than any other New Dealer. But he's even younger than Dewey.

* * * *

At this point, it appears that one logical conclusion of the Dies committee might be that Nazis as well as Communists should be eligible for expulsion . . . Secretary Perkins' tricorn hats are more becoming than the peaked hat she's been wearing lately . . . One problem of the U. S. anti-syphillis drive is that quite a few older doctors don't know the technique of drawing blood for a Wasserman test.

* * * *

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Incidentally, I picked up a copy of Henry Wallace's "Whose Constitution?" for 25 cents . . . Most uptown name on the Federal pay roll: Robert Digges Wimberly Conner, the national archivist . . . It's comical to see the Roaring Government lawyers appear at the Supreme Court in formal cutaway coats, while private million-dollar lawyers show up in tweed and flannel business suits.

Road League Elects Long As New Head

Dante Man Elevated
Fund Diversion Hit
Poll Favors Law
10 Added to Board

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 28.—Lee Long, of Dante, was named president of the Citizens Road League of Virginia after the league at its membership meeting today resolved to press its fight against diversion of road funds and called present right-of-way condemnation statutes "inadequate and inconsistent with a sound program of modern highway development."

Long was elevated from the vice presidency to succeed G. Leslie Hall, of Norfolk. T. Coleman Andrews, Richmond, former State auditor of public accounts, was named vice president, and Robert C. Harper, of Richmond, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Harper told the convention in his annual report that "longing eyes will be cast toward the road fund", in the event the 1940 General Assembly should find "little or no surplus available to meet the demands of many groups" for increased State appropriations.

Retiring President Hall reported that a postcard poll showed league members overwhelmingly favored adoption of a constitutional amendment prohibiting diversion of road funds. Hall said the poll showed 587 members favored such an amendment, while 74 opposed it, and 62 recorded themselves as noncommittal. The league resolved to press its fight against road-fund diversion.

The league's directorate was increased from 18 to 28.

Md. Church Gets $12,000 Bequest

Berlin, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Buckingham Presbyterian Church of Berlin will receive bequests totaling $12,000, in trust funds from the $50,000 estate of the late Mrs. Calvin B. Taylor, 81, whose will was filed for probate in the Worcester County Orphans' Court at Snow Hill today.

Outright bequests totaling $39,000 were willed to the church, to three nieces and several cousins of Mrs. Taylor, under the terms of her will.

Three nieces of the deceased were left $5,000 each. They include Mrs. Nancy Collins Brereton, Washington, D. C.

Chief Judge Urner Will Be Honored By Frederick Bar

Frederick, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—The Frederick County Bar Association began today plans for a testimonial dinner for Chief Judge Hammond Urner who retires in December after 29 years as head of the sixth circuit.

The local association was joined by the Montgomery County Bar in arranging for the tribute to Judge Urner.

Holden S. Felton, president of the Frederick bar group, named former Judge John S. Newman, Jacob Rohrback, and Reno S. Harp to a committee which will work with one from Montgomery County.

Judge Urner's retirement is mandatory since he will become 70 years old on November 4. The appointment of a successor is expected to be made by Gov. Nice. Judge Urner's term would have expired in June, 1942.

Associate judges of the sixth circuit are Arthur D. Willard of Frederick County and Charles W. Woodward of Montgomery County. Another judge is to be elected on November 8.

Thurmont, Md., Oct. 28.—With all the regal splendor and pomp of royalty, blonde Susan Pryor, 17, of Lantz, Md., was crowned Queen Autumn IV tonight at the annual fall festival.

Starting the two-day celebration denoting the end of the harvest season, the coronation ceremony brought farmers and their families from over the entire county.

The coronation was held after the crown of tinsel was placed on the kneeling queen by C. S. Lane, Frederick County secretary of the World Poultry Congress.

Queen Autumn was attended by a court of princesses including: Elizabeth Curfman, Sabillasville; Sally Waeche, Thurmont; Cathalene Putman, Walkersville, and Phillis Hahn, Emmitsburg.

Pages were: Gladys Martin, Thurmont; Dolores Troxell, Thurmont; Betty Lou Sheads, Gettysburg, Pa.; Agnes Baker, Thurmont; Margaret Utterback, Lewistown; Helen Long, Rocky Ridge; Lillian Havner, Rocky Ridge and Ann Derr, Walkersville.

A mummers parade will be held tomorrow night.

Calvert Fair Draws Crowd Despite Rain

Tug-o'-War Canceled
Final Events Held
Winners Listed

By the Associated Press.

Prince Frederick, Md., Oct. 28.—Rain halted one feature of the Calvert County Fair today, but a throng from throughout the county attended the final events of the three-day program.

With the horse-pulling contest called off because of the slippery grounds, attention centered today on the judging of cattle and swine.

In the beef cattle division, top honors for the best bull displayed were awarded for the entry of Cephas Cochran, with entries of Vernon Bowen and Julius Parran placing second and third, respectively.

Douglas Parran won first for the best cow entered in the division, with Julius Parran second.

Other winners in the livestock judging included:

Two-year-old heifer—Douglas Parran, first; Julius Parran, second; Cephas Cochran, third.

Bull calf—Douglas Parran, first; Cochran, second; Ellis Ward, third.

Berkeley County Employment Gain Noted in Period

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 28.—An increase in employment in Berkeley County and Martinsburg during the past three months was noted in an employment survey of the larger industries and business houses, presented yesterday at the regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce board of directors here.

The survey, submitted by Executive Secretary James M. Sellers, showed 5,661 employed October 26, an increase of 1,321 over the 4,069 as of July 27. On May 18 there were 4,221 employed.

It was explained that part of the increase is accounted for by teachers and other school employes, and by seasonal work in apple by-products plants.

The report showed 843 on WPA rolls, a decrease of 28 from the July 27 figure of 871, but substantially higher than the 732 figure obtaining on May 18.

W. Va. Continues Woods Fire Fight

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—State Forester D. B. Griffin reported today "a lot of good hard work" had brought scores of forest fires under temporary control.

He added, however, that, "we still have a desperate situation and will have until weather conditions improve."

He said about 1,600 men still are on patrol duty on the fires still blazing and predicted that "with cloudy weather we could put them all out."

Worcester County 2 to 1 Democratic

Snow Hill, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Democrats in Worcester County outnumber Republicans more than two to one, the county board of election supervisors announced today.

The total registered vote in Worcester County today, including two registrations held this month, is 10,824. The 1936 registration of voters was 10,590. The net gain is 234.

Farmer Kills Self

Petersburg, W. Va., Oct. 28.—Funeral services were held today for Fred Hesse, 63, well-to-do farmer living about 3 miles west of Maysville, who committed suicide by shooting. Three years ago his only son killed himself.

Nice Attacks O'Conor's Pledges

Seen Meaningless
State Cost Cut Cited
Asks Where to Slice
Shore Road Plan Hit

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Gov. Harry W. Nice said tonight Herbert R. O'Conor, his gubernatorial opponent in the general election, is "rapidly becoming all things to all men, and all things to all sections of the State."

In a statement issued in lieu of a scheduled speech in Dorchester County, Gov. Nice said Attorney General O'Conor "pledges economy and solemnly announces that he will cut $750,000 from State expenditures, but he cannot be made to tell us from what department he will make this enormous deduction.

"He goes to the Eastern Shore and tells the good folks there that he will build a straight dual highway from Elkton to Ocean City," said Mr. Nice. "From where does he expect to get the money? That will cost millions, so that a saving of $750,000 is swallowed up in the expenditure of millions.

"He welcomes the Negro and urges him to rest his weary head upon Abraham's bosom, telling him that he is entitled to transportation of his children to and from school and that such transportation is now only furnished in nine counties. Here he went off the deep end. Twenty-two out of 23 counties already furnish that transportation.

". . . He tell the people that he will not permit further gasoline diversion. As a matter of fact, he has nothing to do with it. I have already signed the law which prevents him or anyone else from making further diversion of the gasoline tax . . .

"He tells us that he is for a graduated income tax, but the tax amendment has not as yet been passed. Last year he was for a cigarette tax, a real estate tax and a sales tax. This year he is for neither . . . will he go back to his first love or approve lotteries?"

Lloyd Assails Nice Regime

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—O. Straughn Lloyd, Republican State Senator from Wicomico County and former Republican floor leader in the Senate, announced tonight he will support the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Herbert R. O'Conor.

"I am unwilling to approve a continuation of the record of extravagance, inefficiency and mismanagement of the administration of Gov. Nice," he said in a broadcast.

Senator Lloyd added his opposition to the Governor "does not mean that I have abandoned the Republican Party. On the contrary, those forward looking members of this great party who place the welfare of the people ahead of partisanship may continue to look to me for the fullest measure of support I am able to give."

John M. Saunders, Famed Writer, Ill At Charlottesville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—John Monk Saunder's widely known short story and scenario writer, is a patient in the University of Virginia Hospital, where he was admitted on Tuesday. The nature of his illness was not disclosed, but he is said not to be in a serious condition.

Mr. Saunders, whose home is in Hollywood, Calif., arrived at the Farmington Country Club on Sunday, accompanied by his young daughter, Susan, and her nurse. It is reported that he is considering purchasing a home in this vicinity.

He is the author of "Single Lady," and has written several screen plays of the air, among which are "Wings," "Legion of the Condemned," "The Dawn Patrol" and "The Last Flight." He has also contributed numerous articles and short stories to magazines.

In June of 1927 he married Fay Wray, movie actress, at Easton, Md.

Tri-County Soil District Mapped

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—Plans for a soil-conservation district for the counties of Albemarle, Louisa and Goochland are being formulated here.

Lyman Carrier, of the State soil-conservation district committee, met here yesterday with a group of Albemarle farmers to discuss the possibility of such a district. This meeting was the result of a petition signed by landowners in the Scottsville district, in southern Albemarle, requesting that a soil-conservation district be organized in that territory.

A meeting has been set for November 7 at Louisa Courthouse, with representatives from all three counties present, at which time hearings for the proposed district will be completed.

Homecoming Slated

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—Official announcement was made here today by C. Paul Cessna, alumni secretary of Gettysburg College, that the 1939 Alumni Homecoming Celebration will be held here on November 4. The date will be that of the Gettysburg-Muhlenberg football game.

Dr. Byrd Urges Higher Wages For Teachers

4,000 Hear Address
Lauds Md. Standards
Dr. Cook Also Talks

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Higher wages for Maryland school teachers was advocated today by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, in an address before 4,000 members of the State Teachers Association.

"I realize the growth of the university was coincident with the growth of public schools and the university will work shoulder to shoulder to get whatever is needed for further progress, including higher wages," he said.

Dr. Byrd said that of all University of Maryland students this year, those educated in the county grammar and high schools were scholastically ahead of others from outside the State.

Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools, told members Maryland schools need "not make any hop-skip-and-jump" progress because the State has good fundamental school laws to provide for necessary expansion.

A tribute to Dr. Lida Lee Tall, retired president of the Towson State Teachers College, was paid tonight at a dinner. Miss Tall is a past president of the State Teachers Association.

The convention will meet again tomorrow.

Mark Pence Named Head Of State S. C. V.

From Charlottesville
Appointed by Price
Succeeds Burrus

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—J. Roy Price, commander-in-chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, has issued an order appointing Mark V. Pence, of this city, as commander of the Virginia division, effective at once.

Mr. Pence succeeds Col. N. Charter Burruss, of Norfolk, who has served as commander for more than two years. Col. Burruss was appointed in July, 1936, to fill the unexpired term of Col. T. Gilbert Wood, of Roanoke and was elected at two conventions since.

The new commander has been instructed to appoint his official staff, to name commanders of the five brigades, and inaugurate a campaign for the organization of new camps and the reorganization of old camps in his division.

Mr. Pence is a native of Shenandoah County, son of the late Adam Pence, who served in the Confederate forces as a member of Company K, Seventh Virginia Cavalry, commanded by the late Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, of Charlottesville. For the past three years he has served as commander of the R. T. W. Duke Camp, No. 583, Sons of Confederate Veterans, this city, as well as commander of the Fourth Brigade, Virginia Division.

Jimmy Walker to Act As Broadcast Master

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Former Mayor James J. Walker will make his radio entertainment debut as master of ceremonies on a weekly charity show on Sunday, November 6, it was announced today.

The dapper former mayor, author of the Tin-Pan Alley hit "Will You Love Me in December As You Did in May?" was said by officials of station WMCA to be donating his services for the variety program which will originate from New York hospitals and institutions.

State Grange Urged to Use U. S. Farm Aid

Soil Value Drop Cited
Tech Expert Speaks
Experiments Praised

By the Associated Press.

Marion, Va., Oct. 28.—Farmers attending the annual convention of the State Grange today were urged to take advantage of the opportunity to use governmental aid to agriculture.

Dr. John R. Hutcheson, director of the Virginia Tech extension division, told the farmers that they were in the best position they would ever be in regard to governmental aid.

He told the group that in the future the soil conservation work of the Federal Government would proceed through local districts set up under State committees.

Tracing the development of governmental aid to the farmer from the time the Department of Agriculture was established during Lincoln's administration, Dr. Hutcheson said despite efforts to improve Virginia's soil it was worth less in 1932 than during the 30 years previous.

Dr. Hutcheson described the establishment of experiment stations as one of the greatest contributions to agricultural development. The results of experiments, he said, were being carried to the farmers in usable form by extension workers.

Hunter Greenlaw, 'Best Boy Farmer,' Back in Stafford

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 28.—America's No. 1 farm boy, 21-year-old Hunter Greenlaw, was back at work today on his 385-acre farm, in Stafford County, after a trip to Kansas City where he won the national farming honor given by the Future Farmers of America, a gold medal and $500 in cash.

When Hunter receives the $500, sometime within the next week, he's going to use $100 to buy a pure-bred holstein calf. Another $100 will be put into a savings account and the remaining $300 will be used for new machinery and repairs to the home where he lives with his mother, Mrs. R. H. Greenlaw.

Under a ruling of the sponsors of awards, Hunter must first inform them what he intends to do with the $500 before he is mailed a check.

Rabbi Foresees War, Urges U. S. to Arm

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—Rabbi Leonard J. Rothstein, of Harrisonburg and Staunton, speaking last night at a banquet closing the District Eight meeting of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, predicted an inevitable war in which he said the United States must engage.

"We must arm to the teeth and let the preservation of our democracy be the foremost thought in our minds for some time to come," he said.

Richmond Leads State in Relief Cost

Richmond, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—Richmond's expenditure of $316,239.14 for direct relief in the fiscal year 1937-38 far exceeded that of any other city in Virginia, it was shown today in records of the State department of public welfare.

The corresponding figure for Norfolk, next city in size, was $81,241.43. The expenditure by Roanoke was $43,216.98; Newport News, $27,881.45; Portsmouth, $24,839.01; Lynchburg, $21,639.31; Danville, $18,278.74, and Bristol, $6,749.49.

C.I.O., A.F.L. To Resist Cuts Under Wage Act

tures the opinion that it means the hourly, not the weekly, rate of pay.

Employers Propose Cuts

The act requires that, where workers are employed in excess of 44 hours per week during the first year the law is in operation, they shall be paid time and a half for the extra hours. So long as overtime is paid, they may remain at work an unlimited number of hours.

This provision applies, not merely to employes affected by the minimum wage requirement, but to all workers engaged in or indirectly concerned with interstate commerce, no matter what their pay rate is. The only persons exempt are those employed in a "bona fide" professional, executive or administrative capacity.

Boris Shishkin, of the A. F. of L. rsearch staff, said reports are being received that many employers are proposing, in cases where employes have worked more than 44 hours per week, to cut the workweek down to 44 hours and the pay to correspond.

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the A. F. of L., declared, however, the organization would undertake to resist efforts by employers to reduce weekly compensation.

"We interpret the law," he said, "to mean that there shall be no reduction in weekly wages in cases where hours of work are restricted to the 44-hour maximum."

Andrews Can Only Interpret

There appeared to be some doubt whether the A. F. of L. would insist that employers should raise hourly rates, where employes are paid on an hourly basis, to give workers the same weekly rate of pay for a shorter week. It was made clear, however, that the A. F. of L. would oppose wage slashes where the rate of pay is on a weekly basis.

C. I. O. officials took the view that aggregate weekly compensation should not be reduced, whether the pay rate is on a weekly or hourly basis.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that Andrews has no authority to issue a ruling on the question. His view is only interpretative. The final word in all cases rests with the Federal courts.

Padway said the A. F. of L. is instructing unions throughout the country that the national organization is opposed to weekly pay cuts by employers seeking to avoid payment of overtime. C. I. O. leaders are doing the same.

Number Affected Not Great

To what extent the attitude of the national organizations may result in local disputes between employers and workers is a matter of conjecture.

Shishkin explained that, so far as members of A. F. of L. unions are concerned, only a "fringe" of maintenance workers are now employed more than 44 hours a week. Padway said the number of A. F. of L. union members working in excess of 44 hours probably would not exceed 25 per cent of the total. The proportion of C. I. O. union members working longer than 44 hours is not known, although officials said the number would not be great.

In many cases workers employed more than 44 hours are truck and bus drivers and railroad men eempt from the hour provisions of the act because these concerns are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

78,000 Farm Homes Receive Medical Care With U. S. Help

Group

from national representatives of the medical profession.

The FSA points out that the plan has succeeded only through co-operation with hundreds of doctors throughout the country who, in many cases, formerly gave virtually free attention to families which, under the new plan, pay $20 to $30 a year for the same care.

From the standpoint of the FSA, the program has proved valuable "strictly as a business proposition."

Finds Risk Is Good

"Quite aside from any humanitarian purpose," says Dr. W. W. Alexander, administrator, "the FSA has found, as a lending agency, that a family in good health is a better credit risk than a family in bad health. It has developed plans for medical care because it has found that good health is a necessary part of a family's rehabilitation."

Farm security files tell of numerous cases similar to that of the Arkansas farmer who rested on his plow for ten minutes after finishing each furrow. The man's neighbors advised FSA officials against making a loan, but medical examination disclosed that the farmer suffered from hernia and pellagra. With these conditions corrected, the county supervisor reported he was dealing with an energetic farmer likely to settle in full his obligations to the FSA.

First step taken by the FSA in extension of the project is an agreement with the State medical association, authorizing negotiations with medical bodies in counties where the need is most urgent.

Agreements Differ

In its understandings with the local medical groups, the FSA provides that the total amount a borrower is to spend for medical care during the year must be within the family's ability to pay; that the family have free choice of physicians, and that funds set aside for compensation of doctors be placed in trustees' hands at the beginning of the operating period.

Beyond these essentials, agreements differ widely in various localities. Fees are usually set between $20 and $30 per family per year, and where necessary the FSA will increase its loan.

The plan in widest use stipulates that a certain portion of funds in the hands of trustees be set aside at the beginning of each year for hospitalization and emergency needs, including surgery, with remaining cash then divided into equal monthly allotments.

Doctors Administrators

Physicians submit monthly statements for their services, and if total bills for any month exceed the amount available all bills are proportionately reduced and each physician paid his pro rata share. If claims for payment are less than resources on hand, the balance is carried forward to the next month or end of the year, and then used either to complete settlement on bills for months in which funds were not sufficient, or returned to the families.

No "bureaucrat" can come between the patient and his physician under the plan, since the doctors themselves, through their county medical associations, perform the bulk of local administrative duties. National and regional administrative personnel consists of only a dozen officials, five of them physicians. Director of the project is Dr. R. C. Williams, detailed to the FSA from the United States Public Health Service. FSA farm and home supervisors in each county stimulate interest in the plan, but the health program, for them, is only one of numerous spheres of activity.

Doctors serving the 78,000 families, according to the FSA, express general satisfaction with the plan, and fears of needless requests for medical attention have not materialized. In the early weeks of the project's operation in several counties, families summoned physicians "just for the novelty of the thing," but after becoming satisfied that the plan really works, apparently were content to call the doctor only when they needed him.

Haven for Policy Bankers

lowed him into the county, and all are doing very well, indeed.

The result is that the Washington police, unable to get their hands on the men who operate the numbers racket, only can hope to harass them by arresting their agents in town—the men and women who write down the bets and those who pick them up and carry them out to Maryland.

United States Attorney Pine, after a check-up yesterday, issued figures showing that there was a sharp drop in indictments after President Roosevelt signed the new anti-lottery law last April.

Arrests Decline

There was an average of 22 indictments a month prior to the passage of the law, whereas thereafter the average dropped to nine a month.

Pine, assuming that the police were just as diligent as they had been, concluded from these fewer indictments that there were fewer violators to arrest, and consequently less playing of the numbers.

The records of Capt. George Little, chief of the vice squad, also show a drop in arrests right after the new law was passed. In January, for example, Little's men made 30 arrests in connection with the numbers racket. Then, in April, the month President Roosevelt signed the bill, the number fell to 6. In June there were only 3.

27 Seized Last Month

Last month, however, Little's men arrested 27 men and women on numbers charges.

If fewer arrests mean a diminution in numbers gambling, do more arrests mean an increase in such gambling?

The answer of the underworld is that the new law threw a scare into the operators and agents, and caused many of them to lie low for a while. That is when the arrests fell off. Now, the underworld says, most of those who went for cover in the spring are back collecting bets.

There may not be as much numbers gambling as there was prior to the passage of the new law, but there is a lot of it. Washington, with its steady Federal pay roll, is a gambling town, the gamblers say and the police admit.

Pedestrians Favor Arrest Of 'Jaywalkers'

Traffic

he expressed willingness to submit to arrest for "jaywalking."

"Sure," he said, "if the District sets up rules for pedestrians I would deserve to be arrested if I violated them. It would be a good thing for Washington if something is done to both protect pedestrians and make them be more careful."

Richard Helfer said he lived in Rochester, N. Y., and had been in Washington only a short time.

"We have pedestrian control laws in Rochester," said Helfer, "and we have succeeded in cutting our pedestrian fatality toll 35 per cent during the past year. I think such laws should be adopted in every city."

His wife agreed that from what little she has seen of Washington, something should be done to "make things safer for walkers."

Explaining he had always lived in a city where pedestrian control laws were in effect, Walter Hickman, of Arlington, said he thought they would "work very effectively here."

Walter Moore, a student, of 3700 McKinley street northwest, predicted Washington's juvenile population would be "much better off" if some measure was taken to keep youngsters off the streets and make them cross at intersections.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., where he came from, Percy Storm said pedestrians don't obey the rules even though police attempt to enforce them.

"If such a program is to be effective," he said, "pedestrians must be arrested and fined the same as motorists who break the law."

Ralph Lewis, of Kentucky avenue southeast, said:

"It is positively the best thing that could happen to Washington. Pedestrians should have been made to observe safe walking rules long before this."

Don Smith, who refused to give his address, was all against the plan.

"Do you walk against a red light and cross in the middle of a block now?" he was asked.

"Sure."

"Would you do the same thing if there was a law against it?"

"Sure."

"Then you don't believe in pedestrian regulation?"

"Nope."

The "man in the street" program will be repeated today at 12:15 p. m. from Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, scene of a recent pedestrian fatality.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: My personal nomination for the comic Senator of stage, screen and cartoon: Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina . . .

Bill Douglas . . . sound

One high Government official says he'll continue to bear down on the radio chains so long as they broadcast so much hoteha music and alarming voices . . . Most popular phrase of the week in Government circles: "We mustn't export our soil for paper promises."

* * * *

Spurred on by the most bouncing lady lobbyist in town, one big-shot industrialist paid $5,000 for the privilege of drinking a couple of highballs at a party where Senator Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn, the majority leaders in the two houses, were present . . . He could just as easily have taken them to lunch for $3.50, or maybe they'd have bought his lunch. (He got his money's worth, maybe, by pinching the lady lobbyist once or twice.) . . . Or so the story goes.

* * * *

An amazingly long memory was demonstrated by an eminent German diplomat here, who explains the Hitler attitude toward the Catholic Church by recalling that Louis XIV grabbed German provinces while German Catholics and Protestants quarreled. (So 300 years later the Catholics are being appeased.) He also justifies the expulsion of the Czechs and other minorities by recalling that many Germans left Alsace when France took it over in 1918. Sounds like a revenge motif, just a little awry.

"—peace between John and William"

Unlike some New Dealers, Secretary Perkins does not seem to think the resignation of either John L. Lewis or William Green is an indispensable preliminary to peace between C. I. O. and A. F. L. . . . The Labor Department is hopeful, if not sanguine, of early labor peace, using those words "hopeful" and "sanguine" very precisely.

* * * *

Occasionally the Justices of the Supreme Court show how much they relish a fine point of law, or a case that's interesting beyond the ordinary. During a case the other afternoon, involving the claim of a lawyer for a $1,500 fee from the estate of an insane war veteran whom he had helped collect some war risk insurance, five of the eight justices kept peppering the learned counsel with questions, some of them rather mordant . . .

Incidentally, the Justices of the Supreme Court could hear such a case about a lawyer's fee without having it in the backs of their minds, as a few lower court judges occasionally do, that they may be out there practicing law themselves after the next election.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: Lowest price thus far for the $15 set of FDR's works is $6, at a book store which put them on the rental shelf, where they remained unmarred . . . (A really formidable chap would be a Roosevelt hater who had read all five volumes.) . . . Far from being alarmed about the Japs in Hawaii, Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of our island possessions, thinks they're as patriotic Americans as any of our second-generation citizens.

"—our Japs are patriotic"

Perhaps the soundest liaison man between the New Deal and business is Bill Douglas of SEC. He made a good impression on the more progressive Wall Streeters, who have crowded the Roosevelt-haters into the background . . . Maybe his name should be added to any long list of men who might be acceptable to Roosevelt and to his Democratic adversaries for 1940, along with Joe Kennedy's. Douglas probably talks quietly with more big businessmen than any other New Dealer. But he's even younger than Dewey.

* * * *

At this point, it appears that one logical conclusion of the Dies committee might be that Nazis as well as Communists should be eligible for expulsion . . . Secretary Perkins' tricorn hats are more becoming than the peaked hat she's been wearing lately . . . One problem of the U. S. anti-syphillis drive is that quite a few older doctors don't know the technique of drawing blood for a Wasserman test.

* * * *

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Incidentally, I picked up a copy of Henry Wallace's "Whose Constitution?" for 35 cents . . . Most uptown name on the Federal pay roll: Robert Digges Wimberly Connor, the national archivist . . . It's comical to see the floundering Government lawyers appear at the Supreme Court in formal cutaway coats, while private million-dollar lawyers show up in tweed and flannel business suits.

Road League Elects Long As New Head

Dante Man Elevated
Fund Diversion Hit
Poll Favors Law
10 Added to Board

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 28.—Lee Long, of Dante, was named president of the Citizens Road League of Virginia after the league at its membership meeting today resolved to press its fight against diversion of road funds and called present right-of-way condemnation statutes "inadequate and inconsistent with a sound program of modern highway development."

Long was elevated from the vice presidency to succeed G. Leslie Hall, of Norfolk. T. Coleman Andrews, Richmond, former State auditor of public accounts, was named vice president, and Robert C. Harper, of Richmond, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Harper told the convention in his annual report that "longing eyes will be cast toward the road fund" in the event the 1940 General Assembly should find "little or no surplus available to meet the demands of many groups" for increased State appropriations.

Retiring President Hall reported that a postcard poll showed league members overwhelmingly favored adoption of a constitutional amendment prohibiting diversion of road funds. Hall said the poll showed 587 members favored such an amendment, while 74 opposed it, and 62 recorded themselves as noncommittal. The league resolved to press its fight against road-fund diversion.

The league's directorate was increased from 18 to 28.

Md. Church Gets $12,000 Bequest

Berlin, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Buckingham Presbyterian Church of Berlin will receive bequests totaling $12,000, in trust funds from the $50,000 estate of the late Mrs. Calvin B. Taylor, 81, whose will was filed for probate in the Worcester County Orphans' Court at Snow Hill today.

Outright bequests totaling $39,000 were willed to the church, to three nieces and several cousins of Mrs. Taylor, under the terms of her will.

Three nieces of the deceased were left $5,000 each. They include Mrs. Nancy Collins Brereton, Washington, D. C.

Chief Judge Urner Will Be Honored By Frederick Bar

Frederick, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—The Frederick County Bar Association began today plans for a testimonial dinner for Chief Judge Hammond Urner who retires in December after 29 years as head of the sixth circuit.

The local association was joined by the Montgomery County Bar in arranging for the tribute to Judge Urner.

Holden S. Felton, president of the Frederick bar group, named former Judge John S. Newman, Jacob Rohrback, and Reno S. Harp to a committee which will work with one from Montgomery County.

Judge Urner's retirement is mandatory since he will become 70 years old on November 4. The appointment of a successor is expected to be made by Gov. Nice. Judge Urner's term would have expired in June, 1942.

Associate judges of the sixth circuit are Arthur D. Willard of Frederick County and Charles W. Woodward of Montgomery County. Another judge is to be elected on November 8.

Berkeley County Employment Gain Noted in Period

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 28.—An increase in employment in Berkeley County and Martinsburg during the past three months was noted in an employment survey of the larger industries and business houses, presented yesterday at the regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce board of directors here.

The survey, submitted by Executive Secretary James M. Sellers, showed 5,661 employed October 26, an increase of 1,321 over the 4,069 as of July 27. On May 18 there were 4,221 employed.

It was explained that part of the increase is accounted for by teachers and other school employes, and by seasonal work in apple by-products plants.

The report showed 843 on WPA rolls, a decrease of 28 from the July 27 figure of 871, but substantially higher than the 732 figure obtaining on May 18.

W. Va. Continues Woods Fire Fight

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—State Forester D. B. Griffin reported today "a lot of good hard work" had brought scores of forest fires under temporary control.

He added, however, that, "we still have a desperate situation and will have until weather conditions improve."

He said about 1,600 men still are on patrol duty on the fires still blazing and predicted that "with cloudy weather we could put them all out."

Worcester County 2 to 1 Democratic

Snow Hill, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—Democrats in Worcester County outnumber Republicans more than two to one, the county board of election supervisors announced today.

The total registered vote in Worcester County today, including two registrations held this month, is 10,824. The 1936 registration of voters was 10,590. The net gain is 234.

Petersburg, W. Va., Oct. 28.—Funeral services were held today for Fred Hesse, 63, well-to-do farmer living about 3 miles west of Maysville, who committed suicide by shooting. Three years ago his only son killed himself.

Queen's Coronation Launches Harvest Fete at Thurmont

By the Associated Press.

Thurmont, Md., Oct. 28.—With all the regal splendor and pomp of royalty, blonde Susan Pryor, 17, of Lantz, Md., was crowned Queen Autumn IV tonight at the annual fall festival.

Starting the two-day celebration denoting the end of the harvest season, the coronation ceremony brought farmers and their families from over the entire county.

The coronation was held after the crown of tinsel was placed on the kneeling queen by C. S. Lane, Frederick County secretary of the World Poultry Congress.

Queen Autumn was attended by a court of princesses including: Elizabeth Curfman, Sabillasville; Sally Waeche, Thurmont; Cathalene Putman, Walkersville, and Phillis Hahn, Emmitsburg.

Pages were: Gladys Martin, Thurmont; Dolores Troxell, Thurmont; Betty Lou Sheads, Gettysburg, Pa.; Agnes Baker, Thurmont; Margaret Utterback, Lewistown; Helen Long, Rocky Ridge; Lillian Havner, Rocky Ridge and Ann Derr, Walkersville.

A mummers parade will be held tomorrow night.

Seen Meaningless
State Cost Cut Cited
Asks Where to Slice
Shore Road Plan Hit

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Gov. Harry W. Nice said tonight Herbert R. O'Conor, his gubernatorial opponent in the general election, is "rapidly becoming all things to all men, and all things to all sections of the State."

In a statement issued in lieu of a scheduled speech in Dorchester County, Gov. Nice said Attorney General O'Conor "pledges economy and solemnly announces that he will cut $750,000 from State expenditures, but he cannot be made to tell us from what department he will make this enormous deduction.

"He goes to the Eastern Shore and tells the good folks there that he will build a straight dual highway from Elkton to Ocean City," said Mr. Nice. "From where does he expect to get the money? That will cost millions, so that a saving of $750,000 is swallowed up in the expenditure of millions.

"He welcomes the Negro and urges him to rest his weary head upon Abraham's bosom, telling him that he is entitled to transportation of his children to and from school and that such transportation is now only furnished in nine counties. Here he went off the deep end. Twenty-two out of 23 counties already furnish that transportation.

" . . . He tell the people that he will not permit further gasoline diversion. As a matter of fact, he has nothing to do with it. I have already signed the law which prevents him or anyone else from making further diversion of the gasoline tax . . .

"He tells us that he is for a graduated income tax, but the tax amendment has not as yet been passed. Last year he was for a cigarette tax, a real estate tax and a sales tax. This year he is for neither . . . will he go back to his first love or approve lotteries?"

Lloyd Assails Nice Regime

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—O. Straughn Lloyd, Republican State Senator from Wicomico County and former Republican floor leader in the Senate, announced tonight he will support the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Herbert R. O'Conor.

"I am unwilling to approve a continuation of the record of extravagance, inefficiency and mismanagement of the administration of Gov. Nice," he said in a broadcast.

Senator Lloyd added his opposition to the Governor "does not mean that I have abandoned the Republican Party. On the contrary, those forward looking members of this great party who place the welfare of the people ahead of partisanship may continue to look to me for the fullest measure of support I am able to give."

John M. Saunders, Famed Writer, Ill At Charlottesville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—John Monk Saunder's widely known short story and scenario writer, is a patient in the University of Virginia Hospital, where he was admitted on Tuesday. The nature of his illness was not disclosed, but he is said not to be in a serious condition.

Mr. Saunders, whose home is in Hollywood, Calif., arrived at the Farmington Country Club on Sunday, accompanied by his young daughter, Susan, and her nurse. It is reported that he is considering purchasing a home in this vicinity.

He is the author of "Single Lady," and has written several screen plays of the air, among which are "Wings," "Legion of the Condemned," "The Dawn Patrol" and "The Last Flight." He has also contributed numerous articles and short stories to magazines.

In June of 1927 he married Fay Wray, movie actress, at Easton, Md.

Tri-County Soil District Mapped

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—Plans for a soil-conservation district for the counties of Albemarle, Louisa and Goochland are being formulated here.

Lyman Carrier, of the State soil-conservation district committee, met here yesterday with a group of Albemarle farmers to discuss the possibility of such a district. This meeting was the result of a petition signed by landowners in the Scottsville district, in southern Albemarle, requesting that a soil-conservation district be organized in that territory.

A meeting has been set for November 7 at Louisa Courthouse, with representatives from all three counties present, at which time hearings for the proposed district will be completed.

Homecoming Slated

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—Official announcement was made here today by C. Paul Cessna, alumni secretary of Gettysburg College, that the 1939 Alumni Homecoming Celebration will be held here on November 4. The date will be that of the Gettysburg-Muhlenberg football game.

Dr. Byrd Urges Higher Wages For Teachers

4,000 Hear Address
Lauds Md. Standards
Dr. Cook Also Talks

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Higher wages for Maryland school teachers was advocated today by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, in an address before 4,000 members of the State Teachers Association.

"I realize the growth of the university was coincident with the growth of public schools and the university will work shoulder to shoulder to get whatever is needed for further progress, including higher wages," he said.

Dr. Byrd said that of all University of Maryland students this year, those educated in the county grammar and high schools were scholastically ahead of others from outside the State.

Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools, told members Maryland schools need "not make any hop-skip-and-jump" progress because the State has good fundamental school laws to provide for necessary expansion.

A tribute to Dr. Lida Lee Tall, retired president of the Towson State Teachers College, was paid tonight at a dinner. Miss Tall is a past president of the State Teachers Association.

The convention will meet again tomorrow.

National P.-T. A. Head To Talk in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 28.—Mrs. G. R. Clements, Annapolis, president of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, notified the Washington County Council that Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will attend the State convention here November 15, 16 and 17, and will address the banquet on the opening night.

Mrs. Pettengill is editor of the National Parent-Teacher and is widely known as a teacher, writer and speaker. Several hundred delegates are expected at the convention.

Mark Pence Named Head Of State S. C. V.

From Charlottesville
Appointed by Price
Succeeds Burrus

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—J. Roy Price, commander-in-chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, has issued an order appointing Mark V. Pence, of this city, as commander of the Virginia division, effective at once.

Mr. Pence succeeds Col. N. Charter Burruss, of Norfolk, who has served as commander for more than two years. Col. Burruss was appointed in July, 1936, to fill the unexpired term of Col. T. Gilbert Wood, of Roanoke and was elected at two conventions since.

The new commander has been instructed to appoint his official staff, to name commanders of the five brigades, and inaugurate a campaign for the organization of new camps and the reorganization of old camps in his division.

Mr. Pence is a native of Shenandoah County, son of the late Adam Pence, who served in the Confederate forces as a member of Company K, Seventh Virginia Cavalry, commanded by the late Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, of Charlottesville. For the past three years he has served as commander of the R. T. W. Duke Camp, No. 583, Sons of Confederate Veterans, this city, as well as commander of the Fourth Brigade, Virginia Division.

Jimmy Walker to Act As Broadcast Master

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Former Mayor James J. Walker will make his radio entertainment debut as master of ceremonies on a weekly charity show on Sunday, November 6, it was announced today.

The dapper former mayor, author of the Tin-Pan Alley hit "Will You Love Me in December As You Did in May?" was said by officials of station WMCA to be donating his services for the variety program which will originate from New York hospitals and institutions.

State Grange Urged to Use U. S. Farm Aid

Soil Value Drop Cited
Tech Expert Speaks
Experiments Praised

By the Associated Press.

Marion, Va., Oct. 28.—Farmers attending the annual convention of the State Grange today were urged to take advantage of the opportunity to use governmental aid to agriculture.

Dr. John R. Hutcheson, director of the Virginia Tech extension division, told the farmers that they were in the best position they would ever be in regard to governmental aid.

He told the group that in the future the soil conservation work of the Federal Government would proceed through local districts set up under State committees.

Tracing the development of governmental aid to the farmer from the time the Department of Agriculture was established during Lincoln's administration, Dr. Hutcheson said despite efforts to improve Virginia's soil it was worth less in 1932 than during the 30 years previous.

Dr. Hutcheson described the establishment of experiment stations as one of the greatest contributions to agricultural development. The results of experiments, he said, were being carried to the farmers in usable form by extension workers.

Hunter Greenlaw, 'Best Boy Farmer,' Back in Stafford

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 28.—America's No. 1 farm boy, 21-year-old Hunter Greenlaw, was back at work today on his 385-acre farm, in Stafford County, after a trip to Kansas City where he won the national farming honor given by the Future Farmers of America, a gold medal and $500 in cash.

When Hunter receives the $500, sometime within the next week, he's going to use $100 to buy a pure-bred holstein calf. Another $100 will be put into a savings account and the remaining $300 will be used for new machinery and repairs to the home where he lives with his mother, Mrs. R. H. Greenlaw.

Under a ruling of the sponsors of awards, Hunter must first inform them what he intends to do with the $500 before he is mailed a check.

Rabbi Foresees War, Urges U. S. to Arm

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—Rabbi Leonard J. Rothstein, of Harrisonburg and Staunton, speaking last night at a banquet closing the District Eight meeting of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, predicted an inevitable war in which he said the United States must engage.

"We must arm to the teeth and let the preservation of our democracy be the foremost thought in our minds for some time to come," he said.

Richmond Leads State in Relief Cost

Richmond, Va., Oct. 28 (AP).—Richmond's expenditure of $316,239.14 for direct relief in the fiscal year 1937-38 far exceeded that of any other city in Virginia, it was shown today in records of the State department of public welfare.

The corresponding figure for Norfolk, next city in size, was $81,241.43. The expenditure by Roanoke was $43,218.98; Newport News, $27,881.45; Portsmouth, $24,839.01; Lynchburg, $21,639.31; Danville, $18,278.74, and Bristol, $6,749.49.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A Line on Linemen

It is the custom of football coaches to speak glowingly of their poor, downtrodden linemen—the guards, centers and tackles—who spend the afternoon with their noses in the dirt while the backs gallop to glory. For the coaches it is good business to speak thusly of the guys in the line, to haul out the superlatives and prate of courage and spirit and team play, for keeping the linemen contented is a huge part of their job.

At any Monday gathering of old grads the coach is a 1-to-5 shot to go into a spiel something like this: "The injustice of it all is appalling. To read the newspapers, you'd think we had only our backfield men out there playing the game.. No mention is made of the line, but I want to tell you that no team is any better than its line. My heroes out there Saturday afternoon were not Joe Klutz who made that 94-yard run, or Willie Whoozis who threw that 60-yard pass.

POVICH.

"My heroes were those grand boys in the line. My two guards, Sam Drizzlepuss and Butch Basher who were pulling out of the line and leading the interference, and those tackles—Slug McGee and Slim Strongheart who were always in the other team's backfield. They, my friends, were inspiring to watch. They won that football game for us. And don't let anybody tell you differently!"

Here's a Different Slant

And so it was refreshing, the other night to meet up with a couple of coaches who actually let their hair down, practiced none of their customary hypocrisy and said a word or two about linemen in all frankness. They must necessarily remain annoynmous but here's what they said.

"I never yet saw a lineman who came to me as a lineman who was any account as a football player. The fellows who tell me when they come out for my team that they were linemen in high school or prep school I can usually check off as hopeless as far as my team is concerned. No good fotball player ever grew up as a lineman."

"My friend, you are eminently correct," said coach No. 2. "You have taken from my mouth the very words I have often longed to express but never had the courage. But, between friends, I heartily agree with you. Boys who grew up as linemen are rarely good football players."

"Exactly. If they had native talent for football they wouldn't have been playing in the line. The best kid athletes always go for the backfield. That's where the fun is and they know it. How about yourself? You never wanted any part of the line when you were a kid, did you?"

"Mapes Go Into the Line"

"No, 'course I didn't. Only the dumb kids played in the line. You know how it used to be when we were playing football on the sandlots. All the best players played in the backfield and anybody was good enough for the line."

"You are perfectly right about that, my friend. When any strange kid came around our lot and wanted to play football we'd say 'sure, get in the line.' It didn't make much difference whether he was a good player or not. We always figured he couldn't do us any harm in the line."

"That's the same way it used to be when we were playing baseball as boys: If some smaller kid or some fellow we knew was a ham wanted to play on our team, we'd say 'Sure, get out in rightfield.' Somehow, rightfield didn't seem very important to us. All the fellows who had talent for the game were infielders, or pitchers or catchers. Sometimes we'd have fellows who really liked to play centerfield, or leftfield, but a rightfielder was regarded as the lowest form of ball player."

Reformed Backfield Men

"How true that was. It all amounted to the same thing. The kids who played in the outfield and the kids who played in the line just didn't have any aptitude for sport. Any native aptitude I mean. As I was saying, the fellow who reports to me saying he has been a lineman before coming to college usually has two strikes on him."

"That's what I've learned, too. Know who my linemen are this year? They're all reformed backfield men. I'd hate to think how I would have made out if I had to play as lineme nthe boys who came to me as linemen."

"No doubt about it. Reformed backs make the best linemen. In the first place they usually have more football sense than the fellows who grew up as linemen. They're smarter in a football way or they wouldn't have been backs in high school. What I've always said is that second-string and third-string fullbacks can be converted into your best linemen."

"Sure, linemen are made, not born. How about Lou Little's great lines when he was Georgetown? Except for Harry Connaughton, most all of his tackles and guards were fellows who couldn't make his backfield. They had come to him out of prep school as backs and he made a great line out of them. He didn't want any parts of born linemen."

Thus damning their heroes with faint praise, they wondered aloud if there was another drink in the house.

In Brief . . .

John "Blood" McNally, coach of the Pittsburgh Pros, proved reports of his retirement from football as slightly exaggerated when he played 60 minutes against Green Bay last Sunday . . . it's Blood's fourteenth season as a pro football player . . . Charley Kurtsinger, who will ride War Admiral in the Seabiscuit race, won the second race he ever rode, bringing home a 40-to-1 shot at Empire City in 1924 . . . "It'll be War Admiral all the way," says Kurtsinger of the Seabiscuit race . . . all money bet will be refunded if the two horses race to a dead heat at Pimlico on Tuesday . . . Some sort of an award should be voted Frank Dodson, Maryland's coach, who has let out not a single moan in this, his worst season as a coach . . . Dobson emphatically predicted Maryland's failures this season . . . Dobson can look for little help in future years inasmuch as soccer, not foolball, is the chief high school sport in Maryland . . . in fact, in only seven towns in the State is high schol football played . . . Clark Griffith declares that his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, is the most difficult manager with whom to talk trade . . . "I taught him too much about making deals when he was manager of the Washington club," explains Griffith modestly.

Navy Calls Penn Game Today 'Crucial'

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 28.—Navy football warriors, accompanied by half of the regiment and the Naval Academy band, will descend upon Philadelphia tomorrow, epecting a hard game from Pennsylvania, but determined to win their first major game of the season.

Head Coach Hank Hardwick would not hazard a prediction this afternoon but stated that his team's chances of stopping Penn's passes would be better on a rainy day.

The football squad will make a one-day trip of it, leaving Annapolis at 8:45 tomorrow morning and starting for home immediately after the game. The two battalions of the regiment, with the band, will leave shortly after and are scheduled to parade on Franklin Field at 1:15.

Navy people frankly regard the game as crucial. The history of many seasons has shown that unless the team hits a winning stride as to some of its big games, at least, it has had little chance against the Army. The general feeling is that the team is a good one this year and a major victory is due.

One change was made in the Navy line-up, Clarence Corbett starting at right end, instead of Lou Burke, however, is likely to get in the game later. Hardwick said that other changes might be decided upon before the game but the present intentions are to start Capt. Pete Powell at the other

Md. Host to V. M. I.; C. U. Tackles St. Louis; Rebels Are Favorites

Victory for Colonials Would Not Be Unexpected
C. U. Is Choice, Terps Underdogs
St. Louis Boasts Aerial Circus

By Jack Munhall.

George Washington vs. Ole Miss, Griffith Stadium, 2 o'clock.
Catholic University vs. St. Louis, C. U. Bowl, 2:15 o'clock.
Maryland University vs. V. M. I., College Park, 2:30.

There is the local collegiate scedule for today and, wherever you choose to go, the probability of seeing a good, close battle is strong.

Of course, George Washington and Mississippi playing their game, postponed from last night because of rain, figure to draw by far the largest crowd. The unusual strength of the Rampaging Rebels plus the unbeaten, united and unscored-on record of George Washington form a hard-to-resist combination.

However, granting that the Colonials and Rebels promise to display the best brand of football, C. U.-St. Louis and Maryland-V. M. I. both loom as interesting, hard-fought contests between evenly-matched elevens.

A Natural Rivalry

At College Park a good turnout is virtually assured because of the natural rivalry between the Terps and their Southern Conference foes and because their meting is the climax of Maryland's colorful Homecoming Day program.

Catholic University, coming along fast after a 27-0 rout by Detroit, is primed to revenge last season's 7-2 defeat by St. Louis' Billikens, whose aerial circus always is thrilling to watch.

Most reliable odds on the three games indicate that come tonight George Washington will no longer be undefeated; Catholic University will have its third victory in four starts and Maryland its fifth setback in six games.

Colonials Are Good

Odds, however, often mean nothing as Colonial followers will tell you. George Washington this season undoubtedly has a fine eleven which, on a given day, might extend any of the Nation's outstanding teams. And it is no secret that Coach Bill Reinhart has pointed his charges for Ole Miss, potentially the toughest opponent on the G. W. schedule.

George Washington will pit an unusually rugged line, a capable fleet of backs, headed by Vic Sampson, and a dangerous passer, Bill Richardson, against a smaller but much faster Rebel squad which will offer in Parker Hall one of the South's best all-around backs. What the result will be is hard to say. The Colonials are still an unknown quantity after four games, stiffest of which was with Colorado and Colorado is not a major pewer this season.

If the Colonials' line is able to function with the same success as it has enjoyed to date, if their pass defense can prevent Hall's throwing 40 and 50-yard touchdown passes as he did against Centenary and L. S. U., and if Sampson and Richardson are able to click, G. W. will win.

Paul Shu Plays

Maryland, still beset by injuries, has only precedent in its favor against V. M. I., which will be led by Paul Shu, one of the greatest backs ever developed in this area. The Terps have won nine games, lost nine and tied two in previous competition with the Cadets. They won at Lexington last season when Pershing Mondorff kicked a field goal for a 9-7 decision.

Today, however, Maryland will not have Mondorff, who is recovering from an appendectomy, nor will it have Jim Meade, leading groundgainer against V. M. I. the last two seasons. Meade still is hobbling around on an ankle broken in the Penn State game.

Even with these two stars out, Maryland is in better shape than usual. Charlie Weidinger, quarterback; Bob Brown, tackle, and Jim Forrester, all regulars, are ready for action, although Joe Murphy, sensational sophomore halfback, is on the doubtful list because of a strained leg tendon. Nick Budkoff, regular end, also will be on the sidelines.

Sant' Ambrogio Starts

Catholic University's struggle with St. Louis will mark the second start of a revised Cardinal lineup, which performer surprisingly well in defeating West Virginia Wesleyan last week.

Today a new star is expected to lead the Cardinals. Henry Sant' 'Ambrogio, an inconspicious halfback, suddenly has blossomed as a real triple-threater. Whether his new-found ability to dent an enemy line was prompted by the superior brand of blocking that Rocco Pirro, a converted tackle, is supplying from his new quarterback post or merely by added experience is questionable. More will be known after today.

The Billikens, according to advance word, will bring to the Capital one of the "passingest" teams ever to show here. And, although their captain and leading back, Danny Cochran may not play because of a leg injury, the Billikens can throw no less than four aerial specialists into the fray.

Only an exceptionally good backfield has enabled St. Louis to win two of five games this season, for its line admittedly is not first-class. With the exception of Len Gorman, touted as one of the West's better center, and the first string ends, Frank Gayer and Frank Hagan, the Billikens have not even an average college lineman.

Little Hoyas Win, 13 to 0

Landon High Bows Kuntz Scores Two Game Played in Rain

Undefeated Georgetown Prep kept its record clean but muddied a lot of uniforms in a game yesterday with Landon High on the Garrett Park gridiron, the Little Hoyas emerging victorious, 13-0.

Toast of the triumph was Marty Kuntz, a pony halfback, who scored both his team's touchdowns and generally proved the class of the teams. Bottled completely in the opening period, Kuntz became restless late in the second quarter and, taking the ball on Landon's 45-yard stripe, moved behind excellent interference across the goal.

He reversed the field twice on the jaunt, lost his blockers on about the 20, but picked them up as he went over. Considering the extreme sogginess of the field in places and glass-like slipperyness in others, Kuntz deserved extra credit for the feat. Buddy Eckerich, fullback, converted.

A 7-0 lead safely stowed away, the boys in blue were content to hold brown-shirted Landon near the center of the field during the third quarter.

In the final minutes of the game, as 500 chilled and rain-soaked students, alumni and interested spectators were preparing to go home, Kuntz undertook his second long run of the day, a 25-yard one, which was good for a goal. On this attempt, Eckerich's attempted line plunge for the extra point was stopped.

When Sam Baugh, Luckman, Friedman Meet—It's Passes!

Technique Hasn't Changed, Friedman Says
Pass Plays Now Integrated Into Team System
Youngsters Start Early Now, Sammy Observes

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Oct. 28.—Benny Friedman, Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman—the past, present and future of top-flight pigskin tossing—were posing together for photographers in a room at the Commodore.

Many experts consider these three lads the greatest gridiron Robin Hoods that ever lived.

When I entered the room all three were roaring with laughter, as were most of the assembled reporters and publicity men. Baugh had just informed a newspaper man that it was doubtful if he would play baseball with Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League next season.

Why?

JACK CUDDY.

"Because George Marshall is afraid I might get hurt," Slingin' Sam replied. Marshall is owner of the Washington Redskins, of the National Football League. Baugh, former Texas Christian ace, plays left half for the Redskins.

Everyone knew that most baseball owners prohibit their athletes from cavorting on the gridiron, but this was the first tmie anyone had heard of a football magnate putting reverse English on the restriction.

When the laughter subsideid and the cameramen finished, the conversation naturally drifted to passing. Friedman, former sharp-shooter for Michigan, the Giants and Dodgers, and now coach of New York's City College, said he thought the greatest development in the passing game during the last decade was the dove-tailing of throwing plays into the routine of performance.

"When I played at Michigan, back in '25, '26 and '27, our forward throws were isolated plays," Benny explained. "We always passed from a punt formation. And every time I went back, the opposing team knew we were going to pass because I never kicked. Now the passing is done from practically any and all formations—and at any time. When the boys come out of the huddle and line up, you can't tell what's coming—a rushing attack or a pass. It took a lot of thought and practice to dove-tail the pass into the game this way—particularly from single wing-back formations, where it is difficult to give the passer proper protection."

Technique Is same

Did Friedman note much change in the technique of throwing the pass? Benny said he hadn't. The boys throw them overhanded now just as they did in his day. "Of course," he admitted, "I guess most of them are more accurate now than I was. The change in the football—making it more cigar-shaped back in '33—helped the passers a lot. Also the boys got more experience and coaching in passing before they get to college now."

Baugh said, "That's right. Down in the Southwest, where I come from, the kids start passing when they're in the grades now. They pass almost as much down there as they rush."

They Were Isolated

One of the writers asked Baugh how far he could throw a football. Sam said he didn't know. He's never tried to throw it as far as he could. "You see," he continued, "distance doesn't matter much in passing. Why, there are some line men on our club who can probably throw a lot farther than me, in practice. But the thing that counts is poise when the ends or tackles are coming at you. Some fellows who look like dream passers in

Gamecocks Surprise
Arrowsmith Is Hero
Carolina Rallies

By the United Press.

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 28.—Villanova fell from the united and undefeated ranks today in a 6-6 deadlock with the University of South Carolina.

Six thousand fans attending the Orangeburg County Fair watched the underdog South Carolina Gamecocks battle the Wildcats to a tie.

The Pennsylvanians, doped to win by several touchdowns, found tough going as South Carolina played its best football of the season and kept the Wildcats well down in their territory most of the game.

DeWitt Arrowsmiths punti-g drove Villanova back repeatedly while two of Harvey Bueks weak punts allowed South Carolina to remain in the visitors territory.

Villanova scored in the third period when Bukowski went to the Carolina 11-yard line on an end around plya. Howlett passed to Bukowski behind the goal line for th etouchdown. Perieras kick for extra point was wide.

Carolina came back to score when Clary passed 21 yards to Grygo. On the next play Clary stepped 2 yards across the goal line. Clarys kick also was wide.

Villanova made eight first downs to five for the Gamecocks.

Terp, Penn Jayvees Tie

Final Score Is 6-6
Play Is Spectacular
McCarthy Is Star

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., Oct. 28.—Maryland and Penn tied at 6-all in a junior varsity game here today, both scores resulting from spectacular plays.

Pena scored in the second quarter on a pass from Wexler to McCarthy that netted 55 yards. Quarterback Miller, of Maryland, took a punt in the fourth period and ran it 60 yards for the Terps' score. Neither try for the extra point was close.

Penn's attack was much more formidable than Maryland's, but the Terps stopped the Quakers several times within the 20-yard line.

Pin Sweepstakes Will Begin Today

Washington's first gowling sweepstakes of the year, Charlie Olive's second annual Hallowe'en Handicap Sweepstakes will be held today and tomorrow at the Takoma alleys, starting at 2 p. m.

The sensational performer of the year, Louis Jenkins, is defending champion, having won last year's event with a 417.

Bowlers are expected from Baltimore and nearby Virginia and Maryland. The entry fee is $1.45, including the price of games. Entrants will be accomodated as fast as they sign up, for the bowling will be continuous.

G. W. Frosh Play Today

At 12 noon today in a preliminary to the varsity game at Griffith Stadium, George Washington's freshman eleven will make their season's debut against Dickinson Seminary Prep, of Williamsport, Pa.

78,000 to See Notre Dame Battle Army Today in New York

Irish Are Liked Over Uncle Sam's Cadets
Pitt Is Favored Over Fordham Rams
Gophers Rated Underdogs in Wildcat Game

New York, Oct. 28.—Climaxing a month-long build-up of numerous upsets, wide-open play and striking emphasis on the forward pass, the current college football campaign tomorrow hits its 1938 peak in attendance. Directly responsible for that peak is a profusion of battles between teams so evenly-matched that the forecaster's safest policy is to head for the nearest bomb-proof shelter, taking his selections with him.

Four of the day's games will attract crowd's of 70,000 or better, leading off with 78,400 at Yankee Stadium for the renewal of the country's oldest intersectional rivalry, between Army and Notre Dame. The Pitt Stadium will be packed with its 75,867 capacity for the all-conquering Panthers' clash with under-dog but unbeaten Fordham; 71,000 will be in the Yale Bowl as the Elis deploy against Dartmouth, and 70,000 will fill Franklin Field's two tiers for Pennsylvania's engagement with Navy.

Elsewhere only lack of additional space will keep the crowds below these figures. That applies to Northwestern's Dyche Stadium, where 47,000 will see the Wildcats tackle Minnesota in the Big Ten feature; to the Dixie headliners matching Tennessee and Louisiana State in the Southeast Conference and Duke and North Carolina in the Southern, due to draw 35,000 each, and to the 27,000 crowd expected for the Texas Christian-Baylor game which brings together two undefeated Southwest Conference rivals.

The principal Pacific Coast duel between Oregon State and California is due to draw another 30,000.

Feeling oddly like the man who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel, only more so, this observer leads with his chin in the following directions (probable attendance figures in parentheses):

PITTSBURGH-FORDHAM (75,867)—Fordham has spirit but Fordham also has only three tackles and three ends. Pitt's power plays are specially designed to pulverize tackles and ends. Conceding Fordham its best running attack since Jim Crowley took over, the selection is Pitt, with both teams scoring for the first time in the four years of their rivalry.

Army-Notre Dame (78,400)—It still is hard to forget that the Irish, in their opener, used several full teams against Kansas, and that Kansas couldn't score against any of them. Further, Notre Dame is reported to have used only basic plays in its four victories, while Army goes into one weak on replacements. Notre Dame.

NORTHWESTERN - MINNESOTA (47,000)—Hal Van Every, the Gophers' ace back, has regained the 15 pounds he lost through illness. He and his mates had an extra week's rest. Still, largely on a hunch, Northwestern.

TEXAS CHRITIAN-BALOR (27,000)—Texans point out that T. C. U. duplicated Pitt's score against Temple while using its regulars only 29 minutes. Baylor has Patterson to match T. C. U.'s O'Brien, but T. C. U. looks to have better line. Texas Christian.

Andy Farkas, Overlooked by Football 'Experts' While In College, Now One of Outstanding Pro-Grid Players

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh,
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

Here is the forward-pass play which, during the 1937 and 1938 seasons, has scored no fewer than ten touchdowns for the Champion Washing Redskins.

SAMMY BAUGH.

It is our pass that evolves out of a fake reverse run and in the accompanying photograph and diagram, I have outlined how it is best worked.

As you see, the No. 4 back, our passing back, has made a half spin as if to hand the ball to the No. 3 back on a reverse run to the left or weak side. But the No. 4 man merely fakes handing the ball to No. 3, takes another half spin, and starts looking for a receiver.

In the play pictured above, he is throwing the ball to the No. 3 man in the flat zone, but one of the features of this pass is that he has three other optional receivers.

The right end (No. 5) has, as you see, gone straight down the field only 3 or 4 yards and then cut sharply over to the other side of the line. He is Charlie Malone. And the right end, Wayne Milner (No. 6) has taken an opposite route to the other side of the line. Our fourth eligible man on the pass is the No. One back who has gone into the flat toward the right and is out of the picture.

This play, of course, is based on deception, starting out as an apparent reverse run to the left by No. 3 who did not take the ball. You will notice how Malone (No. 5) is aiding in the deception by faking a catch in an attempt to draw the opposition secondary to him.

As seen in the diagram, the play is worked from the unbalanced line to the right, or strong side and, like most all Redskin passes, two linemen pull out to give the passer added protection inasmuch as two backs as well as two ends are being shaken free.

The center, after the snap, has pulled out diagonally to intercept the right end who is rushing the passer, and the tackle on the other side of the line has pulled out to block the opponents' left tackle. The duty of blocking the enemy left end falls to our No. 2, or blocking back, who has pulled over a bit into the flat.

Our men still in the line can be plainly seen blocking and checking without any attempt to charge.

If the passer notes that the opponents' roving center has covered our No. 3 back, he can pass to our left end, who is probably free. It is to these two men that most of our fake reverse passes are completed.

If both the opponents' right halfbacks and the roving center are sucked toward the middle of the line, the completion of this pass usually means touchdown as the No. 3 man has an open field ahead.

Success of the play depends, however, on proper execution. Improperly executed, it is probably the most dangerous pass that any team can attempt. If, on the pass to our No. 3 man, the defensive right end plays a waiting game and the pass is not gotten away properly, the defensive end can intercept it with a clear field ahead for a touchdown.

There is not much danger, however, of the defensive right halfback intercepting this pass, as he has too far to go to get in the path of the ball.

One of the features of this play is that the enemy cannot concentrate too greatly on pass defense. If it develops as a genuine reverse play and not a pass, it can mean a lot of trouble to the defense. It was on this reverse to the week side that Max Krause broke away for two touchdown runs against the Philadelphia Eagles this season. And it was this same running play which sent Cliff Battles through tackle and over the Bears' goal line after a 9-yard gain in the world's professional championship game last season.

Three High School Games Are Halted

Dripping skies and cold weather caused postponement of three high school football games yesterday. The scheduled clash between Central and Roosevelt in the interhigh series was caled off and will be played Monday at Central Stadium, at 3:30.

The game between St. John's and Washington-Lee of Arlington also was delayed. It will be played today at 2:30 in Clarendo.

Football Follies of 1948

Would you mind taking a few letters Miss Armstrong? I'm really all cluttered up with—what's that? When am I going to make the football selections for this week's games? Why, Miss Armstrong, you don't mean to tell me you bet on my selections, because if you do—oh, you were just wondering when I'm going to do a little work for myself. I see. Well, suppose I pick the winners and you take the letters at the same time. O. K? O. K.

VIDMER.

Fordham at Pittsburgh—This goes to John Farrar, of Farrar & Rinehart. Dear John: I am completely confused, which of course is nothing unusual. But you wrote that you were sending me a copy of Clyde Brion Davis's new book, "Northend Wildcats," and that it was a swell baseball story by the man who wrote "The Great American Novel" and "The Anointed." But what I received was William Orton's "Twenty Years' Armistice" and I can't find a thing about baseball in the entire 298 pages. This is supposed to be a sports column and I don't think the European situation has anything sporting about it. Shall I read "Twenty Years' Armistice" and imagine what Mr. Davis would have written about baseball, or should I just ignore the whole business, or should I return the book you sent and hope. Maybe I had better go out and buy "Northend Wildcats" and say nothing about the mistake. P. S. Give my regards to Stanley Rinehart. P. P. S. I just received "Northend Wildcats" and thanks very much. P. S. again. If you're interested, Pitt over Fordham.

Army-Notre Dame at the Yankee Stadium—This is for Waite Hoyt, yes, that's right, the good-looking fellow who used to pitch for the Yankees and a lot of other teams in the big leagues. Dear Waite: I'm delighted to hear that you have started your nightly broadcasts over WNEW and I know your anecdotes, memoirs and character studies of your 22 years in baseball are going to go over great. Of all the baseball men I've ever known, you can tell 'em best. By the way, I'm picking the Army, but I'll admit sentiment has a great deal to do with the choice.

In the Book

Cornell at Columbia—Oh, yes, I want to thank Kendall Banning for his new book, "Annapolis Today." I haven't had time to read it yet, but I found so much pleasure in its predecessor, "West Point Today," that I'm looking forward to it. Would you mind dropping him a line to that effect and tell him he might dash off another this afternoon, and call it Cornell Today."

Princeton at Harvard — You might relieve me of these too. Tell J. Clement Boyd how pleased I am to have the copy of the account of the first intercollegiate football game for my archives, and accept this invitation from William W. Dean for the 1920 class dinner at the Harvard Club, and thank Alfred Sloan for the invitation to attend the General Motors preview the day before the auto show, and you might drop a line to William Alexander and J. Wallace Thorsen in explanation of that typographical error on the Dartmouth practice. Tell them that the only explanation is that the linotypers and proof readers, like Poland and Hungary, must be trying to grab themselves a piece of Czecho-Hanover. What's that? Oh, yes, I nearly forgat—Harvard.

Hold Hhat Cheer

Navy at Pennsylvania—This is for Frank Labrie. Dear Sir: Your idea of scoring points for yardage gained (1 point from 25 to 75 yards, 2 points for 76 to 126 yards and 3 points for 127 and over) might have a great deal of merit, but I'm afraid it would leave the spectators in a rather dazed state at the finish of a football game. For instance, you note that Columbia gained 285 yards against 226 for Penn, the difference of 59 yards earning 1 point for the Lions and making the final score really 14 to 4. But it would be rather difficult to restrain the Penn cheering section from romping out on the field at the end of the game and celebrating what is, was, under the present system of scoring, a 14-3 victory for the Red and Bue. Under your system, I can imagine the cheerleaders holding up their hands at the end of the game and shouting, "Don't cheer boys, maybe we were licked. Wait for the statistics. It will only take them about half an hour to check them." Penn again.

Dartmouth at Yale—Oh, here's one I should have answered long ago. It's for Eugene E. Stevens, of Washington. Dear Gene: Thanks for the tribute to Wes Ferrell. It might boomerang when he comes back next season and wins a pennant for the Yankees. You see, I don't think he is all washed up and neither does Joe McCarthy. Let's wait a while and meantime pick Dartmouth (with the usual reluctance).

Slight Complaint

Minnesota at Northwestern—I'm not quite sure what this is all about, but it's for Miss Edith M. Budd. Dear Miss Budd: Possibly you never have heard of such things as typographical errors, or maybe you never punch the wrong key when you sit down to your typewriter. Well, a linotype machine is very much like a typewriter, only sometimes there isn't enough time to make corrections in the haste to get out the news. If you would read the later editions, after the corrections have been made, maybe you wouldn't be so "good and angry." Well, maybe you wouldn't be so angry anyway. Put a little something on Minnesota and cheer up.

Hoyas Defeat Temple, 13 to 0, in Stunning Upset

G. U. Retains Undefeated Record

Breaks Help Winners
Owls Are Outplayed
Melendeck Is Star
Checas Also Scores

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 28.—Taking full advantage of two timely breaks, a hard-tackling Georgetown University kept its 1938 record unblemished tonight, turning back a big and powerful Temple eleven by the convincing margin of 13-0.

A small audience of 8,000 fans who braved chill winds and an early drizzle, saw the Hoyas march 24 yards in the third period for their first score, and intercept a Temple pass in the final quarter to get under way for their second touchdown march.

Joe Mellendeck, the Hoyas' doe-footed quarterback, smashed over right tackle from the 3-yard line for the initial touchdown and Lou Ghecas sprinted 14 yards around right end into pay dirt for the second.

But the Hoyas did not win without a struggle, and it was their stirring defensive play in the second period that was the game's turning point. The Hoyas brought their red-shirted hosts to a grinding halt on the 5-yard line, inches short of a first down, and Temple never again got within sniffing distance of the goal line.

FIRST PERIOD

Temple won the toss and elected to defend the west goal, taking advantage of a stiff breeze. Lumac brought Kercher's kick-off back 15 yards to his own 20. They traded kicks, Georgetown gaining some 15 yards on the exchange. Georgetown got possession of the ball on its own 45 on a punt. Mellendeck passed to Koshlap for a first down on Temple's 46. They exchanged punts again, Georgetown regaining the ball on Temple's 46-yard line. On two plays running from spread formation, Mellendeck made it first down on Temple's 34. Koshlap went around right end on a beautiful run, picking up 14 yards and first down on Temple's 20. The Owls held, stopped a running play and three passes, and Temple took the ball on its own 14-yard line. Berrier and Honochik picked up a first down on the 26, but the Hoyas held, and Stevens punted to Mellendeck, who was thrown out on his own 47. Georgetown was penalized 15 yards for holding, but on the next play Mellendeck punted out on Temple's 13-yard line as the period ended. Score—Georgetown, 0; Temple, 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Georgetown inserted a half dozen substitutes, all but one lineman. The teams stuck to their punting, but Georgetown drew a 15-yard penalty for clipping after receiving a kick that set them back on their own 8-yard line. Mellendeck's return boot was weak, and Temple took the ball of Georgetown's 38. The Hoyas refused to yield, however, and took the ball on Temple's 37, but the Owls got it right back. Ashwood recovering Meisen's fumble on the 39. On a double reverse that caught Georgetown napping, Honochik to Stevens to Lucak, the Owls picked up 22 yards and first down, down on Georgetown's 14-yard line. Wychunas made the tackle, preventing a score. Honochick and Berrier failed to dent the line, but on fourth down Berrier broke over right tackle and romped to Georgetown's 5-yard line, where he finally was stopped. It was short of a first down, however, and Mellendeck punted out to his own 40-yard line, Berrier returning the ball to Georgetown's 27. On the third attempt, Berrier passed to Honochick for a first down on Georgetown's 13. The Owls bucked the ball to the 6-yard stripe, but Georgetown again held, regaining the ball on downs. Mellendeck punted to midfield. Kercher, Hoya end, recovered Berrier's fumble. A pass failed as the half ended. Score—Georgtown, 0; Temple, 0.

THIRD PERIOD

Temple's kick-off rolled out on the 25-yard line, and Georgetown took the ball on its own 39. The Hoyas failed to gain, but so did Temple, and Georgetown had the ball. The ensuing exchange, regaining the ball on its own 46-yard stripe. The Hoyas' failed to gain and Mellendeck punted to Temple's 11-yard line where it was downed. On the next play Temple was penalized to within a yard of the goal-line for holding. Stevens punted to Mellendeck on Temple's 24-yard line. Mellendeck tried a pass, it was batted around and finally caught by Burke on Temple's 2-yard line. Koshlap hit the line for a first down on the 12, on two plays Mellendeck carried it to the 3-yard line—inches short of a first down. The same player dove over right tackle for a touchdown. Lio came in to try for the extra point, but his attempt was wide. Score: Georgetown, 6; Temple, 0.

Lio's kick-off was bad. Temple getting the ball on its own 40. They exchanged kicks again, and Moulin, substituting for Mellendeck, put the Hoyas in another hole by punting out on his own 28. Temple went into the air, failed to connect on four passes, and surrendered the ball on downs. Mellendeck got off a quick kick that was taken by Powers on his own 27. On a fake kick, Powers took a pass from Stevens, but fumbled, Koshlap recovering for Georgetown on the Owls' 40 as the period ended.

Score: Georgetown, 6; Temple, 0.

FOURTH PERIOD

Temple repulsed two running plays and broke up a long pass before Mellendeck, back in for Koshlap, punted into the end zone. On three plays, the last a lateral, Nichols to Stevens to Powers, Temple picked up first down on the 42. Another punting duel ensued. Temple regaining the pigskin on Georgetown's 32. On a reverse, Powers almost got away for a score, but was hauled down on Georgetown's 17-yard line after making a first down. Moulin stopped Juralewicz for a yard loss, and on the next play Nichols fumbled and recovered on the 26. Kercher and Daly drove Juralewicz back and smeared him for a 23-yard loss, and Georgetown took the ball on its own 48-yard line. Moulin and Mellendeck made first down on Temple's 41, hitting off tackle. The Hoyas drew an offside penalty, and another for delaying the game, putting the ball back at midfield. Mellendeck punted out on Temple's 25. Temple went into the air, but Johnny Frank pulled in Juralewicz's second toss, and ran it back 22 yards to Temple's 14. On the very next play Ghecas, running from a spread formation, rounded right end for a touchdown. McFadden's placement split the uprights. Score: Georgetown, 13; Temple, 0.

Moulin kicked off to Berrier, who was knocked out on his own 27. Temple again tried the air, and this time Daly hauled down Berrier's toss and was thrown on the Owls' 27. Stalling for time, Georgetown failed to gain in four running plays, and the game ended as Temple took the ball on its own 34-yard mark.

Final score: Georgetown, 13; Temple, 0.

5 Alexandria Teams Play

Full Program Today
Episcopal in 4 Tilts
G. W. High Vs. Lewis

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 28.—The most extensive single-day grid program of the entire campaign has been carded for Alexandria tomorrow, when scholastic elevens clash in a total of five games to be played during the morning, afternoon and evening.

Episcopal High School figures in four of the five contests, its varsity, junior varsity, 125-pound and 100-pound elevens being slated to meet like teams from McDonogh School, of Baltimore, while in the evening attraction, George Washington High plays host to Andrew Lewis, of Salem, under the floodlights at the G. W. Stadium.

Out at Episcopal, the three junior games will be played simultaneously, starting at 10:30, while the varsity tilt is slated to get under way at 2:30. The down-town contest between G. W. and Salem has been set for 8 p. m.

As has been the case in every game this season, the Maroons will be banking on an aerial attack to carry them to victory over the McDonogh Cadets, with little "Stumpy" Craighill slated to do all the passing.

Teamed up with Craighill in the backfield will be "Red" Bradfield, Stanley Woodward and John Young, while the starting line will probably include Ben Dulany and Tom Todd, ends; Capt. Charlie Barrett and Porter, tackles; Bob Nichols and Buster Robertson, guards, and Billy Suhling, center.

The George Washington eleven, still suffering heavily from an injury which has all but ruined its chances for a successful season, will be gunning for its second Virginia Class A Conference victory of the season against Salem.

The Presidents have won one, lost one and tied two against Conference foes, and a victory over the Western contenders would send them up into the first division in the State scholastic circuit for the first time this season.

As the result of injuries and illness, the Presidents will be forced to perform without at least three regular members of the starting line-up, while several other first string performers will be handicapped by minor hurts. Ed Snyder, regular right end, is out for the season with a broken ankle; Albert O'Brien, guard, will be lost to the squad for two weeks as the result of a shoulder injury, while Billy Garth, a regular tackle, is out indefinitely as the result of a mild attack of yellow jaundice.

Middleburg Hunter Show Opens Today With Entry List of 450

16 Classes to Go Through Paces
10,000 Spectators Are Expected
Noted Horses and Horsemen to Vie

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., Oct. 28.—The Middleburg Hunter show, annual autumn classic of this beautiful horse country, opens this morning with 450 entries in 16 classes. Officials of the show estimate that 10,000 persons will be on hand for the big event.

In order to complete the lengthy program before nightfall, the show will be opened by clarion call at 9:30 oclock. The Greenhalgh, Whitney, Langley, Metcalf and many other celebrated hunting stables of Virginia have all entered their most brilliant performers in this show, which easily is the outstanding event of this season in this region.

In addition to the native stables there are also several outstanding hunters entered from New York and other eastern localities. Most of the classes are limited to hunters. And in this country, hunters are really what the name implies—no pampered horses that are trotted from show to show and entered in each as bonafide hunters. These entries are really hunter-hunters, in every sense of the word.

Hunter Classic Unusual

The Hunter Classic will be one of the most unusual and interesting of its kind. It has taken on all the characteristics of an outstanding hunters' pageant. There will be a quene of the Middleburg Hunt country. There also will be a "Lest We Forget Class" in which famous hunters from days of yore will be impersonated by equine actors. All the tradition of this rich horse country will abound in the show today, which, coupled with the outstanding type of animal that will be shown, should make the affair one of the most brilliant of the season.

Gen. Robert E. Lee's gray thoroughbred, Traveler, will be portrayed by Miss Charlotte Haxall Noland's imposing Rokeby. The story of the Traveler, who carried its gallant master safely through every campaign of the War Between the States and lived an honored life of 26 years, is one of the time-honored legends of this hunter country.

Half Century Class

A half century class is also on the program. The class requires its exhibitors must be 50 years of age, many hours of which must have been spent in the saddle following the hounds. Several of the veterans who are entered in the event have made hunting history in and around Middleburg and have become models for the younger generation of horsemen in this territory.

Since every detail of performance is taken seriously here at Middleburg it is a horse-wise audience that will assemble in the broad acres of Glenwood for the big event. Acting Manager James B. Skinner has organized a committee which has been kept hustling in preparation for the affair.

Everything is all set for one of the greatest events of its kind down here and every horseman for miles around can hardly be disappointed. Because Middleburg knows horses and knows how to stage a big show.

Dukes Beat Detroit, 14-6

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.—Duquesne spotted the University of Detroit Titians an early 6 points tonight, then rammed across two second period touchdowns in rapid-fire order to accomplish a 14-to-6 upset victory as 8,943 fans loked on in Forbes Field.

FIRST PERIOD

Detroit opened up with a passing and rushing attack sparked by Palumbo and in nine plays Barrit banged through tackle from the nail-yard line for the score. Serangelli blocked Pegan's attempted placement. A few plays later Palumbo kicked out on his own 36-yard line when he was hidden by a holding penalty which pushed the ball to Detroit's one, returned the kick to Detroit's 29 as the period ending. Detroit leading, 6-0.

SECOND PERIOD

Coach Gus Dorais sent in his first team as the period opened but they couldn't halt the aroused Dukes, who banged across for two touchdowns in short order. Nery with the ball on Detroit's 4-yard line, faked a field goal attempt skillfully and passed over the goal to Serangelli for a touchdown. Nery converted. The second tally came on a reverse, Onder to Barron, from the 2-yard line and Nery again converted shortly before the half ended with Duquesne on top, 14-6.

THIRD PERIOD

Palumbo returned Nery's punt 18 yards to Detroit's 40-yard line early in the period. Palumbo fumbled in a fancy reverse play and Nopper recovered on the Titan 37. Smashes by Nery, Barron and Gallagher pushed the ball to Detroit's 16-yard line but Gallagher fumbled right back and Cheaney recovered for Detroit on the Titan 21. After an exchange of punts, Palumbo kicked out of bounds on the Detroit 34. The game was halted a few minutes while Coach Dorais, former Notre Dame player, talked over the radio from the field in an Army-Notre Dame broadcast and the period ended with Duquesne still leading, 14-6.

Warren Eleven Beaten, 6 to 0

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 28.—The first football team to cross the Warren County High School goal line this season was Harpers Ferry High School who defeated the heavier Warren Wildcats here this afternoon, 6 to 0.

In the second period, S. Nichols skirted the Front Royal end for 15 yards and a little later crossed the last stripe for the only touchdown. An attempted kick for the extra point was blocked.

In the final quarter, the Wildcats reached their opponent's ½-yard line but fumbled and the visitors kicked out of danger.

S. Nichols and Nolan starred for Harpers Ferry. Ohler, Hodgson and McFall were strongest on offensive for Front Royal and Eckardt, Fuqua and Marchi played well on defense.

Navy Plebes Beat Virginia Harriers

Annapolis, Oct. 28 (AP).—Navy plebe harriers took a 19-43 win from the University of Virginia freshman cross-country team over a 2¼-mile course today.

Tom Turner, plebe, was first in 12 minutes, 23 seconds. Bev Tucker, frosh, followed 30 yards behind. Plebes who finished in order were Burt, Shreve, Gallager, Seamans and Johnston. Butler, frosh, was eighth. Bill Cross, Navy, finished ninth. Webster, Hopkins and Vardaman, all Virginia, trailed in that order.

Warrenton Beats Berryville, 25-0

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 28.—The Warrenton High School won its third straight victory here today by defeating the strong Berryville, Va., High School 25 to 0, in a pouring rain. Booth, Warrenton's quarterback, intercepted two Berryville passes to score two of the locals' touchdowns.

Washington Handicap
Volitant Is Liked

Edward Friendly's Jacola, the 3-year-old filly who sent Seabiscuit down to defeat two weeks ago, was the over-night favorite for the $15,000 added Washington Handicap, richest of the purses at the 25-day meeting of the Maryland Fair, Inc., which ends today.

Supporting the main event will be the $5,000 Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap for 2-year-olds in which Saratoga Stable's Volitant is the likely favorite.

Jacola, winner of the Laurel Mile and the Maryland Handicap, figures to have a stiffer battle than either of those events despite the fact that Seabiscuit will be absent due to his coming engagement with War Admiral. The daughter of Jacopo and La France picks up much weight and is expected to draw chief opposition from William Ziegler, jr.'s, Esposa, Frank Christmas' Idle Miss and John Manfuso's Aneroid.

The Friendly filly has shown her ability to run the mile and a quarter route and also will be at home in the going which appears slated to be muddy.

Voliatnt came to Laurel with a good record. El Chico downed him only by a length in the Junior Championship stakes. He has won the National Stallion stakes as well as two other races. George D. Widener's Exploded, William Zeigler, jr.'s, Time Sheet and the Milky Way Stable's Giles County are considered the most formidable of the eight juveniles due to face the probable favorite.

Rehearing for Malone Is Ordered by Court In Bye Bye Will Case

Decision Barring Trainer Reversed
Judge Holds Testimony Improper
Hints Action if Perjury Is Found

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28.—The Maryland Racing Commission's rulingbarring from the turf Tom Malone, Philadelphia horse trainer, was ordered vacated today by Judge Eugene O'Dunne, in Superior Court. Malone, with others, had been ruled off the tracks in connection with the alleged betting coup at Pimlico last May 7, on a horse entered as Bye Bye Will.

In reversing the decision of the commission and assuring Malone a new hearing, Judge O'Dunne said it was the duty of that body to ascertain whether or not perjury had been committed. If so, proper action would be taken by the State's attorney.

The reversal was on the ground that the commission had taken unsworn testimony and statements by telephone against Malone and had refused to reopen the case in order that he might submit sworn affidavits and testimony concerning the same issues.

The judge said: "If that can be sanctioned, there is no need of a statute giving the commission power to hold hearings and swear witnesses to testify under pain of prosecution for perjury."

Involves Only Malone

The new hearing of the case will involve only Malone, it is understood. The commission, in barring Malone, also ruled off Dr. M. R. Schwartz, owner of Bye Bye Will, and James King, said to have been trainer. They have taken no court action.

The commission barred Malone, trainer of a 4-year-old gelding named Uallno on the theory that this horse was shipped from New York to Maryland, raan as a "ringer" for Bye Bye Will, and was then shipped back to New York.

Yesterday Jackey Gilbert testified that he told the commission that he had not ridden the horse on the day of the "ringer" incident because he had been warned that he would be ruled off if he did so.

Horse "Not Fired"

Gilbert, John Sweet, a former groom, and a New York veterinary, told the court that Uallno, Malone's charge, had not ben "fired" and had none of the scars that come from using a hot iron to strengthen weak tendons. Bye Bye Will was first put under suspicion because of such scars.

Dr. William P. Collins, Washington veterinary, acting for the Maryland commission, examined Bye Bye Will directly after the race and also is alleged to have looked over Uallno in New York. He had reported to the commission that both horses had been "fired."

Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the Maryland body, took the stand today and denied that after getting telephone testimony he had turned to Malone and said, "Now I've got you, Malone."

The trainer had testified yesterday that Spencer made this statement.

'Skins Polish Offensive for Dodger Tilt

Drill Despite Rain
Expect Free Scoring
Baugh Limbers Up
Foe Has Kicking Edge

Fearing the potency of Brooklyn's forward-passing attack and the running threat personified by the Dodgers' Ace Parker, Head Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, polished his own offensive yesterday.

Anticipating a free-scoring game, the Redskins' boss routed his athletes into Griffith Stadium for a workout despite the wind and rain, and sent them through a long offensive drill.

"There's always one way to win a football game and that's to outscore the other club," said Flaherty. "I don't think one or two touchdowns will be enough for us Sunday at Brooklyn. We've got to click better than that."

So saying, the boss Redskin kept Sammy Baugh tossing passes in a seemingly endless display, and ran off the Redskins' running plays with Andy Farkas and Bill Hartman in the chief roles.

The pre-battle statistics are in favor of the Redskins who can show the better average in first downs, yards gained, passing and rushing, least opponents' gains and in pass defense.

Brooklyn has the better record in pass interceptions, distance of punts, runback of punts, least fumbles and least yards penalized.

The full statistics follow:

	Wash.	Brook.
Number of games	6	6
First downs	80	51
Yards gained, rushing	879	661
Yds., forward passes	936	607
Yards laterals	0	7
Total yards gained	1815	1270
Forward passes	116	111
Forwards completed	59	42
Passes intercepted by	12	14
Number of laterals	0	4
Laterals completed	0	4
Average distance punts	41	44
Yards runback, punts	237	303
Yards penalized	275	182
Fumbles	23	14
Opponents' fumbles recovered	1	8
Touchdown runs	10	4
Touchdown passes	6	4
PoinPoints after touchdowns	11	7
Field goals tried	3	11
Field goals made	2	3
Opponents' yards	1308	1740
Opponents' passes	134	131
Opponents' passes complete	51	63
Total points scored	113	70
Opponents' points	81	103

The Redskins can hardly match the Brooklyn club's punting. With Kercheval and Parker doing the booting for the Dodgers, Brooklyn will have a tremendous edge in that department over any Redskin kicker. Sammy Baugh's quick kicks have been the lone redeeming feature of the Redskins' booting this season.

Lewis Is Victor

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 28 (AP).—John Henry Lewis went full steam ahead in the final five rounds to pound New Haven's Al Gainer into submission and retain his world light-heavyweight title tonight. The Phoenix, Ariz., champion weighed 174, Gainer 4 pounds less.

Malone Visits Track; Gilbert Stays Away

Laurel, Md., Oct. 28.—Tom Malone, barred by the Maryland Racing Commission for alleged participation in the Bye Bye Will "ringer" case, visited the races here this afternoon shortly after a Baltimore judge had reversed the action of the turf solons. Malone talked to track detectives, but was not molested.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert was conspicuous by his absence. Despite a rumor that his testimony in reference to Marshall Cassidy, New York racing steward, had some connection with his not accepting mounts, the jockey's agent said that Gilbert had phoned him that inasmuch as he did not have any important assignments amtd the weather was bad, he did not want to ride.

Some Count, Paying $20.30, Captures Feature at Laurel

Grass Cutter Beats Out Bucking

Track Is Slow Foul Claim Mix-Up 'Double' Pays $57.20 5,000 See Races

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 28.—Mrs. Emil Denemark's Stone Count claimed by Trainer Willie Booth two weeks ago, sprang a surprise today when he drove from far back to win The Carney Purse, a test of a mile and 70 yards, serving feature purposes on a rainy day at this track. Answering the urging of Jockey Andy Schlenker, the Reigh Count colt was up in time to hang a half-length defeat on Grass Cutter, owned by George D. Widener. Third in the field of five was Joseph E. Widener's Bucking.

Some Count was overlooked in the betting and rewarded his supporters with a $20.30 mutuel. His time of 1:45 4-5 was fair, under the conditions. The track was slow as the result of the rain and he was running against the wind on the backstretch.

Less than 5,000 persons braved the miserable day to participate in the sport.

Some Count had all the appearances of "some bum" during the early running. He moved along sluggishly and was more than ten lengths from the first horse as the field went along the backstretch. Candle Ends was setting the pace with Grass Cutter close up.

Leaving the backstretch, Grass Cutter supplanted Candle Ends as the leader and the competition seemed to be over. However, Some Count began leveling and gained noticeably approaching the stretch. Jockey Schlenker knocked on him occasionally and he ran over horses. Inside the eighth pole he lunged forward to collar Grass Cutter and was opening a gap as the pair went across the wire.

The chief excitement of the day was just after the second race when Apprentice Lucas Dupps claimed a foul against Bain Marie. Dupps, who rode Whichaway, claimed that Bain Marie cut him off in the stretch. The electric board indicated that the foul was against Bain Marie. Finally the lights went off and when they came on the numbers had been changed, but Whichaway was disqualified and not Bain Marie.

The stewards announced that Whichaway had impeded Vassar when he swung out entering the stretch and that Bain Marie was within her rights in coming over on the rail in the stretch because she was more than a length clear of her rival.

Vassar moved into second money as the result of the ruling and Sachem came up from fourth to third position. Bain Marie was a $3.70 favorite.

A pair of fair priced horses figured in the $57.20 mutuel in the daily double. General Mowlee, bred by Alan Clark at the nearby Hunting Farm, took the first race at an $8.40 mutuel. The Shandon Farm's Top Staff put the finishing touches on the transaction in the third race, triumphing at a $16.40 mutuel.

Passers

practice, just throw the ball and the game away when the opposition bears down on them. Poise—coolness—when they're coming at you. That's what makes or breaks the passer. Of course, you've got to have good receivers and protection, too, or you don't get anywhere."

Did Sam find it more difficult to complete passes in the professional game than at college? Yes—he discovered that usually you've got to get the ball away faster, because the tempo of the pro game is stepped up. And that's in spite of better protection and better receivers. "They come through at the passer awfully fast in the professional game," he concluded.

Benny, Sam and Sid, current passing sensations with Columbia, all rose to fame by tossing the ball. Yet they are entirely different in physical appearance—except for their dark hair. Friedman is a middle-sized, compact chap with big, wide hands. Baugh is extremely tall, with the longer slender hands of a pianist. Luckman ranges between them in height and compactness, and Sid's hands are the smallest of the three—although wider than Sam's.

GENERAL MOWLEE sent to contention at once, disposed of PROSIT to take command and withstood bid of PART ONE and was drawing out nearing stretch while under drive. PART ONE lacked early speed, moved up approaching stretch, but could not stay with winner while under strong handling. BUD'S KING improved position gradually from start. SHALL WE DANCE went close up on inside from start, but weakened in final quarter. PROSIT quit after setting early pace. The others were outrun.

BAIN MARIE, rated along close to PATSEY BEGONE and VASSAR, went around them to get to front leaving backstretch, drew clear, but lugged in, shutting off WHICHAWAY in midstretch and held away thereafter. WHICHAWAY improved position steadily, bore out and bumped VASSAR turning into stretch for which he was disqualified. VASSAR ran PATSEY BEGONE into submission and was tiring when impeded by WHICHAWAY. SACHEM was never dangerous. WHY TARRY was outrun. PATSEY BEGONE stopped after a half.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP STAFF, $16.40, $6.40, $3.20; BALLOTER, $4.50, $3.10; GUYENCOURT, $5.40.

TOP STAFF, off alertly and kept close to pace, took lead approaching stretch, drew out, but had to be put to extreme pressure to stave off closing bid of BALLOTER. Latter, taken up when in close quarters at first turn, improved position gradually on outside and closed with bold rush under intermittent punishment. GUYENCOURT was rushed to front at once, set pace for half, but weakened gradually thereafter. RODIN was forwardly placed, but began dropping back after a half. SOARING HIGH had speed for a quarter and stopped. The others were not prominent.

Daily Double, General Mowlee and Top Staff, Paid $57.20.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:11½. Off 3:12. Winner, Mrs. R. Denemark's b. m. (5), by Genie—Sun Palatine. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENIE PALATINE, $4.10, $2.70, $2.50; SLUMP, $2.70, $2.30; CAREFUL MISS, $2.70.

GENIE PALATINE, hustled to front at once and rated while setting pace, was shaken up approaching end and barely lasted. SLUMP was carried slightly wide at first turn, moved up on winner gradually in stretch and closed gamely. CAREFUL MISS was allowed to drop out of it in early stages and closed full of run. TRINA was never dangerous. BROWN KNIGHT saved a mile and three-quarters.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:42. Off 3:45. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's ch. c. (3), by Reigh Count—In Bounds. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOME COUNT, $20.30, $5.40, $4.50; GRASS CUTTER, $3.00, $2.60; BUCKING, $7.60.

SOME COUNT, allowed to settle into best stride and badly outrun in early stages, responded willingly when shaken up leaving backstretch and came with a bold rush to win going away. GRASS CUTTER disposed of CANDLE ENDS to get to front leaving backstretch, drew clear, but lugged in, shutting off WHICHAWAY in midstretch and held away thereafter. WHICHAWAY improved position steadily, bore out and bumped VASSAR turning into stretch for which he was disqualified. VASSAR ran PATSEY BEGONE into submission and was tiring when impeded by WHICHAWAY. SACHEM was never dangerous. WHY TARRY was outrun. PATSEY BEGONE stopped after a half.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:11½. Off 4:14. Winner, Shandon Farms' br. f. (4), by Sun Flag—Smacker. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY ELSIE, $10.20, $5.00, $3.40; PLEA, $3.60, $2.90; GAURISANKAR, $4.70.

MY ELSIE, not hurried in early stages, swung out to improve position at far turn, took command with bold rush, drew out and won in hand. PLEA was hard used running with MOON HARVEST in early stages and closed willingly. GAURISANKAR was blocked while making move at far turn, came to inside and closed full of run. MOON HARVEST was used up setting and pressing pace under hustling tactics. HERMOSILLO had speed for a half and stopped. The others were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:42. Off 4:43½. Winner, J. C. Metz's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONTRAST, $6.80, $3.00, $2.50. JOBAKHETA, $5.10, $3.70; LONE HAND, $2.60.

CONTRAST, close up to backstretch, went to front when urged approaching stretch and opened a gap to win easily. JOBAKHETA, taken off pace when outrun by DIGNITARY, came willingly under intermittent punishment in closing stages. LONE HAND, outrun in early stages, hung to outside after getting to contention. DIGNITARY was used up setting pace and weakened. SYLVIA G. went evenly. VICKSON stopped.

Capital Transit Reduces Loss For September

Deficit Is $3,170 $13,088 a Year Ago Nine Months' Net Up

The Capital Transit Co. in its monthly statement to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday reported a September net loss of $3,-170.11, which compares with a net loss of $13,088.14 for the same month last year, making a net increase of $9,918.03, or 75.8 per cent.

Operating revenue last month totaled $865,367.69, which compares with $864,695.12 for the corresponding period a year ago, an increase 0.1 per cent. Operating expenses for the month amounted to $659,972.55 and for the 1937 month were $660,-158.92. Operating income was $21,-090.01, compared with $42,558.67 a year ago, a decrease of 50.4 per cent. Gross income totaled $56,919.78 for the month, which compares with $45,104.87 for the same month last year, an increase of 26.2 per cent.

For the first nine months of this year net income reported was $154,-931.80, which compares with $71,-870.46 for the same period last year, an inorease of 115.6 per cent.

Potomac Electric Power Co.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported a net income for September of $326,063.39, which compares with $392,153.43 for the corresponding month last year, a decrease of 16.85 per cent. Operating revenues for the month were $1,227,689.63, as compared with $1,-208,482.51 for September, 1937, an increase of 1.59 per cent.

Net operating revenues totaled $424,408.55 last month and $471,424.61 for the same month a year ago, a decrease of 9.97 per cent. Gross income amounted to $424,661.87 for the month, which compares with $474,-744.09 for the corresponding month last year, a decrease of 10.55 per cent.

For the nine-month period ended September 30 net income was $3,-223,093.24 and for the first nine months last year net income totaled $3,704,655.60, a decrease of 13 per cent. Net operating revenues for the period amounted to $4,076,-689.52, which compares with $4,-395,687.41 for the corresponding 1937 period, a decrease of 7.26 per cent.

C. & P. Telephone Co.

Charles A. Robinson, general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., reported yesterday that operating revenues of the company for September were $940,677, and that operating expenses were $686,362. Operating revenues in September a year ago were $893,434, and operating expenses were $661,605. Taxes for the month amounted to $89,013, as compared with $77,879 in September, 1937, and interest deductions were $36,436, leaving a balance before dividend of $133,463, or $4,089 less than in September, 1937. There were 234,605 telephones in service at the end of September, 1938, which was an increase of 2,337 telephones over the previous month. Telephone users in Washington made 26,390,000 calls during the month, or 1,808,000 more than in September, 1937.

Washington Gas Light Co.

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shown operating revenues of $476,821 for September as compared with $453,914 for September a year ago, or an increase of $22,-907. Operating expenses increased $11,301 from $434,114 in September last year to $445,415 this September. This results in a net operating revenue of $31,407 or $11,607 more than for the same month last year. The net result of the month's operation after all deductions for interest and amortization was a usual September deficit amounting to $45,-133, which, however, is $8,685 more favorable than that for September 1937. Notwithstanding this seasonal loss, the company reports a net income for the first nine months of $553,881, compared with $458,959 for the same period last year.

N. Y. Exchange Will Control All Partners

New York, Oct. 28.—The board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange at its meeting yesterday adopted amendments to the constitution which will require all nonmember general partners in member firms to become allied members of the exchange, directly subject to exchange control and discipline, by January 1, 1939.

The creation of this new class of allied members will eliminate difficulties, with resultant possible injustices, which have confronted the exchange in the past, due to limitation of its direct disciplinary power to partners holding actual membership.

Allied members will not be subject to initiation fees or dues, and will have no interest in the property of the exchange, no rights on the floor, no vote in connection with exchange affairs, no right to reduced commissions and no rights in the gratuity fund. The privileges which will be enjoyed by allied members are the same as presently enjoyed by non-member general partners of member firms, privileges which they now enjoy without the assumption of any direct responsibility to the exchange.

Radio Corp. Votes 20 Cents on Common

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Directors of Radio Corporation of America today ordered a dividend of 20 cent a share on the common stock, the second common dividend in the history of the corporation.

The only previous payment was the same amount on December 31 last year at a time when the company also cleared up all arrears on its preferred stock. The latest dividend is payable December 14 to holders of record November 7.

Rain Relief Forces Wheat Prices Down

Closing ⅜-1 Cent Off Light Export Demand Corn Also Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Sprinkles giving at least some moisture relief to various districts in Kansas and Nebraska brought about 1¼ cents maximum drop of Chicago wheat prices today. Adding to the downturn were indications that frosts in Argentina had done no damage to crops. Besides, export demand for North American grains today was negligible.

Word that an export tax affecting all grains had been decreed by the Argentine government had only a transient stimulating influence on values here.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were ⅜ to 1 cent lower, compared with yesterday's finish; December, 65@65⅛; May, 66½@65⅝; corn, ⅛ to ¾ down; December, 45⅛; May, 48⅝@48¾; oats, ⅛ to ¼ off; rye showing ⅝ to ¾ fall, and provisions, 2 to 7 cents setback.

Siam Sells Silver To Buy U. S. Gold

By the Associated Press.

The United States Treasury found in Siam yesterday its first customer for gold in nearly a year. The Siamese Legation said that large quantities of Siamese silver coin was being shipped to San Francisco for sale to the United States Treasury and the proceeds would be used to buy gold from the Treasury. Although the legation here had no estimate of the total amount involved, the Commerce Department reported yesterday that $3,791,285 in silver arrived in San Francisco last week. The Siamese transaction gives the United States an outlet for part of its unprecedented gold hoard now totalling $14,050,981,607.

Van Zeeland Sees U. S. as Ray of Hope

Endicott, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Pointing to the United States as one ray of hope in solving present day world difficulties, Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, former Premier of Belgium, addressed a group of 450 civic and business leaders yesterday as well as sales and service students of International Business Machines Corporation at the company's schoolhouse here.

Dr. Van Zeeland stated that his main reason for hope in the future lay in the increasing influence being felt throughout the world of the role which the United States is playing in the field of diplomacy. "I know what wide moral influence has been exerted throughout the world," he said, "by the recent messages of President Roosevelt and the righteousness and the force of the diplomatic positions taken by this country.

"It is a comforting thought, he added, "that there is in the world a country of 130,000,000 people who resolutely adhere to the principles of liberty, respect for the individual, fairness to others, harmonious co-existence of freedom and equality, love for the fatherland, and esteem for neighbors."

Cotton Gains With Buying In Last Hour

December, 8.53 Cents Spot Position Firm Covering Appears

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Cotton turned firm in the last hour today after narrow and irregular changes earlier. Trade buying and covering in near months revealed a scarcity of contracts, as December sold up from 8.46 to 8.55, and closed at 8.53. Fnal prices were 5 points net higher to 1 point lower.

The market opened with orders about evenly balanced. After midday, forward months showed a tendency to sag under hedging, but when near months displayed steadiness, local suport appeared in December and March. Wall Street buying developed as December broke above the recent resistance point at 8½ cents. Firmness of the spot cotton situation in the South as a result of the cotton loan program and dwindling certificated stock for delivery against futures contracts made near month trade shorts nervous.

I. B. M. Profits Rise Over Last Year

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—International Business Machines Corporation reported today net earnings for the nine months ended September 30 of $7,612,859 after deducting blocked foreign net profits of $572,-258. This was equal to $7.43 a share on capital stock and compared with net income of $7,151,706, or $7.28 a share, in first nine months of last year.

Indicated profit for the three months ended September 30 was $2,032,056, or $2.49 a share, compared with $1,939,133, or $2.35 a share, in the preceding quarter and $1,992,647, or $2.44 a share, in the third quarter last year.

London, Oct. 28.—The stock market closed the week today with a steady tone. Transatlantic securities and British government issues held around their previous closing levels and metals became more active in late dealings. West African gold mining stocks were in demand while rubbers and oils remained quiet. Brewery issues lasted easier on fears of higher taxes. Foreign bonds were easier, Czech liens declining 1 to 2 points.

Paris—Trading in the bourse continued small and price movements were mixed today. Rentes finished 10 centimes up to 105 lower and Royal Dutch and Bank of France issues were fractionally down. Suez Canal shares gained about 50 francs.

Liverpool—Liquidation and hedging was absorbed by local buying on the decline in cotton today, and final prices were unchanged to 2 points lower. A good inquiry developed for cotton goods at Manchester. Wheat futures rallied from their earlier low prices and finished unchanged to ¾d up. Frost reports from parts of Argentine and an improved demand for Manitoba and Australian grain were factors on the advance.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Oct. 28 (AP).—Fine domestic wools were fairly active today on the Boston market. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags were bringing 66 to 68 cents, scoured basis, mostly near the high side of this range. Fine delaine bright fleece wool was sold at prices within the range 29@31 cents, in the grease, depending upon satin/blanket, with scoured basis prices ranging 72@75 cents. Clothing length fine bright fleeces brought 23@25 cents in the grease.

The Timid Soul

Bob Burns Says—

I may be wrong, but it always seemed to me like my folks are jest a little closer together than other people. Maybe it's because they was always so poor. It looks like the poorer a couple is, the more they understand each other.

I was talkin' to a wealthy heiress out here not long ago who had married a foreign nobleman. Neither one of 'em could speak a word of the other one's language. When I asked her how in the world they could understand each other well enough to want to get married, she said, "Oh, that was easy—we had a perfect understanding. He showed me his family tree and I showed him my bank book!"

Fairfax Votes To Purchase School Site

2 Projects Approved Home Group Elects Scouts to Celebrate

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The Fairfax County School Board yesterday voted to purchase a site for the Dunn Loring-Idylwood-Merrifield elementary school and decided on additions at the Herndon School.

Both projects are part of the county-wide $375,000 school building program now under way, financed by a PWA grant of $169,000 and a State literary loan. The site selected by the board for the proposed school contains 4.61 acres on the Merrifield-Dunn Loring road about half way between the two car lines. The proposed building, to cost about $50,000, will contain four or five classrooms and auditorium. The location was decided upon after an inspection of sites by members of the board and a survey of the area to be served by the new school. The purchase price was $400 an acre.

The board voted to install a central heating plant in the Herndon School and add a classroom, provided the cost does does not exceed $18,810, which is a $10,000 State literary loan and the PWA matching grant of $8,810. Herndon citizens had urged the board to appropriate this amount for this school for the heating plant and a commercial room for the high school, which is somewhat larger than the tentative plan approved by the county board yesterday. It is estimated that heating plant and room as approved by the board will cost about $14,000. The balance of the allotment for Herndon could be used to make up the deficit at other schools where the lowest bid has exceeded the allotments.

Earman Honored

Millard Earman has been elected president and Frank Earman, secretary-treasurer of the Legion Rifle Club recently organized among students of Madison and Jefferson School, Falls Church, under auspices of American Legion Post No. 130. J. St. Clair Cooke is instructor and Maj. Alexander Galt, range officer. The boys will receive instruction in the care of firearms as well as supervised target practise. The course has been approved by the National Rifle Association, which certified the instructors.

Falls Church Post today will be presented with the National Community Service Citation at the State conference in Lynchburg, according to Commander William Covington. The Post will co-operate in the observance of legion week November 4 to 11, ending with the Armistice Dance November 10 in Masonic Hall and the ceremonies November 11 in Arlington.

Alexandria Homes Tour Ends Today

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,

The climax of the tour of old homes in Alexandria yesterday afternoon and today is the exhibit of heirlooms in the parish hall of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Here may be seen rare silver, wrought by the silversmiths of the early days of Alexandria, Adam, Burnet, Cohen and Duffey; also glass that was used by such families as the Alexanders, Lloyds, Lees, founders of the city; dresses that graced Nellie Custis, Mrs. Nathaniel Holmes and others of the 1770's, and a coat worn by Thomas Jefferson; a quaint doll carriage that has been in the Lambert family for more generations than the present owner can remember; the huge silver loving cup the Virginia delegation in the Congress of the United States presented to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt when she was married to President Woodrow Wilson.

Articles that stand out in the wonderful collection are a silver loving cup presented by the mayor and council of Alexandria to Mrs. Elizabeth Lawrison in appreciation of her courtesy in lending her home, at 301 South St. Asaph street, to Gen. Lafayette and his suite when they were the guests of the City of Alexandria in October, 1824. The cup is now the property of Mrs. Donald Hamilton, of Washington, a direct descendant of Mrs. Lawrison. A prayer book that belonged to Martha Washington, with her name inscribed on the fly-leaf, and left by her to her granddaughter, Mrs. Brittania Kennon, of Tudor place, Georgetown, and left by her to her grandson, Canon G. Freeland Peter, of the Washington Cathedral.

A beautiful old gown of silk brocade, worn in 1774 by Mrs. Nathaniel Holmes, wife of the chairman of the Boston Tea Party. It came down in direct line to Miss Esther Fowle Brookes from her great-great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Esther Jane Fowle, wife of William Fowle, of 711 Prince street, Alexandria, a home still in possession of a member of the family.

Miss Brookes has also lent a beautiful sword, the property of Maj. Benjamin Brookes, of Maryland, 1789-1826, and one of the charter members of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Mrs. Franklin Kenworthy, of near Purcellville, the former Mrs. William Morgan Smith, of Alexandria, will bring today a lap desk belonging to Thomas Jefferson, and on which he drafted the Declaration of Independence.

The tour was on from 1 to 5 p. m. yesterday, and was visited by less than 200 persons, owing to the rain, and today the homes will be open from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m., ending with tea in St. Paul's Church rectory, the residence of the Rev. and Mrs. Ernest Auguste de Bordenave. Mrs. Charles Henry Smith and Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard are hostesses for the tea.

Board Entertained

Mrs. Walter DuBois Brookings entertained the executive board of the Alexandria-Arlington Woman's Christian Temperance Union at luncheon yesterday at her home, Menokin, Seminary Hill. Ghest of honor was Mrs. Amy C. Weech, of Washington, recently elected president of the Virginia State W.C.T.U.

F. X. Northrup Dies

Francis X. Northrup, 83, died Thursday night at his home 714 Duke street. He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Mary Ficklin Northrup; three sons, W. L., A. D. and D. S. Northrup, and a daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand Plitt.

Mr. Northrup was born in Charleston, S. C., and lived for many years in Orange and Charlottesville, Va. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and members of that organization held a meeting last night at his home.

The funeral will be at 9:30 o'clock this morning from St. Mary's Catholic Church, and burial will be in St Mary's Cemetery.

N. A. Milburn Rites Today

Funeral services for Norman A. Milburn, 58, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. from the Demaine funeral home, 817 King street, conducted by the Rev. M. S. White, of Washington. Burial will be in St. Paul's Cemetery.

He was a former resident of this city, the son of the late Stephen and Alice B. Milburn, and died Thursday in New York City. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. A. M. Allen, of Washington, and Mrs. Nicholas Moore, of Atlanta, Ga.
